Stricken Cities of Sicily to be Abandoned

MESSINA IS NOW DESERTED

Only Soldiers And Sailors There Removing Dead

Messina, Jan. 2—The town is almost deserted, only soldiers and sailors are to be seen here while the dead bodies, which are being taken from the fallen buildings, bear mute witness of horrible sufferings of the victims. Several had gnawed at their hands and arms. Other had portions of shawls and other clothing in their mouths. One woman had her teeth fixed firmly in the leg of a dead baby.

TOWNS DESTROYED

Rome, Jan. 2—The American gunboat Scorpion will arrive at Messina on Monday. She like other foreign vessels will be used to transport refugees from the affected district. Returing from the Calabrian coast, north of Reggio, King Victor sent a message to the premier, stating that Cannitello and Villa Sangiovanni are both completely destroyed. Almost all the people of Messina and Reggio, it is said, have made up their minds to abandon their cities. Pope Pius has made another gift of $200,000 to the relief fund. The pontiff has never so regretted the loss of the liberty he enjoyed as patriarch of Venice as he does at present.

STREAMS POISONED

Paris, Jan. 2—The Figaro correspondent at Rome declares his earlier estimate of 150,000 dead was too conservative, and says now that it is estimated 200,000 have already perished and the worst is not known. He says that tremblings of the earth continue and that at times boiling water bursts from crevasses. The sources of all streams, he says, are polluted and poisoned with putrid matter.

QUEEN INJURED

Rome Jan. 2—Queen Helena, was slightly injured at Messina by a shock of earthquake which threw the patients at the hospital into a panic. Her majesty was close by and hurried to try and allay the fears of the people. She was caught in the rush the patients were making and sustained slight injuries.

SENSATION IN DIVORCE CASE

Cruel Treatment on Part of Husband

Media, Jan. 2—Mrs. Florence Erb, accused with her sister, Miss Catherine Beisel, of the murder of Mrs. Erb's husband, took the stand today and told a sensational story of cruelty on the part of her husband as one of the causes leading up to the shooting of Captain Erb. Among the cruelties she recounted were his dragging her about by her hair, throwing her to the floor and beating her, threatening her life with a revolver, spitting in her face, bending her over a Davenport and pressing her on the stomach with his knee until she cried for mercy, calling her names and threatening to "spread eagle" her. On this occasion she says he struck her on her chin with his fist, driving her teeth through her tongue. Mrs. Erb told of mistreatment of her sister, and on one of these occasions when she thought he was about to kill her sister she hit him over the head with a whisky bottle and ran believing she had killed him.

Mrs. Erb says the night the killing occurred she and her sister went to a hotel after an altercation with Erb. Late at night Mrs. Erb went back, going to the second story by the rear stairs. Erb was watching for her and struck his wife on the breast. She fought him and finally secured a brass cuspidor and threw it at him. She ran to her room and Erb followed, cursing. She says when Erb was almost upon her she grabbed a vase and hurled it at him then she got in the room and locked the door. She telephoned for her sister and when she came she went to the bathroom. Her sister came out of the bath room just as Erb left his room, carrying a revolver. She says Erb aimed the weapon at her exclaiming: "I'll get rid of you now." Mrs. Erb screamed and ran into her room and her sister flew at her husband and Mrs. Erb heard sounds of scuffling, followed by shots. When all was quiet she looked out of the room and saw her husband lying on his face and her sister unconscious beside him. When his wife finished the story she broke down and broke into tears and wept bitterly.

SCHOOL CONTROL BY ONE BOARD

All State Institutions Under Same Regents

Salem, Or., Jan. 2—A bill has been prepared and will be introduced in the next legislature to place all the educational institutions of the state under a single board of regents. If such a law is enacted it will mean that the same board of regents will have jurisdiction over the affairs of the normal schools, the agricultural college and the University of Oregon. The measure will probably be introduced by Representative Libby of Marion county.

The law as thoroughly discused by the normal school board of regents at the annual meeting and has been framed up under the supervision of the executive committee of that body. Superintendent Ackerman and Governor Chamberlain are among its staunch supporters.

The principal argument advanced by those who favor such a plan is one of economy. It is argued that a single board of regents of not more than five members, carefully selected as to their qualifications, each directing a certain department after the cabint plan, will save more to the state within a year than possibly any other reform. There would be a uniformity in conducting the schools, and a system that would revolve a great number of now unforseen advantages.

CONGRESS WILL BE LIBERAL

In Providing for Italian Earthquake

Washington, Jan. 2—Congress will on Monday appropriate $500,000 for the relief of the Italian earthquake sufferers. Both houses will receive a special message from the president recommending the granting of this sum. Then the two bodies will vie with each other in the speedy passage of the relief measure.

FEW AMERICANS KILLED

Rome, Jan. 2—There is no news of deaths of any Americans, except American Consul Cheney and family have been received Vice Consul Lupton is safe. An Italian, who has resided for 40 years in Messina, says he is confident there were no Americans in Messina at the time of the disaster.

WORM IS EATING MUCH TIMBER

Boring Grub Has Cost the Weyerhaeusers Dear

Tacoma, Jan. 2—Cruisers of the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company have just discovered that 3,000 acres of fire-killed timber has been so eaten by worms that it is worthless and will be allowed to rot where it stands. The tract is on the head waters of the south fork of the Lewis river, in Clarke county, and was killed in the great forest fires that swept over different parts of Washington six years ago.

The cruisers estimate that the 3,000 acres had in excess of 30,000 feet to the acre, and the Weyerhaeusers estimate that they have lost 100,000,000 feet of fine-bodied timber, worth where it stands $1.50 per M. Immediately following the fire the company began elaborate logging operations to save as much of the fire-blasted timber as possible. Notwithstanding their most presistent efforts they could not reach the tract in question. The worm that is proving its destruction is a large-sized timber grub. It is a champion borer, from all accounts, making a hole through the tree nearly a half an inch in diameter and keeping busy. Green timber is protected from its ravages either by some secretion in the sap of the tree or some quality inhering in the timber.

The Weyerhaeusers find they have lost from 25 to 30 per cent of the dead timber they have been cutting. This comes from the breaking of the tops of the trees when they fall, due primarily to there being no green branchs to break the force of the impact when the tree strikes the ground, and also to the sap of the fire-killed tree being a dead loss.

NOTED PRIEST DIES SUDDENLY

Father John of Cronstadt Expired Today

St. Petersburg, Jan. 2—Father John of Cronstadt, the noted priest, died suddenly at that place today He had been suffering from an intestinal complaint for some time and, tho not unexpected the end was sudden. Father John was born Nov 30, 1829. As a priest at Cronstad this zeal and devotion drew about him of late hosts of followers and attracted the attention of the emperor, who constantly befriended him. Of late years, his life had been clouded by the ill repute of a sect of Johnites, which was exploited by a group of unscrupulous and immoral men and women to their great advantage. The priest's eyes were opened to this only last summer, when he anathematized the false leaders.

D. M.C . D. LEAP YEAR PARTY

The prettiest dancing party ever given in Astoria was held by the members of the D. M. C. D. club at the Astoria Amateur Athletic Association ball room Wednesday evening of this week. The leap year party was much talked of for weeks in advance and all those who attended were given a great surprise at the beautiful and excellent arrangement for this holiday event. The leap year dance given last February by the club members was a very pretty affair but the party Wednesday eclipsed the former. The same rules were in vogue as formerly in regard to the ladies inviting the gentlemen; instead of the gentlemen securing the dances it was the ladies privilege, and also hers to escort the gentlemen about the ball room. When the dancing began at Nine o'clock there were one hundred and twenty couples on the floor. The decorations were without doubt the pretties and best arranged ever attempted, the colors being red and green and consisting of garlands of evergreen draped over head across the room, and suspending from the ceiling, thru the garlands were large red paper bells and various sizes of red paper balls that made a most bewitching effect. The programs were offered as souvenirs of the occasion and the covers were hand painted by the members of the club each bearing the initials of the particular painter. During the evening punch was served. Every one enjoyed the twenty-four dances. At the conclusion of the fourteenth dance a complete surprise was introduced and, as a novelty for such a party, it was one of the prettiest of its kind; entitled the ladies' grand march. All the lights were turned out and one hundred and nineteen ladies with chinese lanterns over their shoulders marched about the hall to the tune "I wish I had a Girl," at the conclusion of the march the ladies were presented with bracelets of small bells to be given to their next favored partner. One of the noticible attractions of this charming affair was the many beautiful party dresses which added to the completness of one of the brigthest and happiest events of 1908. The young ladies of the D. M. C. D. club can well feel proud of their social success and their Wednesday evening party will long be remembered by all those who had the honor of being present. The patronesses were: Mrs. H. L. Kingth, Mrs. J. J. Utzinger, and Mrs. E. L. Lowe. The members of the club are as follows:

* * *

The members of the D. M. C. D. club with their guests held their annual Christmas party on Tuesday evening of last week at the home of Miss Mary Fossett, where Sir Thomas Lipton led the blushing Miss 1908 to the marriage altar. At nine o'clock to the beautiful strains of the wedding march rendered by the Master Paderweski, the bride attended by her matron of honor Mrs. Alice Longworth and the charming little grand daughter of W. J. Bryan, who acted as flower girl, entered on the arm of Andrew Carneige who gave the bride away, the Hon. John Jacob Astor acting as groomsman awaited the bridal party before the "Little Minis." The ceremony was a most impressive one and the clear faltering responses of the contracting parties were heard distinctly. The little page bore the tiny golden circlet on a pillow designed and presented by the United States government for this occasion. The stately bride was attired in an exquisit gown and the bridal vail of gossamer texture was a family heirloom. She carried a shower boquet of leap year roses, the rare blossoms of which are only obtainable once in four years. The matron of honor wore a dream creation of duchess lace over pink with court train, and carried a boquet of tea roses that were presented by the groom and raised in his own hot house. The little page and flower girl preceeded the bride, scattering rose leaves and petals during the wedding march with reckless prodigility. The ushers were guards from his Majesty's army who came to America to participate in this ceremony a few weeks ago. The gift of the bridegroom to the bride was a beautiful diamond studded necklace and Sir Thomas also had the famous Lipton Jewels reset in a maginficient tiara which was grealy admired, and was guarded, two detectives being detailed from Scotland yards for that purpose. Among the noted guests who attended the wedding were Count Boni de Castallane, Christine Nielson, Rear Admiral Sperry and President Theodore Roosevetl. After the reception the guests were dined in old English Christmas style and the happy couple were showered with the best wishes as they left on their famous yacht for a prolonged honeymoon to the tea gardens of Japan. Sir Thomas and Lady Lipton will receive their friends at their ancestrial home on April 1, 1909.

Mrs. Martin Foard entertained on Thursday afternoon in honor of her daughter Mrs. William Campbell Smith of Tacoma who is spending the holidays with her parents.

"THE GREAT DIVIDE"

At last we are to see "The Great Divide," unquestionably the most strikingly original dramatic success an American playwright has yet achieved. This is welcome news to all lovers of really good drama, for no play in the history of the American stage has won so large a measure of artistic, as well as financial success, as has this peturiesque and beautifully written drama of virile American life from the pen of William Vughn Moody "The Great Divide" has been hailed by many of the leading dramatic reviewers as "the long awaited great American play." The management of the Astoria theatre are to be congratulated upon securing this splendid attraction. The play will be presented under the direction of the distinguished actor-manager, Henry Miller, on Friday Jan. 8, with a superb company, and the entire production, with the complete scenic equipment precisely as presented during the recent engagement of over 500 performance in New York City.

STOCK AT BAKERONIAN

Commencing Monday January 11, the Donald Stock company will inaugurate a season of two weeks at the Bakeronian with a stricty first class stock company. The aggregation is headed by Victor J. Donald as manager. The opening play will be the rural comedy drama "Just Plain Folks" with popular prices.

IMPORTANT NEWS FOR CLOTHING BUYERS

Get ready; be in the crowd. Once every year there is an event in merchandising that is worthy of public approval. That is the Annual Clearing Sale of Danziger & Co, Astoria's Greatest Clothier. The big establishment begins each January just before invoice, to clear off all fall and winter goods at prices that bring trade to Astoria for miles around. They go at things with a sharp price knife and cut prices out of semblance to values. This year Mr. Danziger bought at San Francisco from a big wholesale house retiring from business, several thousand dollars worth of fine suits, pants overcoats and cravenetts at such a low price for spot cash, that Astoria will enjoy a bargain picnic worth a good deal to the consumer. Every department in the big store is cut wide open. No favorites played only on contract goods that is such goods as are bought from makers under contract to be sold at certain price. The sale begins at 9 a. m. Saturday January 2, 1909 and lasts for two weeks. Don't let any thing keep you away. You will not be disappointed in styles, qualities quanity or terrific lots in prices.

ASK AID FOR STRICKEN ITALY

Mayor Appeals to Astorians to Donate Funds

Mayor Wise has issued an appeal to the citizens of Astoria urging them to donate whatever sums they are able to assist the stricken peope of Italy and Sicily. The appeal is as follows:

To the People of Astoria:

Italy is in mouring because of a terrible earthquake and tidal wave which has resulted in the loss of over 100,000 lives, the distruction of a vast amount of property and the bereavement of many millions of people. The human heart of the world goes out in sympathy to this stricken people but sympathy alone, howevermuch appreciated, fails to supply food, medicine and shelter which those helpless ones are so sorely in need of. The people of all civilized nations and in many cities are busy raising the necessary means by which these essentials may be supplied.

We of Astoria are in the midst of plenty and surrounded by our loved ones who have with us the pleasures of the new year, let us not forget those who are in such pitiful straits.

Incidentally, we should also remember the courtesies extended to us by the commander of the royal Italian warship "Dogali" upon the occasion of the 12th annual Regatta nor should we forget how Italy has aided American cities in times of distress. Therefore I, have the honor to urge our citizens to show their sympathy by donating such sums as their means will allow.

The cashiers of the several banks Astoria will undoubtedly consent to receive relief contributions, which will be forwarded to the proper authorities. HERMAN WISE, Mayor.

FLORENCE RORESTS

Florence Roberts, whose position as a star is firmly fixed will appear at the Astoria theatre next Wednesday in a new play by Seymour Obermer entitled "The House of Bondage." In this production Miss Roberts will have the highly capable assistance of Arthur Forrest, Thurlow Bergen, Kent Bosworth, Harry Gibbs, Ann Warrington and Mary Bertrand. A correct and handsome setting is given the piece by John Cort, under whose direction Miss Roberts is again appearing. "The House of Bondage" has been particularly praised on account of its brilliant lines. It is declared to teem with smart epigrams and keen repartee. Mr. Obermer, too, has shown himself a master of stagecraft in his construction of situations and climaxes. At the close of the second act he has given Miss Roberts a scene in which she is offered opportunities for emotional acting, which excels anything he has heretofore attempted.

MAKING NEW NATIONAL PARK

Saddle Mountain in Clatsop County Under Consideration

If the bill now before congress becomes a law, Saddle Mountain about 17 miles south of Astoria and in Clatsop county, will become a national park.

This is the purpose of the measure introduced recently by Senator Fulton at the urgent request of many citizens who believe that this magnificent monument of nature should be preserved for the general benefit of the public for all time to come. No where in the great west is a more majestic peak standing to a height of 3420 feet above the level of the sea that would afford a more natural view of the mighty Pacific ocean, the grandure of the endless forests with its rock ribbed hills and mighty rivers flowing from all sides. As a national park it would be to the far west what the Yellowstone park is to the interior.

In this busy bustling world men sometimes forget what nature has provided for the health and happiness of its people. But there are still a few who take sufficient time to glance into the future and suggest ideas coupled with ways and means to provide the things in life that are most needed for the preservation of natures greatest gifts to man. The measure to create a national park at Saddle mountain was first drawn by Judge J. Q. A. Bowlby and since its introduction in congress it has caused much favorable comment. There are men living in Astoria who have known of its vast beauty and geographical location for the past century who can describe in minute detail every acre of ground it posesses. Among them is John Chitwood, a woodsman by nature and a pioneer of Clatsop county. In speaking of the movement to establish the district into a national park he said:

"I am glad to see steps being taken to have a national park made of Saddle mountain. When this is done it will be one of the grandest possessions of the government. To fully appreciate its beauty one must go where he can see. I have often thought of such a movement, but not until this year has it been placed in practical form. Saddle mountain and Humbug mountain, comprising in all about 6400 acres, could not be more admirably located for the purpose intended. The scenic beauties of the location cannot be surpassed and I am proud to say I have tramped over almost every foot of it. At the present time the location is easily accessible by the county road and the present right-of-way of the Nehalem railroad leads immediately between the two. Young's river, Lewis and Clark, the Necanicum, Humbug creek and various other streams find their source in these mountains and lend a splendid view from every point of the compass. Humbug mountain contains a volume of timber yet untouched save by the hand of nature while clear sparkling water, evergreens and flowers arein abundance. On Saddle mountain fire has ravished its hills in years gone by, but a second growth is appearing and in a short time will become as beautiful as tho it had never been disturbed. Saddle mountain has long been known as the home of the elk and deer. Its hills show traces of animals life unmistakable. Leading to the summit on the north side an elks trial switch backs fourteen times, a distance of several miles in the solid rock. This trail has been worn four feet deep and forms an convenient highway to the top of the mountain. Outside of its timber resources these mountains have no other commercial worth at the present time, but for national park purposes it would be a gift to the people of inestimable value.

James Smith was in town today buying supplies. He bought a coffee mill and will hereafter grind Folger's Golden Gate Coffee fresh as he uses it. He used to ask the grocer to grind it.

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.

I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

Mayor Wise, who at noon on next Monday, will lay aside the cares and duties of that office and turn the authority of the position over to his successor, has been one of the best chief executives Astoria has ever had. He returns to private life with assurances from all sides that he has fulfilled his duty faithfully as a public officer and carries with him the best of good will from each and every one of his constituents. Mr. Wise has served the city as mayor for nearly four years and during that time he was called upon to face several knotty problems that were difficult to solve and meant much to the good name and future welfare of the city. It was due in no small degree, to his firm stand, that the dancehalls were closed, that public gambling was checked and other reforms were inaugurated, thus removing from Astoria's good name a blot that had given her an unenviable reputation thruout the entire coast. Despite the determined opposition at the time, every one now, even his political opponents and the men whose business was directly affected by the order, heartily endorse the mayor's action and commend him for the stand he took in defense of decency and morality. To have filled the position of an honorary public office in a manner that has won the plaudits of the people irrespective of party or creed is a record of which any man might well feel proud. Such a record Mr. Wise will leave behind when he retires from the mayoralty on next Monday.

The American navy department acted promptly and wisely when it dispatched the navy supply ship Celtic to Messina with the millions of dollars worth of rations and supplies that were intended for the battleship fleet. It is great catastrophies like the one which has just occurred in Italy that call for generosity from nations as well as from individuals. On an occasion like that, supplies cannot be counted by the mere value of dollars and cents. They may be the means of alleviating suffering, of saving the lives of thousands of human beings, a result that is of more avail than all the wealth imaginable.

At noon on next Monday the new city administration that is to govern the municipal affairs during the coming two years will take hold of the reins of government. It will be headed by a man who has had extended experience in matter of city affairs and has shown, while he was city attorney, that he is a man who can be depended upon to guard the interests of the city and of the taxpayers. The members of the new council are all men who have made successes in business life, who are interested in seeing the city progress, in having improvements made so fast as possible commensurate with the means at hand and we bespeak for the coming administration the same zeal and energy for advancing the city's welfare and as well the same care and caution in carrying on the work as characterized the administration that now steps out. There is much to be done during the next two years and with a progressive mayor and council, who will work in harmony, there are many things which may be accomplished for the betterment of the entire community.

HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

The average girl is apt to think that the samples of manhood that come under her observation are not up to specifications and not what they are advertised to be.

It takes plenty of sand to get to be an aeronaut. Need it for ballast.

It is quite remarkable that when an American family gets a count settled in the family a lot of ac-counts, both large and small, immediately bob up and make a clambering that nothing but large American dollars will pacify.

Prosperity is now fashionable; but, like many other fashionable fads, some have not the wherewith to indulge.

It is time that some of us reflect that we ought to be thankful that we are thankful.

It is usually the people who don't know enough to go in after dark that give the police the most trouble.

Sometimes it seems that the more real, hard work a man does in the world the less it amounts to so far as he is concerned.

After all, Thanksgiving only serves to put us in fairly good trim for the merry Christmas festivities.

The employes of Ross, Higgins & Co. have presented to J. T. Ross a very handsome diamond ring. It is of old gold in the form of a lion's head with the diamond in its mouth and is unique in its manufacture. As it was entirely unexpected it was the more appreciated.

Southwest storm warnings were received this morning by Weather Observer Lamar from Weather Forecaster Beales with the information that it would be severe off the Oregon and Washington coasts with the wind being at a high velocity this afternoon and tonight.

The havy rains of the past few days are causing the ground to slide considerably in the section between Thirtieth and Thirty-fifth streets. It is expected that during the coming summer provision will be made for draining off the surface water in that district and carrying it to the river.

The sad news reached here this morning from Duluth that the three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Palmberg died there last night. Mr. Palmberg started for Duluth on Thursday night but will be unable to each there before Monday morning. A wire has been forwarded to him on his train telling him of his loss.

Running deer with dogs is unlawful at any time but out of season the crime is even worse in the eyes of the sportsman. Five men with a pack of seven dogs run a deer every Sunday in the section between the Walluski and Olney and often on other days of the week. It is reported that they get at least a couple of deer on every chase.

The football game of New Year's afternoon between the Astoria high school and Beaver teams was won by the former by a score of 9 to 7 and was excellent in spots. Kleck of the Beavers was the bright particular star, he being the great full of the Corvallis team and if it had not been for him the local team would have won by a much larger score.

Roseburg will pay the heaviest tax in its history for 1909. This will be from 30 to 35 mills, probably 32. The city council and school district have already assessed a 10-mill tax each, and this, added to the county and state tax, which will be approximately 10 mills, will bring he total up to 30 mills. Besides this, there is the road tax to be added. The absence of the saloons, which have heretofore contributed several thousand dollars to the city, is one of the reasons for the heavy city tax.

The newly elected mayor and members of the council will take their official seats at noon on Monday. The police commission will meet at 7 o'clock on Tuesday evening, when Commissioner Logan will take his seat and that body will organize by the election of a chairman. The date for organizing the new water commission has not yet been announced but it will probably be during the early part of next week. Technically speaking the other city officers will begin their terms at noon on Monday, but as all the present officers were re-elected there will be no changes and the only action necessary will be the filing of new bonds where required.

When the steam schooner Homer arrived in this morning from San Francisco her master, Captain Roberts, told the circumstances of his putting the three stowaways ashore at Drakes bay. He said that after leaving the Bay City he was notified that there were three stowaway boys on board, about 18 years of age, and he had them brought before him. Two of them appeared to be pretty well bred but the third, who was the spokesman, was a typical hoodlum and his action and language was the cause of all three being put ashore. They were given sufficient provisions to last them until they could reach the nearest town.

M. H. Gray, a plumber in the employ of J. A. Montgomery, was badly burned on Friday while repairing the acetelyne plant in the A. O. U. W. building. He believed that he had exhausted all the gas from the pipes before beginning work, but evdiently had failed to do so as an explosion followed as soon as he struck a match. His face and hands received the force of the explosion and for a time it was feared that his condition was serious, but today it appears evident that he did not breath any of the flames. Since arriving in Astoria a couple of years ago on crutches misfortune appears to have followed him. He was almost immediately taken down with typhoid fever, being laid up for a couple of months. Then his home burned down with all its contents and without any insurance, the only bright spot being that at this time his wife presented him with twins.

The preliminary examination of Peter Nissinen on the charge of stealing an accordion was held in the justice court this afternoon and the defendant was committed to the county jail in default of $75 bonds to await the action of the grand jury at the February term of the circuit court. Erland Johnson, the prosecuting witness in the case was placed under $40 bonds to appear as a witness at the trial before the circuit court.

Notice was received today that road district No 12 at Jewell has made a special levy of 10 mills, the money thus raised to be used in placing rock on the main road to the Nehalem valley. Notice has also been received that road district No One at Warrenton has made a special levy of six mills. This means that all but two road districts in the county have made levies for improving their public highways. Those districts are No 18, just below Warrenton, and No 14 in the upper Necanicum section.

The monthly report of the city auditor for December shows the receipts of his office during the month to have been as follows: Fines and forfeitures, $192.50; rent of steam roller, $179.50; from cemetery, $74; building permits, $4; total $450. The receipts from those sources during the year 1908 were as follows: Fines and forfeitures, $2434.50; building permits, $26; cemetery fund, $323; rent of roller, $270.50; total, $3054.

Mayor Wise is in receipt of the following communication from Manager Lamar of the Western Union: "It gives me great pleasure to be able to inform you that the Western Union Telegraph Company, which I have the honor to represent in your city, offers free transmission of domestic telegrams relating to the relief of the Italian sufferers when offered by regularily appointed relief committees or public officials. I hope soon to be able to extend you and your committes the same courtesies over our several cable lines direct to all Italian points.

The new steamer Inland Empire, of the Open River Transportation Company, which recently made a successful trip from Celilo to Pasco, failed to reach her home port in good order. On the trip down the river the Inland Empire mixed matters with some of the rocks in the rapids near Hoover and was badly damaged. The fuel supply was lost and it was necessary for the government steamer Umatilla to take hold and beach the craft. The Umatilla also supplied the wrecked boat with 10 tons of coal in order to permit her to work back to Celilo.

A communication addressed to the city council and reading as follows was filed in the auditor's office this morning by the Astoria Savings Bank: "The undersigned are owners of 100x100 feet, corner of Bond and Second streets and have been for the past 15 years. The grades were set and all improvements paid for years ago. In the last year, the grades have been raised on Commercial street some 40 feet, thereby causing the whole country below to begin to slide. Dirt has been dumped in the street in front of our property, our sidewalks are raising up and unless the grade on Commercial street is lowered to where it was originally, our property and buildings will be a total loss. This property and buildings cost some $6500. We would ask that the honorable council take some action at once to protect the property holders in that vicinity." The communication will be presented to the council at its first regular meeting.

The annual report of City Attorney Abercrombie for the year 1908 has been filed with the auditor. It says, he only legal action commenced against the city during the year was the one by Miss Annie Anderson of Portland to recover $20,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained as the result of a defective street and it is now pending in the United States court. The attorney adds that many street improvements were undertaken during the year and he believes that no part of the expense of these will fall upon the city. Continuing the report says: "In several instances the common council has seen fit to disregard the opinion of the city attorney upon legal matters. Without commenting on this at length, I will only say that while it is not only bad form, it is also bad practice. In conclusion, have only to say that I consider the past year to have been a very successful one and at this time desire to state that I feel grateful for assistance rendered my office, to Mr. Wise, Mr. Anderson and Mr. Tee, and to their wise council and generous assistance, I attribute in a great part the success of the city's legal department during the year just closed."

ASTORIA DAILY BUDGET

VOL. XXVIII | ASTORIA DAILY BUDGET, MONDAY, JANUARY 4, 1909 | Evening Edition | Five Cents

HALF A MILLION DOLLARS VOTED

President Given Authority to Use The Navy

Washington Jan. 4—The president in his message to congress today asked for a direct appropriation of nalf a million dollars for the relief of the stricken people of Italy. This is the most generous fund ever contributed by the American people for sufferers of other lands and is to supplement a despatch of supply, the ships Celtic from New York and Culgoa from Port Said for Messina with their big cargoes of necessaries, originally intended for the American fleet. It also supplements the president's proffer of services of the entire fleet of 16 batttleships whose use in whole or in part hinged only on the acceptance or declanation by the Italian government. Resolutons were introduced in both houses of congress appropriation $500,000 for the relief of the suffering Italian people and the president is further authorized to enable the president to send relief to the suffering Italian people and he is further authorized to use such vessels of the United States navy and such other vessels as he may in his discretion desire.

As a result of the president's message the house added $300,000 to the appropriation, making it $800,000 in all.

RELIEF BILL PASSED

Washington, Jan. 4—Both houses of congress this afternoon passed relief measures for the Italian earthquake sufferers. The amonut appropriated is $800,000 which becomes immediately available.

FLEET INSTRUCTED

Washington, Jan. 4—The first division of Admiral Sperry's fleet has been instructed to go to Naples to assist in relief work and the remainder of the fleet is to be distributed at various points along the Mediteran at Sperry's discretion.

NOTHING BUT RUINS

Reggio, Jan. 4—The detachment of troops sent to villages on the east coast of Calabria found nothing but ruins and bodies of persons killed in the earthquake. The survivors had fled. There is every reason to believe that dreadful havoc was wrought in the mountain villages, not yet explored.

LEFT FOR MESSINA

Port Said: Jan. 4—The supply ship Culgoa and scout cruiser Yankton arrived here this afternoon after a smooth passage through the canal. The Culgoa left for Messina and the Yankton will also go to Messina on her arrival here of the Atlantic sqaudron now coming through.

LEGISLATURE OF OHIO CONVENES

Columbus, Jan. 4—The general assembly convened today in extraordinary session to consider the election of a senator to succeed J. B. Foraker. There are several other maters of state interest to come before the special session.

LOST—A small enameled ladies watch with fob attached, either on Commercial or Bond streets. Finder will please return to Mrs. H. Crohn, Wonder store and receive reward.

CASTRO WAS OPERATED UPON

He Came Through it Fairly Well

Berlin, Jan. 4- Former President Castro of Venezuela was operated on today for kidney trouble. The present operation is regarded as so serious that before submitting to it Castro gave out a statement in which he said it was evidence to the whole world that he did not come to Germany to shirk responsibilities. It is understood Castro came thru the operation fairly well.

GENERAL WILLIAM P. DUVALL.
Major General William P. Duvall is the new commander of the troops in the Philippines in succession to Major General Weston. He is a Marylander and was graduated from West Point in 1869.

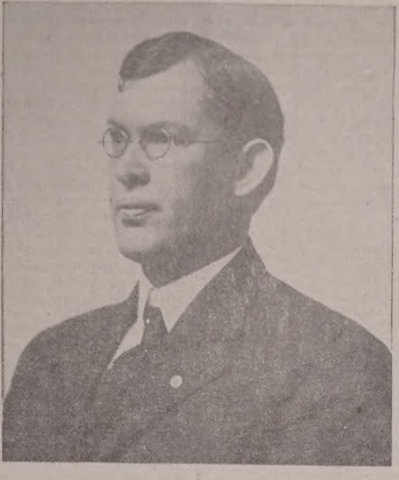
FURTHER SHOCKS ARE PREDICTED

Scientists Say Worst is Yet to Come

Messina, Jan. 4—There is reason to believe that the devastation by earthquake of Calabria and Sicily is not yet at an end. Further heavy shocks have been predicted for today and scientists declare others and still more should be expected January 7 and January 8 when the relative position of the sun and moon will produce the greatest strain on the curst of the earth. Several minor shocks were experienced Saturday and many tottering walls thrown down but it is not known that any were killed. New shocks are starting fires afresh and the people are bordering on a panic. Messina is to be excavated entirely as soon as possible. The disposition of the dead is one of the greatest problems confronting the authorities. Two days spent amid the ruins of Messina and Reggio bring convicning evidence that the horror of the situation had not been exaggerated. Messina and Reggio have ceased to exist. In the ruins of the former city two-thirds of the inhabitants lie buried while at Reggio half the people lost their lives. Messina had 150,000 and Reggio 50000, population. Sickening stenches arise from decomposing bodies and the air for many miles is polluted.

Walter Fox, British vice consul at Reggio and wife lost their lives in the earthqauke. They resided at Messina and went to Reggio each day by ferry.

Weekly Budget, $1.50 a year



A. M. SMITH
Newly elected mayor of Astoria who was installed in office today.

SENDS MESSAGE TO THE HOUSE

Roosevelt Replies to Resolution Recently Adopted

Washintgon, Jan 4—President Roosevelt sent a special message to the house of representatives today in which he replies to the resolution recently adopted by that body calling upon the president to submit whatever evidence he may have connecting any member of the house with any corrupt action in his official capacity and also asking if he has instituted proceedings to punish such members. The president in his message says he is at a loss to understand the meaning of the resolution. That he has made no charge against any members of the present house and adds that if he had he would have proceeded against them in the courts. The message speaks highly of the secret service, asks that it be made a bureau of the department of justice, that it be used to detect and punish crime wherever it is found and that the salary of the chief be increased to $6000 per year.

RUSSELL FAMILY OF PORTLAND

Believed Lost in Italian Earthquake

Portland, Jan. 4—Uneasiness is felt here for George F. Russell, wife and little daughter who are in Italy. Last heard of the family was from Naples. Mrs. Russell was a daughter of the late Sylvester Pennoyer, former governor of Oregon.

CALHOUN TRIAL HAS BEEN SET

Accused of Bribing San Francisco Supervisors

San Francisco, Calif., Jan. 4—The trial of Patrick Calhoun, president of the United Railroads and accused of bribery, is set for January 12.

NEW COUNCIL INAUGURATED

Contest to be Taken Up Next Friday

The city council met promptly at noon today with all the members present for the purpose of seating the newly elected officers. Mayor Wise appointed Councilmen Henderson, Robinson and Hansen as a committee on credentials and that committee reported that A. M. Smith had been elected mayor and Chas, Wilson, George Kaboth, C. J. Curtis, C. A. Leinenweber, A. L. Fox, L. O. Belland, P. A. Stangeland and H. F. Prael, had been elected as councilmen and recommended that they be seated. The committee also reported that F. J. Carney had a certificate of election as councilman from the first ward, but a protest had been filed by Fred Karinen and in order to avoid litigation a recount of the ballots be made. The report of the committee was adopted. The new councilmen were then escorted to their seats and Mayor Wise read his farewell message, which is published in full in another column. At its conclusion he introduced A. M. Smith, then new mayor, who said it was a great pleasure for him to succeed a man, who has made so clean a record as has his predcessor. Mayor Smith then presented his message, containing suggestions for the coming year's work and which will be found in full in another column.

A resloution was adopted fixing the time for regular meetings on the evenings of the first and third Mondays of each month. Prael introduced a resolution prodiving for the seating of F. J. Carney as councilman from the first ward, but the mayor suggested that as the council is the sole judge of who shall be seated this resolution would set aside any chance for a recount, which of course the council had a right to do if it saw fit, and an amendment was made and adoped seating Mr. Carney subject to the result of the contest. On motion by Belland the council adjourned until three o'clock on Friday afternoon when the question of a recount of the ballots will be taken up. There was considerable discussion over the question of the contest, but all appeared anxious that the rights of both sides shall be protected. Mayor Smith did not appoint the standing committees for the ensuing year, but will probably do so at the meeting on Friday evening.

IDAHO GOVERNOR INAUGURATED

Tenth Legislature of State Convenes

Boise, Jan. 4—James H. Brady was inaugurated governor today, following which the tenth legislature was convened. Paul Calgstone, of Bonner county, was elected speaker of the house, and John W. Hart, of Freemont County, as president protem of the senate. The governor announced his message will be delivered tomorrow.

General Henry Harrison Bingham, who has represented the First Pennsylvania district in congress since 1879 and has been re-elected, is one of the "grand old men" of the house.

STANDARD OIL FINE REMITTED

Supreme Court Decides in Its Favor

Washington, Jan. 4—The $29,000,000 fine case of the Standard Oil Co. will not be reviewed by the supreme court of the United States. The decision of the court to this effect was announced by Chief Justice Fuller, soon after court convened today. The case came to the court on petition filed by the government asking the court for a writ of certiorari to order up the record of the case for a review of the decision of the circuit court of appeals, for the seventh district, by which Judge Landis' original decision imposing a fine of $9,000,000 against the company for accepting rebates from railway companies was reversed. In the supreme court the case turned largely upon the righ of the court to interfere in view of the fact that the case bad been passed upon by the court of appeals, the government contending for such privilege as a right while it was urged in behalf of the oil company that precedents were all against such proceedings. The action of the court consisted in the announcement that the government's petition would not be granted. The effect of this announcement will be to leave standing the decision of the court of appeals which has been adverse to the government and favorable to the company.

BANK PRESIDENT TAKES HIS LIFE

Has Been Suffering Erom Nervous Prustration

Detroit, Jan. 4—Henry C. Potter, vice president of the People's State Bank, committed suicide early this morning. Potter was suffering from nervous prostration and about a month ago was found unconscious in the bath room at his residence with gas escaping from the jets. His family stated it had been turned on accidentally as he was overcome by an attack of heart trouble. The suicide, Cashier Lawson states, was in ill health and nothing else caused Potter's suicide. Lawson says Potter's affairs were absolutely straight and all right.

Her Sister to Tell of the Shooting

Media, Jan. 4—Mrs. Florence Erb was again on the witness stand in defense of herself and sister who are charged with the murder of Captain Erb Her sister Mrs. Beisel, will take the stand probably tomorrow, to tell of the actual shooting of which Mrs. Erb says she was not a witness.

NEGRO SOLDIER CASE DISMISSED

Supreme Court Has No Jurisdiction

Washington, Jan. 4—The supreme court today dismissed the case of Oscar Reid, one of the negro soldiers discharged from the army on account of the Brownsville affair holding that the amount involved was not sufficient to justify the bringing of the case to the supreme court.

INAUGURAL COMMUNICATION

Submitted to Council Today by Mayor Smith

Astoria, Oregon, Jan. 4, 1909.

To The Honorable Members of the Common Council:

Gentlemen:—At this time the duty is imposed upon me to communicate to you a general statement of the condition of affairs of our city and to recommend the adoption of such measures as may be deemed expedient and proper to advance the welfare of the municipal corporation. While I am fully conscious of the importance of the duty, I realize the impossibility of covering the subject fully and shall therefore but mention briefly what seems to me the most important subjects.

The preceding administration has been so satisfactory, that there is little to criticise concerning the present condition of the city and we will be fortunate if able to retire from office with the respect and gratitude that our predecessors now command.

The citizens of Astoria should be extremely grateful for their present fortunate condition. They have escaped serious loss or damages from the elements, while many neighboring cities much more securely protected have suffered heavily.

The streets of our city have been improved in a substantial manner and modern public buildings erected and the improvements mostly paid for in full. The financial panic of the last year that paralyzed industry throughout the country scarcely abated in the least the growth and prosperity of this city. The present construction of several important railroad projects to the mouth of the Columbia river, together with the vast importance of the river as a transportation highway from inland to the sea and the improvement of its mouth as an ocean port with the enormous wealth of merchantable timber accesible to it that is now in ready demand for immediate consumption combine to insure the rapid and continued progress and improvement of our city beyond the sanguine predictions of the most optimistic. So certain is it that immediate and adequate returns must necessarily result from honest and intelligent effort for municipal improvement in this favored location, that one of the most important services that can be rendered this community is to seek by object lessons and patient reason to dispel the doubts of the obstructing pessimists and teach a very small but extremely active minority that the nursing and giving vent to the malevolent passions of envy and jealousy are not in harmony with centralized population, and that strict loyalty to our municipal corporation as well as our business institutions is the surest gaurantee of the prosperity of all.

Equally as important as our natural advantages is the recently adopted provision of our state constitution, giving to the voters of cities power to enact and amend their charters subject only to the state constitution and the criminal laws of the state; thus placing it within our own power to prescribe the boundaries of our municipal development and work out our own destiny. The law passed in pursuance to this provision provides that the city council may propose amendments upon its own initiative, and accordingly your responsibility as well as your sphere of duty has been vastly enlarged; so that you may submit any measure to the people for their adoption from building an electric railway to busting a trust.

At the last election two meritorious measures were submitted to the voters for their adoption or rejection and one to them, the Port of Astoria bill, was adopted while the other, the bill for constructing bulk-heads and filling in the tide flats, was rejected. There is some doubt as to the legality of the adoption of the Port of Astoria bill owing to a few days delay in advertising it after the initiative petition was filed and for that reason I would recommend that its validity be judicially determined before any expense is incurred under it; and in case it should prove void that a special election be provided for at some time during the year so that it as well as the reclamation bill shorn of its objectionable features may be re-submitted to the voters.

Under the charter $280,000 is fixed as the limit of net indebtedness and no obligation can be lawfullvy incurred for any purpose beyond this limit, and accordingly it is urgently necessary to exercise every precaution to guard against an increase of indebtedness. The report of the auditor and police judge shows that while the gross indebtedness of the city has been materially increased owing to the city loaning its credit to property owners on account of installments for street improvements, yet the net indebtedness which is approximately $187,494.60 is not substantially in excess of what it has been for several years in the past.

Your attention is called to a statement showing the income and expenses of the city for the year just closed from which it appears that the expenses exceeded the income by more than $11,000 the items of which are as follows:

EXPENSE.

Bond interest	$11,205.94
Street repairs	3,447.56
Police department	9,045.39
Fire department	17,322.15
Health department	999.70
Auditor and experts	1,925.00
City pound	218.95
Stationery and printing	1,050.57
Janitor	900.00
Surveyor and assistance	2,505.75
Street lighting	5,810.66
Public property including fuel, lights and repairs	5,408.41
Salaries including that of city attorney at $115 per month, Treasurer $90, Supt. of Streets $95, Driver of Street Sprinkler $75, Engineer for Street Roller at $4 per day when working on roller and $75.00 per month while at other work, Sexton $50 Total	$6,685.50
Interest on warrants approximately	3,000.00
Miscellaneous expenses	3,519.13
Litigation	127.00
Public Library	895.00
Total	$73,866.71

INCOME.

Retail liquor licenses from 51 saloons at $400.00 per annum	$20,400.00
Wholesale licenses	400.00
Sundry licenses	4,346.00
Total licenses		$25,146.00
Fines and forfeitures		2,292.50
Franchise tax		350.00
Sale of lots in city cemetery		250.00
Rent of city roller		200.00
Taxes		34,000.00
Total income		$62,238.50

That there was a deficit last year of $11,000 is perhaps excusable on account of unforseen expenses and necessary expenditures required to more thoroughly equip the fire and street departments but unfortunately the tax levy already made for the ensuing year is so small that another deficit will inevitably occcur unless either additional revenues are secured or the expenses of the city greatly reduced. It is to be hoped that such a condition will not again occur and I consider it incumbent upon the common council to exercise every precaution to guard against the expenses exceeding the income one single dollar. Either provide for reducing the expenses or else make provisions to increase the revenues of the city to meet the expenses and it would be wise to do both. The charter places it within your power to license almost every occupation and business conducted within the city and resort should be had to an occupation tax rather than face any deficit.

While the expenses of the fire department have been quite heavy during the past year, much of this has resulted from repairing the two engines and purchasing a new combination chemical engine and hose wagon and other apparatus and supplies which have thoroughly equipped that department so that during the coming year the expense of maintaining it should be greatly reduced.

During the past few years the street department has been considerably enlarged by the city acquiring and operating both a steam roller and street sprinkler. An engineer has been employed to operate the steam roller at $4 per day while actually running it, who is retained at $75 per month for general street work when the roller is not being operated, and one man is also employed to run the street sprinkler when it is required who is also steadily employed for other work at a salary of $75 per month when the sprinkler is not in use.

Owing to the fact that both the sprinkler and roller are required only during a small portion of the year, arrangements should be made so that such employes can be steadily employed in cleaning the streets while the use of the roller and sprinkler is not required. And in this connection, I wish to call particular attention to Section 51 of the charter as amended by the people making it the duty of the superintendent of streets to inspect the construction or improvement of all streets and the construction of all sewers and to superintend the work performed in the repair rolling or cleaning of the streets and allowing him not to exceed three deputies who shall be appointed by him subject to the approval of a majority of the common council. Strict adherence to this provision will not only save the taxpayer considerable sums of money but will place the responsibility for this important work where it rightfully belong.

Too much care can not be exercised in considering proposed street improvements so as to avoid unnecessary or reckless projects to the neglect of those which are urgently required and where improvements are made, they should be of a substantial and permanent character constructed with due consideration for the future growth of the city.

I most respectfully recommend that particular effort be made to strictly enforce all license laws of the city and particularly the laws against the sale of intoxicating liquors without a license and in the prohibition precincts. Those who pay a high license for permission to conduct a business are entitled to protection against illicit competition and every consideration of public policy requires the strict enforcement of the liquor laws in a dry precinct.

It is evident to all that the grades of many of or streets are too low and that unless raised the substantial improvement of our city will necessarily be greatly retarded, and I would recommend that immediate steps be taken to raise the grades of the streets that are too low wherever it is possible to do so and particularly on that portion of the streets where buildings have not yet been constructed as in Scow bay and that where possible the streets be widened and that where streets are raised to the proper grades that fire limits be established.

The ladies of our city are entitled to great credit for having inaugurated the public library and for having maintained it for many years with very little municipal aid, but since the city now contributes a considerable sum each year for the support of the public library, I feel that I am justified in expressing the hope that the public property committee will consider the advisability of arranging for the use of a small portion of this years appropriation in purchasing some recent standard works on engineering as well as some more complete works on biography and history for the use of the public library.

A large number of homeless laboring men are continuously in our city who would not feel perfectly welcome at the public library and who before the Sunday closing of saloons were accustomed to resort there, and for the accomodation of whom I would recommend that a plain but comfortable reading room be provided. The first crime of an individual against the rights of property is frequently caused by severe necessitutous distress resulting from being found in the world without means, friends or immediate employment and as a rescue for such persons every city that has a large transient population should provide some poor farm or workshop where such unfortunate persons may secure employment tho at a very low rate of wages and meals and lodging. Such a place is more urgent here on account of the county not having a poor farm, and I suggest that you consider the question of the city installing and operating a rock crusher where at least a limited amount of labor may be secured by such persons.

The present enforcement of the laws for the preservation of the public morals is generally satisfactory, and I would recommend that care be exercised to insure absolute impartialty in the enforcement of laws without respect to race or color for the least inequality or impartiality necessarily gives rise to suspicions that immunity has been secured either through favors or purchased outright.

The dictates of humanity as well as gratitude to providence for our own well being not only prompt us to extend our symathies to the unfortunate sufferers from the fearful disaster that has recently devastated Southern Italy, but also to contribute our share to assist in relieving their distress; and should it meet with your approval, I will be pleased to appoint a committee either from your body or the general public to receive contributions for their aid.

The success of our administration depends upon patient, honest and harmonious effort in the performance of our official duties with a conscientious and just regard for the rights and motives of each other absolutely free from any partisan considerations. And assuring you of my earnest desire to work in perfect accord with all of my fellow officials in a honest effort to build up our city and promote the welfare of all, and thanking you for your kind consideration, I am.

A. M. SMITH.

ASTORIA THEATRE

BABES IN TOYLAND

The premier musical attraction on tour this season is the gorgeous musical exravaganza "Babes in Toyland" with music by Victor Herbert, the talented composer who is responsible for the emphatic success of several of the best musical attractions. The librettist is Glen MacDonough author of a score of brilliant lyrical productions which have won lasting flavor. This elaborate musical spectacle will be presented at the Astoria theatre January 9. The company carry their own orchestra.

THE HOUSE OF BONDAGE

Florence Roberts, whose position as a star is firmly fixed will appear at the Astoria theatre next Wednesday in a new play by Seymour Obermer entitled "The House of Bondage." In this production Miss Roberts will have the highly capable assistance of Arthur Forrest, Thurlow Bergen, Kent Bosworth, Harry Gibbs, Ann Warrington and Mary Bertrand. A correct and handsome setting is given the piece by John Cort, under whose direction Miss Roberts is again appearing. "The House of Bondage" has been particularly praised on account of its brilliant lines. It is declared to teem with smart epigrams and keen repartee. Mr. Obermer, too, has shown himself a master of stagecraft in his construction of situations and climaxes. At the close of the second act he has given Miss Roberts a scene in which she is offered opportunities for emotional acting, which excels anything he has heretofore attempted.

A GREAT PLAY

At last we are to see "The Great Divide," unquestionably the most strikingly original dramatic success an American playwright has yet achieved. This is welcome news to all lovers of really good drama, for no play in the history of the American stage has won so large a measure of artistic, as well as financial success, as has this peturiesque and beautifully written drama of virile American life from the pen of William Vughn Moody "The Great Divide" has been hailed by many of the leading dramatic reviewers as "the long awaited great American play." The management of the Astoria theatre are to be congratulated upon securing this splendid attraction. The play will be presented under the direction of the distinguished actor-manager, Henry Miller, on Friday Jan. 8, with a superb company, and the entire production, with the complete scenic equipment precisely as presented during the recent engagement of over 500 performance in New York City.

Up to Date.

"Well, well," remarked old Mr. Pastangon, "the young women of today are not what they were in my time."

"No?" replied Miss Huskie.

"No, indeed. Why, all you young women nowadays are muscular athletes."

"That's so. In the proud lexicon of feminine youth there is no such word as 'frail.'"—Catholic Standard and Times.

A Letter With a Gift.

"Dear —, I am sending you a small remembrance for Christmas. Do not think that it is cheap, although you will notice by the price mark that it only cost me in cash 25 cents. In addition to that, it cost me $2 worth of time, $10 worth of worry and approximately $4.67 in damaged and torn clothes. Merry Christmas otherwise."—Chicago Post.

Mistress—When I engaged you, Lucinda, you said you had no male friends. Now, almost every time I come into the kitchen I find a man there.

Lucinda—Lor' sakes, he am no male fren ob mine!

Mistress—Then who is he?

Lucinda—Ma husband!—Puck.

A Thankless Task.

"I think I shall marry him to reform him," said the romantic girl.

"I have seen that experiment tried," rejoined Miss Cayenne.

"Successfully?"

"Well, I won't say the men were reformed. But they always seemed more or less repentant and dissatisfied."—Washington Star.

Coddle—It is very simple. We do not care to know people who have no more than we have, and people with more than we have do not care to know us.—St. Louis Republic.

BEGINS WORK ON DRYDOCK

First Load of Equipment Reaches Bremerton

Puget Sound Navy Yard, Jan. 4—Work is actually to begin on the $2,000,000 drydock at the yard according to one of C. J. Erickson's representatives. Yesterday morning a scow load of equipment arrived at the yard. It consisted of a big locomotive, a 75-ton steam shovel, nine cars, 2,500 ties and a mile of steel rails for tracking.

A large crowd watched the unloading of the locomotive and steam shovel. This was done by lifting them free of the scow and landing them on the wharf by the use of the big 40-ton traveling crane. While this was going on, a force of men were at work laying railroad track from the site of the new dock to the Philadelphia wharf where the dirt from the excavation will be dumped behind the quay wall.

M. M. Cooper, of Seattle, will superintend the excavating for the drydock. The dock is to be 820 feet long and ninety-five feet wide. Besides this, Mr. Erickson is to grade down the whole hill east of the Administration Building. It is estimated that about 300,000 cubic yards of earth is to be removed before the dock is completed. The big steam shovel had a capacity of 2,500 cubic yards a day with a 2½-yard dipper.

Another scow load of material is expected to arrive today, bringing over three more locomotives and fourteen more cars.

About sixty men will be employed at once and the force will be gradually increased. It will require fully three years to complete the work.

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.

I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

LUMBER RATES TAKE ADVANCE

Price of Charters is Still Going Up

H. A. Frederick & Co. report the following:

The last week has been rather quiet on account of the holidays, with not many coastwise lumber charters to report. Rates to San Francisco are $3.75; and $4.25 and $4.50 to Southern ports. The schoner Cecilia Sudden has been fixed at $4.50 from Willapa Harbor to San Pedro and the steamship Fairhaven was chartered at $4.50 from Grays Harbor to San Pedro, while the steamship J. B. Stactson was chartered at $3.75 from Grays Harbor to San Francisco. Although little chartering has been done, rates have taken a slight advance. noticeable principally in the Southern freight.

The steamship Homer, which was reported last week, has again been fixed for a return cargo of barley at $2.50 from Portland to San Francisco. Until the owners' ideas come down, there will be practically no charters for full cargoes of grain, as the market is very dull and not expected to revive until early next year.

Several fixtures have been made in offshore lumber carriers, specially to the West Coast of South America. The little barkentine Wrestler was chartered at about 50s from Columbia River to two ports on the West Coast of South America and the Norweigan ship Arranmore from Puget Sound to Mejillones at 38s, while the steamship Sverra is reoprted on time charter, 2s 6d, from Eureka and Puget Sound to Chilean and Peruvian ports.

The Ricart de Solar, a Chilean ship, just arrived on Puget Sound and will take lumber to Valparaiso for orders—owners' account and on the Polaris, which was reported chartered some time ago, a rate of 30s from Grays Habor to Sydney has just been made public.

The steamship Selja is reported on time charter from Columbia River to the Orient.

MUST ENAGT SPECIAL LAW

Supreme Court Commissioners Cannot Hold Office Legally

There will be no supreme court commissioners after March 1, unless the legislature reenacts the statue creating the two offices which was passed two years ago at the session of 1907. This statute was a special statute passed for propose of reliveing the congestion of business before the supreme court. At that time it was expected that the constitutional amendment submitted to the people providing for an increase of the number of supreme court justices from three to five would be passed. It was found, however, that the amendmen was full of jokers and it was killed at the polls.

The appointment of Will R. King and R. J. Slater as supreme court commissioners has been a assistance to the court and with their aid the tribunal has been able to keep up with the cases brought before it. The law providing for these commissioners, however, says they shall hold office for two years from the time of their appointment by the governor. They were appointed a very short time after the close of the the 1907 legislature and consequently their terms will expire a few days before March 1 next.

No provision was made for the appointment of successors to the commissioners and consequently there is no autority of law for the retention of the office unless the coming session shall enact the statute.

Representative McAthur has in mind the submission of a concurrent resolution calling for a constitutional amendment increasing the number of justices from three to five. Should he do so the amendment will carry nothing other than the bare provision for the increase of the court, as it is the general assumption that the people of the state once they understood the situation and knew its worth, would indorse the proposition at the polls.

DISBARMENT OF ATTORNEYS

Comment Made in Report of Secretary of Interior

Washigton, Jan. 4—The improved methods of administration instituted by Secretary Garfield, having for their purpose the simplification of business without any loss in accuracy or responsibility, have proven of great value, says the head of the department of the interior in his annual report made public today. The report covers a wide field, dealing as it does with the work of the various bureaus embraced within its management, the territories, national parks and reservations, district of Columbia corporations, etc.

Secretary Garfield calls attention to certain unscrupulous and unprofessional acts upon the part of a number of attorneys practicing before the department, which resulted in their disbarment. Some of these have brought mandamus suits for a restoration of their names to the list of those entitled to practice. These cases are now pending, but "In the meantime," the secretary says, "attorneys will be notified, heard and disbarred in all cases where I am satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that their conduct as attorneys has been disreputable, fraudulent, illegal, or undoubtedly unprofessional.' The recent patent office frauds, resulting in the confession of one defendant, the conviction of another and the acquittal of the third are touched upon, and the statement is made that it was the first case of the kind that had occurred in the one hundred and eighteen years of patent office history. The commissioners of patents it is stated, has taken steps to provide additional safeguards around the filing of patent papers.

Regarding the movement for the conservation of the natural resources of the country. Secretary Garfield says that it shows the people of the country have fully awakened to the vital necessity of caring for what is left to the public domain.

The pension roll, as usual, piled up an enormous death rate, 50,676 names having been removed on this account Of these 34,333 were soldiers and sailors of the civil war. During the entire year the total number of pensioners on the roll was 1,006,053.

There are 77,000,000 acres of swamp land in the United States, enough to make a strip 100 miles wide, reaching from the gulf to the great lakes, and fertile enough, if reclaimed, to feed the entire nation.

Note.—This Tide Table is compiled by the U. S. Government for Astoria, Oregon, as standard port for reference. To find out the exact time tides occur use the following table:

High Water. Low Water

[illegible]

The department has ordered the revenue cutter Manning to Neah Bay, where she will be stationed for the purpose of rendering aid to distressed vessels until the life saving tug recently built in the east arrives and is ready to go into commission. The stationing of a cutter at Neah Bay is a wise precaution, but why is it that the department continues to overlook the Columbia river and refuses to dispatch a cutter to this port? Everybody knows that in addition to the Columbia river being one of the most important shipping points in the northwest, it is so situated that a cutter stationed here would be in closer proximity to distressed vessels in the storm sections of the Pacific, both north and south, than would one kept at any other port and would thus be able to render the quickest aid. It has been some years since a cutter was stationed here, but why can only be imagined. Last winter after numerous protests were made to the department following a disastrous wreck at sea, the Manning was ordered to Astoria, but she never came, excepting once to get mail, when she departed and has not been seen since. Fortunately there have been no bad wrecks in the north Pacific this winter, but there may be before the season's gales are over and the time to urge the department to send a cutter here is now, before any accidents occur.

Attention has been called numerous times to the advantages afforded here for the location of a wholesale store, especially in the grocery line. Never have the conditions for starting an enterprise of this kind been more favorable than they are at the present time. Not only is there an ever increasing local trade which could readily be supplied by such a store but there is an immense territory along the coast both north and south as well as adjacent to the tributaries of the lower Columbia river that is directly tributary to Astoria and can be supplied from here much more quickly and satisfactorily than from any other wholesale point on the coast. Again, goods purchased in the east can be bought just as cheaply by an Astoria house as by one located in Portland or San Francisco and can be shipped to this point at exactly the same freight rates. These things being equal and with the advantage of cheaper rents there is certainly no reason why a wholesale grocery house in Astoria could not be made a paying investment from the start. The project is certainly worthy of investigation and we hope to see some of our citizens who are posted and interested in that line of trade take hold of it.

Before the ways and means committee of congress recently the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, of Eugene, made an argument against the entrance into this country, duty free, of Canadian Lumber. They contended that such foreign competition would tend to reduce prices and the result would be a great waste of our forest resources. The company contends that at the present time over 40 per cent of the forests of Oregon and Washington are wasted, owing to the inability to find a profitable market for the common grades. Adidtional competition they argue would not tend to a reduction in the already enormous waste. They exhibited photographs of lands logged off while the lumber was at a fair price, and also those worked over when the market was at a lower level, in order to illustrate their contention.

MAYOR WISE BIDS FAREWELL

Last Message Presented at Todays Meeting

Astoria, Oregon, January 4, 1909.

Gentlemen of the Common Council:

The evidence, our work, is now a matter of record; the people as the jury will carefully weigh that evidence and in due time render a just verdict. Let us hope that their verdict will be a favorable one. I am hopeful for a verdict in our favor because I feel that we have made a good fight, that our conscience is clear and our hands are clean. We have good reasons for anticipating a favorable verdict, not only because of the progress made in the material welfare of our city, but also because Astoria has gained a better name. A good name is just as necessary and as valuable to a community as it is to an individual. A precedent has been established which no officer may hereafter change without incurring the disrespect of a trusting constituency.

What of it if our motives have been assailed and slanders hurled at us, if but one weak girl has been saved from falling or a boy has been kept from seeing degrading sights; if their be only a single home made happier because the husband, father, son or brother, has saved his hard earned wages and thereby brought more comfort into that home, are we not repaid a hundred fold? Does it not feel good to be able of look without a blush into the eyes of every virtuous woman and grasp the hand of every honest man without a tremor?

HERMAN WISE

Perhaps we have made some mistakes, but are we not also human?

Gentleman, the reports of those faithful officers, the city auditor and treasurer, will show the condition of our city in detail. I think it would be unseemly for me to suggest plans for the future government of the city. My honorable succesor has both the experience and ability to suggest plans for a successful administration. It only remains for me to thank you and all of the officers and employes of the city for the courtesies and consideration shown me. I must also thank the newspapers, here and elsewhere, for the support given. To the gentlemen who are about to assume the solemn duties of public life I say weclome, and may their responsibilities weighlightly upon them. In this connection let me make a suggestion. Never forget the people who trust in you and always remember your oath of office. During the most trying period of my career as mayor, when conditions not of my own making made life seem a burden, when I spent many weary days and sleepless nights, I one day came across the oath of office in the city charter. As I read, my mind cleared instantly, my conscience seemed to gain a wonderful strength, and from that comment I went about my duties without fear. Therefore, I wish to advise my fellow citizens who are about to assume the reign of government, to try this simple remedy. When ever doubts, fears or troubles overtake you, do as you did on that proud day when first sworn in: raise your right hand to God and repeat "I do, solemnly swear that I will support the constitution of the United States and of this state and that I will, to the best of my ability, faithfully perform the duties of my office, so help me God."

If you care to heed this advise, gained from experience, your labor will seem lighter, your conscience will feel a new delight and your constituents will have reason to feel grateful. When you uphold, protect and defend their laws, you uphold, protect and defend the people's rights and their fireside.

And now, let me thank all of the people for their great confidence and for having made me their servant for a time and their debtor forever. If I have pleased the people I, am happy. If I have erred I, ask them to cover my shortcomings with the mantle of charity.

Lastly, I declare my unbounded faith in the people, for people are God's noblest work; blessed be therefore, "the people." HERMAN WISE, Mayor.

The Happy Family.

TYPHOID NOW GREAT MENACE

First Cases of Dread Disease Reported at Messina

Messina Jan. 5 The earthquake shocks continue, although in diminishing force, and are especially frequent at night. Official figures compiled so far show that 14000, bodies have been buried in the cemeteries; that 9,000 refuges have left the city and 9000, still remain. Instead of excavating for bodies, it has been proposed to cover all the bodies, where they are, with quicklime. Official figures place the number of wounded at Reggio, at at least 1000, and the refuges at 7,000. The number of dead in the ruins is unknown. Reggio is practically evacuated, except for troops and marines. Numerous persons, who were still living when taken from beneath the ruins, say the voices of others could be distinctly heard appealing for aid. All the Americans, who have not been heard from, may be considered safe, as probably all are in Southern Sicily. Those known to have suffered in the earthquake have been reported. All the telephone and telegraph wires have been placed at the disposal of the government and personal messages will be delayed indefinitely. The Associated Press correspondent found in the ruins of the hotel Victoria a full list of the guests. Except Vice Consul Stuart Lupton, it contained no American names. After sleeping one night on a plank without covering from the rain, the Associated Press correspondent the next night took refuge in a hospital,aboard ship,where there were 400 wounded persons without a nurse. The first cases of typhoid fever have broken out here. This fact will cause drastic action to be taken immediateiy for the disposal of the dead. The hope of rescuing any of the living beneath the ruins has been abandoned. Decaying animals matter has greatly augmented the danger of a spread of disease.

BRADY FAVORS LOCAL OPTION

Urges Measure in His Message to Legislature

Boise, Jan. 5—Governor Brady delivered his first message today. He urged the enactment of a county local option law and a direct primary law and also urged that the legislature keep its promise and re-elect Senator Heyburn. He disapproved the creation of a railroad commission but favored a public utilities comission to have supervision of all public service corporations. The governor asks for liberal appropriations for all state institutions, especially the university. It was stated that sufficient of the leg'slators had signed a paper pledging themselves to Heyburn to insure his election.

Seattle, Jan. 4 The Seattles' total earthquake relief fund amounted to $5,029 today.

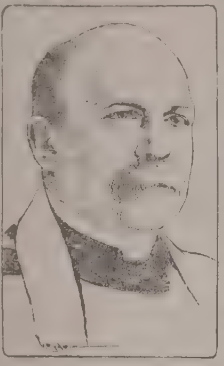
If you want dry fir cord wood, inside fir, bark slab, or box wood, ring up Kelly the wood and coal dealer, the man who keeps the prices down. Coal at $7.00 per ton in your basement or $6.00 at yard. Main 2191, Barr Corner 12th and Duane.

BATTLESHIPS GO TO NAPLES

Italy Will Be Offered Thier Services

Port Said Jan 5—The scout cruiser Yankton left here this morning for Messina. The itinerary of the American battleship fleet has been changed. The battleship Connecticut, Vermont and Minnesota leave here at midnight for Naples at a rate of 14 knots per hour. The Connecticut will arrive Saturday, other two soon afterwards as their speed will allow. Upon arriving at Naples Admiral Sperry will offer the services of the vessels at his command.



REV. ALFRED HARDING.

The newly elected Protestant Episcopal bishop of Washington has been rector of St. Paul's church in the national capital for nearly a quarter of a century.

OFFICER SHOT AND KILLED

Meets Death While Making Arrest of Desperado

Los Angeles, Calif, Jan. 5—Deputy Constable Charles De Manville was shot and killed last night at New Hall, in this county, while arresting "Arizona Jack" Ellon, a miner and cowboy of Imperial Valley. Ellon escaped on a freight train.

MARINE INTELLIGENCE

The steam schooner Cascades arrived in this morning from San Francisco with freight and passengers and will load lumber for a return.

Captain Dodge came up on the steamer Sue H. Elmore from Tillamook on her last trip to assist Captain Schroeder, who was suddenly taken with an attack of rheumatism in his arms but is now all right again.

The setam schooner South Bay, with a partial cargo of lumber for San Francisco, has arrived down to the Hammond mill to finish.

The steamer Sue H. Elmore left out today for Tillamook with freight and passengers.

The steam schooner Yosemite arrived in at midnight last night from California to load lumber.

COLD WEATHER OVER NORTHWEST

Heavy Snow in Portland Stopping Street Cars

Portland, Jan. 5 The Pacific northwest is in the grip of the worse cold spell it has endured for years and portions of two states in which snow is a rarity are covered to a depth of several inches in a white mantle.

The most remarkable degree of cold recorded in the past 24 hours is reported from Bellingham where the mercury last night dropped to nearly zero. The greatest degree of cold was at Spokane where the mercury stood at 4 degrees below zero early today. In northern Washington the weather has been clear with abnormal temperatures in the western part of the state. At Seattle it was 18 above this morning and at Tacoma 21 above.

At present Portland is the worst sufferer from the storm as fine snow, like granuls of sugar has put the street cars out of commission by noon and with the wind blowing over thirty miles an hour and the mercury at nineteen or lower, web-footers managed to gain some conception of Dakota blizzards although the imitation is fortunately a poor counterfeit.

THREE KILLED BY EXPLOSION

Lump of Powder Thrown Into Grate Fire

Inez, Ky, Jan. 5 Three lives were lost in an explosion at the home of a wealthy planter, named Allen Cassel yesterday. Cassel's wife and son were burned to a crisp and his stepdaughter died shortly after. The boy set a can of powder near a grate fire. He noticed a small white lump in the can and, thinking it was not powder, threw it into the flames. The lump exploded, setting the can on fire, and it exploded with great force.

ADVANCE IN FREIGHT RATES

Became Effective on Last Saturday

The advance of 10 per cent in transcontinental freight rates became effective on Saturday. At the same time the real loss to shippers and the real increase in the dividends of the railroad systems will not develop until the higher affairs have been tried out. Commodities moving either westward or eastward are subject to the same increase, as near as can be estimated, will run about 10 per cent. That it will mean millions of additional profits to the carriers goes without saying.

Shippers hesitate in saying just how much difference it will make a month, because the difference on the various classifications subjected to the raise, together with the average volume of movement of each class, have not been figured out.

Among the commodities of this state which are affected are canned fruits and vegtables, fresh fish shipped on passengers trains; dried fish and fresh fish shipped on refrigerator cars, have been advanced 10 cents a hundred. Other commodities vary a trifle either way from this medium of advance.

COSGROVE WILL COME NORTH

Washington's Governor Starts for Olympia Next Monday

Paso Robles, Calif., Jan. 5—Governor-elect Cosgrove of Washington stated today that he would have no inaugural address nor any message to the legislature. He is not now and has not been able since his election to write an address, but he expects to make a few remarks at his inauguration. The governor and party, including his physician, will leave here in a private car on January 10 or 11 for Olympia, as the date of his inauguration is January 14. He plans to remain in Olympia only two days, returning to Paso Robles to remain until mild weather sets in Washington. The governor's condition is improving rapidly, but he will be obliged to take a long rest and to remain in a mild climate for some time.

MURDERERS IN PENITENTIARY

Four There Awaiting Execution in Short Time

Salem, Or., Jan. 5 Four men are in solitary confinement at the Oregon State penitentiary awaiting the execution of the death sentence, having been convicted of murder in the first degree. Three of them are sentenced to hang during this month. Three Fridays in January, the first month in the new year, will be hangmans' day in Salem.

Math Janeijag, who killed his sweetheart at Oregon City, is the first. He is sentenced to be hung next Friday January 8. Walter Johnson, who killed Walter Perdue in a lonely cabin in the timber belt of Washington county near Forest Grove, will hang January 22, unless some unforseen circumstances delays the execution.

The third murderer is Harry Daley, who arrived at the penitentiary Thursday. Daley killed his partner in a Portland saloon. He will be hung January 29. The fourth and last man is Joe Anderson. He shot and killed a railroad engineer while attempting to hold him up in South Portland a year ago. Anderson was sentenced to be hanged June 26 last, but he has appealed his case.

When Finch arrives there will then be five murderers in the state prison, an unusual number.

WITH CARGO OF JAPANESE OAK

Steamer Fukui Maru Expected to Return

Another cargo of logs will be brought here soon from Japan to be manufactured into finishing lumber. It will be the second of its kind imported here since last fall when the Pacific Lumber & Manufacturing company opened its hardwood mill in North Portland.

The first cargo measured 1,500,000 feet and consisted of logs averaging about [illegible] feet in length. It was brought over on the Japanese steamer Fukui Maru and it is understood that the same steamer will probably bring the next cargo, as she will have time to discharge the flour taken from Puget sound for return cargo in time to load the logs this month. Accoridng to advices received from Japan yesterday the cargo will be here during the early part of next month and it will be of approximately the same size as the first one.

The logs are cut in the island of Hakkaido, the northern island of the group and have to be taken on board from rafts built on the open beach. This makes the work of loading rather tedious and risky it happening some times that the steamer has to lift anchor and run for shelter.

Indications are that from now on a steamer cargo of logs will be brought here about every six months to supply he needs of the new mill. It is said that the material has already found a market all along the Pacific coast where hardwood finished material is manufactured.

PROSPECTS ARE ENCOURAGING

Outlook For Astoria Was Never More Bright

The special committee appointed to suggest nominations for officers for the Chamber of Commerce for the ensuing year and to report upon the advisability of continuing the promotion and publicity work after April 1, held a meeting in the chamber yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock and passed a resolution recommending that the present corps of officers and committees be requested to retain office until the last regular meeting in the month of March.

The first of April is the end of the second year for which Mr. Whyte was employed and the promotion committee has a number of matters in such shape that by the first of April there is likely to be an entirely different aspect of local affairs.

Indeed it was the sense and sentiment of the meeting that this will probably be the banner year in the history of the city. The persistent, consistent and sensible advertising that has been and still is being done, is telling. While the committee deliberated there was still another new family in the city to locate, a family of excellent people by the name of Hubble from Oklahoma. Before the first of April it seems very certain that the building of the electric railroad will begin. The timber and lumber markets are beginning to look up. Early in the spring nearly the full membership of the national lumbermen's association will visit Astoria. The Seattle fair will bring many strangers to the coast who have never before been here, and it is up to the citizens, the committee believes, to put on a smiling face and prepare to welcome more people than have ever visited Astoria during any previous summer.

The special committee found none but the warmest words of praise for the promotion committee which has so constantly and persistently, though silently worked during all of the past year. A number of things which the promotion committee has up its sleeves will make Astorians smile if they fully mature and eventuate as now seems likely. But whether they mature or not, the printing of a story concerning them prematurely, would in all likelihood destroy any chances they may have.

The special committee fully understands this situation and these facts. Every man present believes that Astoria is going to hum this year and next and that all that is needed is a long pull, a strong pull and an all pull together feeling.

Chairman Patton presided and there were present, W. F. McGregor, Judge F. J. Taylor, Norris Staples, Judge J. Q. A. Bowlby, C. R. Higgins, Mayor A. M. Smith, E. Z. Ferguson and J. M. Anderson.

The subject of taxation was discussed and it was agreed there was a close relationship between prosperity and taxes, one that needed to be carefully studied by the citizenship generally who would be called upon from time to time to pay the taxes.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chairman, it first being agreed that the committee should meet for a few minutes again at one o'clock tomorrow afternoon to discuss some further details. The resolution in full which the committee passed is as follows:

"Resolved—That our recommendations to the Chamber of Commerce are that its present corps of officers and committees be requested to retain office until the last regular meeting in the month of March: that the annual election of officers be postponed until that date."

It developed in the discussion and was heartily indorsed by each and every member that with the extraordinary amount of railroad building on both sides of the river which will be under way all this year, it is incumbent upon Astoria to keep throughly awake with eyes on the main chance. This chance will be more factories of all kinds, more farms, more people and more trade.

Chairman Patton said that if Astoria were properly taken care of now that in a few years it would take care of itself.

Mayor Smith said he believed principally because of the railroad building that Astoria would make greater progress his year than it ever had made during any period of twelve months.

Mr. McGregor said he believed the lower river would become the greatest saw mill center of the world in the very near future.

Norris Staples added that he had always believed in Astoria and believed in it more now than he ever had before. "I have no Astoria property that I would sell just now," he asserted.

J. M. Anderson said that although he had only been in the city a short while, from what he had learned and knew, he preferred Astoria to any other city of the size that he had ever seen.

Judge Bowlby said that while development matters might appear to be moving slow to some, as a matter of fact Astoria was making splendid progress now and that he expected to see this progress greatly accelerated during the present year.

LAW NOT GOOD; LILLEY IS SAFE

Corrupt Practice Act Contravenes the Constitution

New Haven, Conn., Jan 5—That a corrupt practice act which will with stand any test in the courts will be the outcome of the charges brought by George L. Fox against Governor-elect Lilley of violations of the present act, which met with such an abrupt death today when Judges Robinson and Bennett decided that the law is unconstitutional is the opinion of progressive politicians of both parties. This was the first invocation of the law, and now that its father, Fox, has stated that he will not press the present case further, a new bill or at least an amendment which will make the present law invulnerable, will undoubtedly be introduced in the coming legislature and supported by influential members on both sides of the assembly.

The act was declared to be unconstitutional in that it contravenes the state constitution.

THE CHARM OF NEW YORK

An English View of the Metropolis

New York ought by most artistic standards of the past to be hideous. Instead (as I made up my mind, with a shock of pleasure, a few weeks ago) she is as beautiful, as individual almost, as Venice. Of course there are her sky and her atmosphere. Even a regular old frump of a city could wear a spurious charm when golden wine of sunshine dripped over her from a crystal cup studded with turquoise or in a sunset such as heaven and Turner alone could conceive, glittering like a heap of jewels behind a veil of sprinkled gold dust. But the startling, bizarre beauty of New York could exist even in a London fog.

What is there to say of a vast city where all the architectures of the world and some that were never seen (anywhere else) on land or sea rub shoulders together? Would you not think that they would refuse to speak to each other, even if they didn't fight in disastrous battle dreadful to witness? But go to New York and see.

I said to myself as I drove about New York that the gay, colorful city was like a huge flower garden where the gardener had sewn his seeds anyhow—crimson hollyhocks, golden sunflowers, dainty pinks, modest violets, tall white lilies, larkspurs, pansies and a thousand other early things helter skelter, leaving them to come up all among each other as they chose, and instead of the experiment being a failure it turned out a glorious success.—Mrs. C. N. Williamson in London Chronicle.

The Popcorn Seller.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

Several brides were telling each other where and how they first met their husbands. Finally one told her experience in a story as follows:

"Last summer," she said, "we spent as usual at our place, Ferncliff, in the mountains. We had a house full of guests, as usual, and one of the men—I consider it a breach of confidence for any girl to reveal the name of a suitor, so I will call him Mr. Beach—was devoted to me."

"I see," remarked the other, "you wish to conceal the denouement. To call your lover by his real name would spoil your story. Go on."

"I liked Mr. Beach very much, but he seemed rather prosaic. I wished for something more showy. Mother said that a practical man would wear better than a showy one, and I have found since my marriage that she was right."

"Oh, dear, why didn't you make it more of a mystery?"

"One day a circus came to town. We young people agreed that we would attend a performance, and all went to the tent in a body. We climbed the board seats to a convenient height, sitting in a bunch, Mr. Beach being beside me. We were much too early for the show, but enjoyed ourselves watching the country people come in. Near us a young fellow was arranging his wares, consisting of popcorn cakes. As soon as he had them laid out on his table, or, rather, board, he took up some packages and, holding up one, passed around the ring, dragging one leg after the other, the way circus people do, drawling:

"'These celebrated popcorn cakes are made of popcorn grown in the vale of Cashmere under the glow of the radiant faces of the most beautiful women of the world. Only 5 cents a package. Warranted fresh and luscious to the taste.'

"'What do you know about the vale of Cashmere?' called Mr. Beach, buying a package of the popcorn.

"'Mother's got a book of poems by a Mickey called Tom Moore,' said the fellow, handing up the change. And he strutted on with, 'Here's your celebrated popcorn cakes grown on the fertile plains of Palestine,' etc.

"The audience began to guy him good naturedly, but he smiled at any one doing so with a bewitching smile. Indeed, every one was watching him and wondering where next his celebrated popcorn would come from. He continued his rounds till there was a flourish of half a dozen dingy brass instruments, and the performance commenced.

"The only attractive feature of the show was that the actors were fine looking young men. They seemed rather amateurish, their performance consisting principally of gymnastic stunts. We stayed till the end, however, the girls of our party being interested in the fine appearance of the young Ajaxes.

"We had gone home, and I was dressing for dinner when, looking out of my window, I saw a young man dressed in the height of fashion coming up the walk. In a few minutes Susan handed me a card and a note of introduction from my friend, Adele Perkins. As soon as I had finished my toilet I went down into the drawing room to greet the caller.

"I never was so puzzled in my life. I was sure I had seen the man before, but where I could not tell. I was looking at him, trying in vain to place him, when his face lighted up with a smile. Then the truth—the undeniable truth—broke in upon me. He was the popcorn seller of the circus."

"Heavens!" exclaimed the listener, raising her hands.

"There he stood, evidently enjoying my surprise, while I, who had extended my hand, drew back.

"'I haven't come,' he said, 'to sell you a cake of the celebrated popcorn from the sunny land of Brazil. I have come to call upon the friend of my cousin, Adele Perkins. But before asking to be treated as a guest I will explain that the company of performers you saw today are all fellow students of mine at college. They need what they make in this manner to enable them to pursue their studies. I, on the contrary, have been born with a silver spoon in my mouth. But I am a practical chap, and my father, being of the same mind as myself, prefers that I shall work my way through college as a preparation for the duties that are expected to fall to me when I have finished my education. I have therefore joined my chums as popcorn seller and make bold to say that I keep up my end of the profits.'

"My dear, you can imagine my astonishment at hearing this howling swell tell how he came to be a member of a circus company. I invited him to dinner, but he declined because if he accepted he would be too late for the evening performance. After dinner I returned to my room, feigning a headache, and, taking a maid, slipped out a back door and went to the circus. We had barely got seated when the popcorn seller strutted by. I was curious to hear where his popcorn would come from this time."

"Where?"

"From the shining hills nestling about the south pole."

"And the denouement?"

"I never could banish the popcorn seller's smile."

"And where did Mr. Beach come in?"

"He didn't come in at all; he went out." ADELAIDE RUTH HILL.

HOLDING THE CELLO

An Anecdote of Duport and Emperor Nepoleon

Napoleon, in a way, was fond of music. It is admitted that the musical tastes of "the Corsican ogre" were not elevated. But for all that he loved singing so much that many a time after a concert he ordered the vocalists to come to the palace and sing before him and the Empress Josephine.

A curious anecdote is told of his brusque manner of dealing with artists. One night at a concert at the Tuileries, while Duport, the famous violoncellist, was performing a solo, the emperor suddenly entered. His majesty nodded his head approvingly and when the piece was finished said to Duport:

"How the deuce do you manage to keep that instrument so motionless?" And, taking up the cello, he tried to jam it between his spurred boots.

Poor Duport nearly fainted when he saw his treasure treated like a war horse. For several minutes he looked on, trembling from head to foot. At last, however, he darted forward and called out "Sire!" in such pathetic tones that the emperor handed him back the instrument.

Duport thereupon showed how the instrument was held, but every time his imperial master extended his hand to attempt to do it himself Duport threw himself back in alarm till finally Josephine whispered something to her husband, who burst out laughing and put an end to the cello lesson.—New York Sun.

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.

I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

AMERICA RESPONDS

The American people have again demonstrated their ability to act quickly in case of an emergency and have also shown that their purse strings are promptly loosened at the cry of distress. Altho Italy is a long distance away, reports show that the United States is far ahead of all other nations in the work for the relief of the stricken people in the districts that were recently visiting by earthquakes and tidal waves. Yesterday congress appropriated $800,000 for relief work. In the meantime American Ambassador Griscom at Rome has chartered a steamer of 8000 tons for two weeks and she is being loaded with medical supplies and provisions. This will cost $50,000. It is expected that the steamer will sail from Civita Vesshi, about 50 miles from Rome, on Thursday It will be placed under the orders of the Italian government

In addition to supplies, the American relief vessel will embark six doctors and twenty male and female nurses, three of the latter being American girls from New York, who volunteered their services.

American energy has been strongly manifested in the work looking to the relief of the earthquake sufferers. Ambassador Griscom and the members of his committee have assumed personal responsibility for the expenses of the expedition, relying upon the American public for funds.

Prior to engaging the steamer the Ambassador visited Foreign Minister Tittoni and asked him if it would be a real service to send south a vessel properly supplied. Signor Tittoni answered that it would be most appreciated for medical and food supplies were urgently needed.

Besides the relief steamer, the United States will soon have the Yatch Scorpion on the scene to be followed by the supply ships Culgoa and Yankton, from Suez. The latter vessels will be put at the disposal of the authorities with provisions and medical supplies intended for the American fleet cruising around the world.

The movement to start a motor boat club here is one which is worthy of and undoubtedly will meet with hearty support. Already there are a number of motor pleasure boats here and there is every reason why the building of more should be encouraged. With a club properly organized and managed a series of motor races could be arranged that would be quite an attractive feature of the annual regattas.

A puzzling question that has arisen in connection with the proposed recount of the ballots in the contest over the election of a councilman from the First ward is the authority of the city auditor to turn the ballots over to the council or a committee therefrom without an order from the court. After the count was made on the night of election day, the ballots were sealed by the election judges and now the question is, who has the right to open them?

Whether disease is always organic and never functional, as the orthodox medical men are moved to contend emphatically, is of no consequence to the sufferer whose troubles disappear at the mere suggestion that he is "healed." The mind cure and the various kinds of new thought healing have prepared the public to believe in the healing offered in the name of the church. That medical men are spurred to opposition to any of the unorthodox systems of healing out of pure jealousy is a rash assumption. It is natural that they should be sensitive over the claims of a science which has attracted and also taxed the best minds of all the ages. Faith in that science is too vital to the race to be trifled with.

Orthodox theology also offers its protest against diverting public attention from the time honored mission of the modern church. The church once practiced healing and abandoned it, possibly on the ground that real disease is too serious to warrant dealing with it as a side line. The doctors don't want disease to ravage the community or pay toll to them. They have no quarrel with "Don't Worry" clubs and welcome every form of "healing" that puts out an intelligible prospectus and calls a spade a spade.

Many Brilliant Attractions Coming to the Astoria Theatre

THE HOUSE OF BONDAGE

On Wednesday evening Miss Florence Roberts and her great company will appear at the Astoria theatre in the wonderful emotional play entitled "The House of Bondage" already a number of theatre parties are on the tapis and without doubt the Astoria theatre will hold the greatest and cultured audience in its history. Miss Roberts believes that strong supporting players enhance rather than diminish the luster of a star, a new point evidently not taken by other luminaries in the theatrical profession. Miss Roberts takes a sensible and comprehensive stand in the matter. Seat now selling.

THE GREAT DIVIDE

Next Friday at the Astoria Theatre Henry Miller's mammoth production of the vivid American drama "The Grate Divide" will be the attraction. This play has achieved a brilliant success from its very first performance, broke all previous records in point of financial success, received from unanimously critical approbation than all the rates of the plays combined produced in New York last season, played over six hundred performances on Broadway, at the Princess and Daly's Theatres, and then was brought back to the Academy of Music later in the year where it played to capacity business or more than six weeks. Altogether, "The Great Divide," during its different New York engagements, was seen by almost three quarters of a million people.

MUTINOUS CREW IS DISCHARGED

Trouble on Board Chilean Bark Ricart de Soler

Port Townsend, Jan. 5—With the second mate and ship's carpenter bearing severe bruises about the head, alleged to have been received in conflict with sailors, the Chilean bark Ricart de Soler has arrived here for government entry with her crew at the point of mutiny.

To relieve a situation that had disorganized control of the vessel, Captain Miguel de Angelo has discharged twenty one members of the crew. The sailors assert their experience on a hard passage was made unendurable by alleged harsh treatment. The bark was towed to the drydock at Tacoma for overhauling.

Members of the crew allege that a survey will show the ship struck while sailing in from the ocean. Captain De Angelo admits a narrow escape, but does to believe the ship is badly injured.

The Ricart de Soler was formerly the British ship Rliance and was raised from the bottom in a Chilean coast bay a few years ago, after having been wrecked and sunk by fire.

DEVIL'S AUCTION

Manager Yales' claim that the "Devil's Auction" is the oldest in name yet the newest in point of novelty, can well be substantiated in this the twenty eighth edition of this famous spectacle as everything is new from the time the curtain rises on the first act until it is rung down on the beautiful "Transformation Scene" 'Amen' (Love) at the close of the performance. Every act, novelty and feature is new as well as the scenery, and properties, etc. In fact not one old feature is retained, the theatre going public of Astoria have a treat in store for them on next Sunday night when the wonderful play will be seen at the Astoria theatre.

ARE YOU A MASON

Next Monday evening Manager Hanlin of the Astoria theatre announces the coming of the Bungalow theatre Stock company of Portland in the furiously fare comdy "Are you a Mason." On account of the Portland theatre being used for a mass meeting for the benefit of the earthquake sufferers, Manager Baker has consented to bring the company here next Monday and a large audience is confidently expected as "Are You a Mason" is one of the best things of the kind ever presented.

SEVERAL TUGS ARE LAID UP

Owing to Lease of San Francisco Vessels

San Francisco, Jan. 5—The Ship Owners & Merchants Tugboat company, chartoror of the Spreckel's fleet of tugs, has laid up six of the vessels in Oakland creek until the towing business improves. The Restless is the only vessel of the Spreckels fleet retained in service.

The tug Relif has been in active service twenty-five years and this is the first time she has been laid up for anything but repairs. The office of the Spreckles company has been given up, and all business is being transacted at the shipowners' office. It is understood that the lease of the vessels will culminate in a flat sale in a few weeks.

PROGRESS MADE IN HAINS TRIAL

Thornton on Stand in Own Behalf

Flushing, Jan. 4—Thornton Hains took the stand today in his own behalf and in a snappy manner related, under counsels interrogations, the story of his life and Captain Hains marital troubles. Sometimes the defendant made answers before the district attorney could interpose objection. When recess was taken he had told up to the excitement Captaian Hains was laboring under as the result of what his wife had told him concerning Annis.

C. R. Higgins, wife and child and Mrs. D. K. Warren will leave on Wednesday for Pasadena, California, where they will remain for three months.

The Fifty-first street sewer has been completed by the contractor, Charles Johnson, and is ready for inspection and acceptance by the city authorities.

This morning O. Paulsen received the first Chinook salmon that has been in the local markets this year. The fish weighed 43 pounds and bought at 12½ cents per pound.

An order was made in the probate court this morning setting the final account of the administrator of the estate of A. D. Rockefellow who for hearing on February 3.

The fire department was called out about 2 o'clock this afternoon by a alarm, resulting from a small chimney blaze at a residence in Uniontown. No damage of note resulted.

The steam schooner Olson & Mahony clered at the custom house today for San Francisco with a cargo of 1900 tons of wheat, loaded at Portland, and 400,000 feet of lumber, loaded at Rainier.

The funeral of the late John Lunga, who was found dead in bed at Deep River on Sunday, was held there this afternoon. Very little is known about the man and he had no relatives in this section of the country.

A application for admission to citizenship was filed in the county clerk's office last evening by Samuel Ontero Hendrickson, a native of Finland. The application will be presented to the circuit court on June 22.

This morning a scow dwelling that is occupied by two longshoremen and moored inside the railway trestle near the foot of Tenth street was torn loose by the strong east wind and wrecked. The house was smashed and all its contents were practicaly ruined.

An order was made in the probate court Monday afternoon appointing John L. Mattson as administrator of the estate of John Baker, deceased, and appointing Eric Manuala, John Arjala and Eric Thompson as appraisers.

Arrangements are being made by the A. & C. R. to put on a more frequent service between Portland and Rainier and way points. The schedule will include early trains in the morning each way and an afternoon train from Rainier and one leaving Portland late in the night.

T. M. Watt Copland of Aberdeen Wash., has been appointed British vice-consul at that place and assumed the office on the first of the year. The position is one created and the territory in its jurisdiction was formerly under the vice-consul stationed at Astoria.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Airola will open their new bathing establishment on the corner of Tenth and Duane streets tomorrow and invite all to call and see their new bath house, steam tub dry electric baths and massage treatment given. This bathing establishment is a long felt want in the middle of the city and no doubt will be well patronized.

The Columbia River Fishermens Protective union will hold a meeting this evening at its hall on Astor street. The principal business to be transacted is the election of delegates to the convention of the Oregon State Federation of Labor. Also to select a committee that will attend the coming session of the legislature for the purpose of guarding against adverse fish legislation.

The temperature this morning was the lowest recorded this winter as the therometer registered 28 above zero and at the time the wind was in the east and it blew hard from that direction all night. This morning Weather Forecaster Beals sent out warning for the coming of a northeast storm to be accompanied by high winds so it is probable that it will be colder this evening and later snow may fall.

For a number of years an old fisherman has been living in a scow a short distance blow Megler station on the Washington shore of the river. As he had not been seen around for some days some people, who lived in the vicinity, broke into his scow on Monday and found his dead body badly decomposed and mutilated by rats. His death was undoubtedly from natural causes, judging from the surrounding circumstances. His funeral was held at Chinook today.

The launch Hulda I. had a very severe experience this morning on the trip coming over from Chinook. She had a large crowd of men, women and children and when they came ashore here they looked half drowned and half frozen. The river was very rough with a cold wind blowing and frequently the nose of the launch went under, water going clear over her and immediately froze. The Hulda I. is one of the staunchest boats of her kind on the river and at no time was she in any danger but her master, Captain Hagblom, says that he never experienced worse conditions on the river.

Robert Carruthers has received word from Kissimmee City, Florida of the death of a friend there, C. R. Fountain, from the result of the bite of a rattlesnake. He was out deer hunting with some friends when he was bitten and although he received the best of treatment he died within a few hours. The rattlers in Florida are different from those of Oregon, says Mr. Carruthers, and their bite is always fatal to man or beast, a dog for instance always dying within a few minutes. The one that bit Mr. Fountain was five feet long and as thick as a man's leg, which is not an unusual size for them.

The second free day to customers in which the purchase price of all goods is returnable at Herman Wise's store, was announced today by a committee composed of C. J. Curtis and Thomas B. Loughery. The envelopes deposited by Herman Wise with the daily newspapers were opened and found ot contain Monday, December 28, as the lucky time. All customers of Wise's store having made purchasers on the above date are requested to present their sales slips and the money will be refunded. This is the second time Herman Wise has given his customers an advantage of a "free day" besides distributing three pianos.

A preliminary debate was held at the high school yesterday afternoon to select a team to represent the school in the interscholastic debating league contests. There were 14 contestants yesterday and eight of these were selected to engage in the final debate on Friday when the three pupils to compose the team will be chosen. The first of the interscholastic debates in which the local team will participate will be with the Tillamook school and will probably be held in this city on January 20. The question to be discussed will be, "Resolved that cities should own and operate all public utilities," the Astoria team supporting the affirmative.

R. A. Hawkins was over from Ilwaco last evening.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the measure now before congress asking that Saddle and Humbug mountains be made a national park. With that end in view Senator Fulton has prepared a bill and in all likelihood it will be passed at the present session. Should the government recognize the importance of setting aside this district for national purposes, it will preserve for all time to come, one of the most natural and delightfully located forests in the west. Saddle mountain has many attractions and can be made more so by government aid. It is just 17 miles from Astoria and from present indications will have a railroad leading to it within the near future.

No trace has been found of James Burrows, Henry Sanborn and Loren Cogdil, three well-known Hoquiam lads whose empty canoe was found drifting in the lower bay by Allen Chenoise, an Indian. They have been missing since a week ago today, when last seen near the mouth of Humptulips River. The canoe contained two guns and a box of provisions. The boys were hunting, and it is supposed they went out on a sand spit that the canoe became loosened and floated away, and that they were overwhelmed by the incoming tide. A large force of men from Burrows's camp hunted all Sunday, the search being taken up by 100 men today. The accident occurred near the place where Hay Karr was drowned four years ago.

A petition is being circulated by D. Malagamba and others directly interested, for signatures of the property owners asking the council to create a new drainage district in Adair's Astoria and discard the old Adair drain the construction of drainsby leading down Thirty-third, Thirty-fourth, Thirty-fifth, Thirty-sixth, Thirty-seventh streets and thus provide means for carrying away the large amount of surface water that does such damage to property in that section of the city every winter. One trouble with the present drain is that it runs across private property and also diverts the waters from its natural channels, whereas by constructing drains down the streets named, it is believed by those interested the water will be carried away without injury to the adjacent property.

There will probably be some sort of a measure introduced at the coming session of the legislature to divide the work of Judge McBride of this judicial district. Two bills are now under consideration, but which one will be submitted has not been fully decided upon. One plan is to name an assistant judge and leave the district as it is, while the other is to create a new district, but dividing the present one. The Fifth judicial district includes Clackamas, Washington, Columbia and Clatsop counties and if the division is made, Columbia and Clatsop counties will comprise one district, while Clackamas and Washington counties will comprise the other. This would mean that Judge McBride would be the judge in the upper district while a new judge would be appointed for Clatsop and Columbia counties. The division would also necessitate the appointment of another district attorney. The latter bill is expected to meet with considerable opposition as each of the new districts will be anxious to retain Judge McBride, who is everywhere recognized as one of the ablest jurists in the state.

As the council has adjourned until Friday afternoon for the purpose of taking up the matter of a recount of the ballots cast at the recent election for councilman from the First ward for the two-year term, Auditor Anderson has requested City Attorney Abercrombie for a written opinion as to his right to turn the ballots over to the council or to any other persons without an order from the circuit court and that opinion will be filed before the meeting on Friday. Despite the fact the council is to meet especially for the purpose of taking up this contest, many are of the opinion that there will be no recount of the ballots unless action is brought in the courts. Mr. Carney stated yesterday that he favors holding a recount and does not want the office unless has been elected, but the assertion is made that his attorney will insist on the protest being brought in accordance with the same laws by the filing of an action in the courts and notice being served by the sheriff on the interested persons. To do this will entail considerable expense, and will mean that the contest will necessarily be delayed for some time.

HERMAN WISE Astoria's RELIABLE CLOTHIER

As the steamer Lurline was going up the river on Monday evening and had landed at Pillar Rock a young man, who was a passenger, attempted to go ashore and falling overboard was drowned. The man wanted to get off at Altoona but he was too intoxicated to be permitted to do so as it was known that his home was at Pillar Rock. He broke away from those who were assisting him ashore and stumbled into the river. Every effort was made to save him but he sank immediately and his body was not recovered.

The weather in Astoria during the month of December was about normal according to the record of Weather Observer Lamar. The maximum thermometer was 52 on the first and the minimum 30 on the Eighteenth Nineteenth and Twentieth and the prevailing direction of the wind was east while the rainfall was 10.51 inches. There were 13 clear days, 14 cloudy and 4 partly cloudy.

No official report has been received concerning Clasop county's portion of the state tax so the exact amount which must be raised for payment to the state treasurer is not known as yet, altho an estimate made some days ago showed that it will be about $27,300 or $5000 more than last year. For this reason there is a possibility that the county court may not fix the amount of its tax levy tomorrow.

DECLINES TO GIVE REASONS

Roosevelt Refuses to Answer Questions of Senate

Washington, Jan. 6—President Roosevelt in a special message to the senate today declines to permit the attorney general to tell why he failed to bring action against the United States Steel Corporation on account of the absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Co. The message is in response to a resolution introduced by Senator Culbertson.

The reading of the message elicited the closest attention of the small number of senators present. His statement that congress had not the authority to call for the reasons of attorney general in rendering an opinion, elicited smiles from the senators. He declared he had known every detail of the transaction and stated that after the entire matter had been placed before him, he did not feel it his duty to object to it. He said that representatives of the steel corporation stated they desired to make the purchase in order to relieve business depression that would follow failure of the big corporation.

Flushing, Jan. 6—Thronton Hains cross examination was continued today. He was asked many questions concerning his conduct toward Mrs. Claudia Hains, during her husbands's absence in the Philippines and, angered by these interrogatories, made a heated protest to the court. Hains on several occasions admitted he could not recall certain details of his testimony on Monday.

REARING PONDS ARE NEEDED

Things Required to Increase Runs of Salmon

Chinook, Wash. Jan. 6, 1909.

Editor Budget: In the Astoria Weekly Budget of Dec. 30, appears an article "Of Interest to Fisheries" a minority report of the fish commission selected by Governor Mead of Washington and sent to him, written by Ed. Rosenberg. In one part, the article says: "We also urge you to recommend that on the Columbia river no fishing appliances be permitted to use a smaller mesh than seven inches stretch measure. Fish traps and seines at present catch salmon as small as two pounds. The Chinook salmon should be permitted to grow to 20 pounds and more. With nothing less than seven inch mesh operated in the Columbia river fishing appliances, the small salmon will have a chance to become large salmon."

Mr. Rosenberg is misleading, the public when he says that those small salmon would grow larger if not caught. The small salmon that Mr. Rosenberg is referring too are called grelies and are a stunt male Chinook salmon (no female of this kind ever appear) and its weight is from two to five pounds and when it comes into the Columbia river is a matured fish as much as a salmon, that is 20 pounds and more. They come in with the same intention as a fifty pound salmon to dispose of their milt and die. It is amusing that Mr. Rosenberg who is the head of the fishermen's union, don't know better. I know that Mr. Lorntsen the secretary of the union, holds the same views and furthermore Mr. Lorntsen's view is, that, if the hatchery men did not kill the adult salmon after they have taken the spawn and milt from them, they would go to sea again. If men are to continue to mislead the public as they are doing, the federal government officials will take a hand in it and they know that the small salmon that Mr. Rosenberg is writing about are a matured fish and they also know that the adult salmon after they have disposed of their spawn and milt die. The only fish of the salmon spieces that comes into the Columbia and goes to sea again after having dipsosed of their spawn and milt is the Steelhead but it belongs to the trout family more than to the salmon family.

Mr. Rosenberg is writing about fishermen that have fished in the Columbia river for 20 years as authority. With all respect to those gentlemen, I don't think that Mr. Rosenberg will find anyone who don't hold the same views as he and Mr. Lorntsen do in regard to the small salmon because on the surface it looks like as the small fish ought to grow larger. But ask the same men if they ever caught a salmon in the lower river that had been to the spawning grounds and deposited its spawn and milt and I am sure their answer will be no. I have fished in the Columbia for 14 years, from 1882 to 1896, and the six last years I fished summer and winter, in fact the whole year, when the law permitted one, but I never caught, neither did hear of any being caught that had been to the spawning grounds. If Mr. Lorntsen would go the the trouble to visit a spawning ground he would be able to assure himself of those facts. While I have gained my knowledge about salmon, the little I know, was not as a gillnet fisherman, but [illegible] the hatcheries where I have been for the last [illegible] years.

If we have the fishing interest at heart, we should not try to mislead anyone, but try to work in harmony and find out the best results for increasing the salmon in the Columbia river and this will not be done by discriminating against certain kinds of gear or shortening of the season. I am of the firm belief that we are getting at the present time enough spawn, yes, more than enough, if the salmon fry after they are hatched are taken proper care of. We are told many times and Mr. Rosenberg is aware of it, as we had the best fish culturist of the northwest with us in Seattle when we first me there as a commission appointed by Governor Mead, that civilization has brought forth the worst enemies of the salmon fry, which is true. Civilization has brought logging, sawmills, irrigtion ditches, sewerage from the cities, all on account of civiliaztion and all are fatal to the salmon fry. A log with bark on contains chemicals. A samwill which as a rule is built on the river banks and has land made of sawdust, is very detrimental and then the sewerage helps to pollute the waters. But the worst enemy that civilization has brought forth for the salmon fry is the irrigation ditches which kill salmon fry by the millions. Then we have the natural enemy, the trout, that devour more salmon fry than any one is aware of. We have also one more enemy of the salmon fry and it is the larger fry. There is in every stream where salmon frequent, whether they be hatchery streams or not, a certain amount of salmon fry that stay in the streams from 12 to 14 months. They then become a fingerling from four to six inches long. Those fingerlings will prey upon the fry that is turned out the year after. They do not devour as many fry as a trout per day, but being so many of them the loss is larger.

When we know that we have all those impediments and enemies of our fry why don't we do something that will lessen those evils. My theory has always been and always will be to get away from the upper rivers where those conditions exist. We have many good places for hatcheries and rearing ponds down to the mouth of the Columbia. We could get the spawn from the hatcheries that we have in the upper rivers but in these hatcheries they would then be only eyeing stations. When the spawn is ready to be shipped they should be sent to the hatcheries at the mouth of the river, hatch out the fry and retain them in the retaining ponds connected with the hatchery. Feed the fry and keep them eight months when they will be fingerlings, from three to five inches long. Then liberate them and as they are close to the salt water they are out [illegible] all danger both from civilization and natural enemies.

We have since 1900 turned out salmon fry in the Columbia, if properly handled, sufficient to stock the river with fish, but there has not come into the river at any season over 2,0000,00 of Chinook salmon whereas we have truned out each season from 30,000,000, to 50,000,000 fry. Say, for example, that the government has two hatcheries with rearing ponds that would hold 4,000,000 fry. The state of Oregon and Washington likewise, that would make 12,000,000 fry fed in ponds. If this [illegible] done and the fry libreated close to the ocean after being eight months old, we will in four year time have such results that we will wonder why we did not do this before. I marked in 1901-02 and 1903, a few thousand fingerlings in Chinook hatchery. They were eight months old and from 3½ to 5 inches long. They were kept in a water tank and well fed. All did well and the death rate was very small. The mark was a "U" in the tail and if we could get back large salmon in comparison with the few fingerlings marked the Columbia would be stocked with them. This returning of the marked fish has illustrated to me that retaining ponds are what we are in need of. The fishermen know that I am right as they have caught the marked salmon. We have in the Chinook hatchery a rearing pond that will hold 1,000,000 fry and we will begin feeding the fry in the month of March. If we get the hatcheries and rearing ponds close to the ocean we will get so many salmon that no one will think of discriminating against any kind of gear, neither will there be room to talk about the shortening of the season or federal control, and the grelies will have a chance to deposite their milt without any, or take the chance as the big salmon do, to be caught. With this end in view I hope that all that have the fishing interest at heart will give their time and talents and stop misleading the public with stuff that there is no foundation to.

NIC HANSEN,
Supt. Chinook Fish Hatchery.

COMPANY MUST PAY ITS FINE

Decision Against Chicago & Alton Company

Washington, Jan. 6—The rebate in the case of the government against the Chicago and Alton in which the company was fined $60,000 on a charge of making refund to Kansas City packers was today decided in favor of the government by the supreme court. The case came from the Northern district of Illinois.

MILL BURNED AT BELLINGHAM

Bellingham, Wash., Jan. 6—The plant of the Puget Sound Mill & Timber Company, the biggest shingle mill in the world, burned last night with a loss of $415,000. The company carried $150,000 insurance. W. S. Cleveland, a sawfiler, was unable to escape, and was burned to death. Several other workmen had narrow escapes.

The fire started in a hot-box and spread with fearful rapidly before a fierce wind. Automatic sprinklers checked the flams for a moment, but the fire department was hindered in its fight by the lack of water pressure, and when the mains were full the fire was too far advanced to be checked.

A Bride's Outfit.

A part of the curious list of Lady Littleton's wedding outfit 200 years ago is as follows: "A black paddysway gown and coat, a pink unwatered pabby sute of cloaths, a gold stuff sute of cloaths, a white worked with sneal sute of cloaths."

RELIGIOUS WARS NEAR CALCUTTA

Mohamedans and Hindus Engage in Riots

Calcutta, Jan. 6—The religious riots between Mohammedans and Hindus have taken a more serious turn, requiring the intervention of British troops today at Titagher. The troops fired on the Hindus. The Hindus had attacked a mosque because the Mohammedans had sacrificed cows. The Hindus destroyed sacred furniture and partially demolished the walls of the mosque The inflamed Mohammedans gathered in defense of the mosque and were surrounded by troops, which formed a barrier between the rival religionists. The Hindus assualted the soldiers in an effort to get at the Mohammedans, compelling the soldiers to fire.

ASTORIA THEATRE

FLORENCE ROBERTS TONIGHT

Regarding the presentation of "The House of Bondage" at the Astoria theatre tonight by Florence Roberts and her splendid company. The St. Paul Pioneer Press says the play is one of the most absorbing productions ever seen in St. Paul.

It takes instant hold of the heart, the impulsations sometimes being so strong that one would like to jump to the end and find out the outcome of the struggle. Dealing as it does with the internal conflict between the flesh and the spirit, between the sense of duty and of selfish desire, it makes a universal appeal. It is constant in its grip, in that the struggle is on shifting ground and none knows the victor until the end. The situations are extremly tense in several of the scenes and handled by a quartet of artists as Florence Roberts, Arthur Forrest, Thurlow Bergen and Ann Warrington, the utmost is made of them. Each one has his or her chance for dramatic work and each rises magnificently to the occasion. The part of 'Lady Joan' offers Miss Roberts ample oprortunity for her talents, Mr. Forrest shows the fitness of the polished and able actor, Mr. Bregen is happily cast and Misls Warrington does admirable work."

THE GREAT DIVIDE

Next Friday at the Astoria Theatre Henry Miller's mammoth production of the vivid American drama "The Grate Divide" will be the attraction. This play has achieved a brilliant success from its very first performance, broke all previoos records in point of financial success., received from unanimously critical approbation than all the rates of the plays combined produced in New York last season, played over six hundred performances on Broadway, at the Princess and Daly's Theatres, and then was brought back to the Academy of Music later in the year where it played to capacity business or more than six weeks. Altogether, "The Great Divide." during its different New York engagements, was seen by almost three quarters of a million people.

DEVIL'S AUCTION

Manager Yales' claim that the "Devil's Auction" is the oldest in name yet the newest in point of novelty, can well be substiantated in this the twenty eighth edition of this famous spectacle as everything is new from the time the curtain rises on the first act until it is rung down on the beautiful "Transformation Scene" 'Amen" (Love) at the close of the performance. Every act, novelty and feature is new as well as the scenery, and properties, etc. In fact, not one old feature is retained, the theatre going public of Astoria have a treat in store for them on next Sunday night when the wonderful play will be seen at the Astoria theatre.

ARE YOU A MASON

Next Monday evening Manager Hanlin of the Astoria theatre announces the coming of the Bungalow theatre Stock company of Portland in the furiously fare comdy "Are you a Mason." On account of the Portland theatre being used for a mass meeting for the benefit of the earthquake sufferers, Manager Baker has consented to bring the company here next Monday and a large audience is confidently expected as "Are You a Mason" is one of the best things of the kind ever presented

Changes in the Name of the Famous 2-Mile Straight

In the 'New Bismarck Reminiscences," just issued by Professor von Elering of Berlin, there is a record of how many bottles of champagne and cigars Bismarck consumed before the great breakdown of his physical system some ten years previous to his retirement from the chancellorship.

"Dr. Schwennigen had just taken the sick prince in hand, trying to save him from an untimely grave," says the author, "when I called upon him at his country place near Hamburg.

"Bismarck told me of the strict regimen as to food and drink to which he was now subject and added: 'Well, I suppose 10,000 bottles of champagne and 100,000 cigars are all a mortal can stand. I have always been a giant as to stature and stomach, and such, I now find out, were my limits. More's the pity.'

"'Why, your grace,' I said, 'you cannot have drunk as much as that in your busy life.'

"'Oh, yes, I've been figuring up,' replied the chancellor. 'During my long diplomatic service and my career as a statesman I never drank less than two bottles of champagne for dinner. That counts up in the long run, and imagine the quantities of brandy, beer, red wine and white wine and cordials that I have put away besides—enough to float a battleship.'

"'As to cigars, before this sickness came on I never threw away a stump until a new cigar was lighted. When I traveled from Hamburg to Berlin or from Frankfort to Berlin, for instance, I never left off smoking for a single moment.'"

Time in Turkey.

By the Turkish method of measuring time it is 12 o'clock at sunset. As that varies daily, it is a difficult matter for two men to keep an appointment on time except at the vernal or the autumnal equinox.

Texas.

Texas means "friends." The name was given by Ponce de Leon to the Asimnis Indians.

Siberia's Rivers.

Siberia has many navigable rivers The Obi, the Yenisei, the Lena, and the Amur, with their tributaries, make communication easy between the interior of Asia and the Arctic and the Pacific oceans. These rivers are, however, only navigable for a small part of the year, owing to the severity of the long Siberian winter.

The Dardanelles, which is so familiar today, meant to our grandfathers not the Hellespont but merely "two ancient and strong castles of Turkey, one of which is in Roumania and the other in Natolia." The famous strait was known in early Victorian geography by the name of Gallipoli. But the brave, dominating castles swept away both Hellespont and Gallipoli and gave their own name to the two mile passage. These venerable castles, built in 1659 to "secure the Turkish fleet from the insults of the Venetians," were known according to an early geographer, as the Old Dardanelles to distinguish them from two others at the entrance of the strait, one of which "stands in like manner in Asia and the other in Europe" and called the New Dardanelles.

In spite of the four castles, however, the passage was forced by a British fleet in 1807. In later years fortifications of a formidable nature have been constructed between the two sets of castles, and these are now properly the Dardanelles. The ultimate responsibility for naming the famous strait rests with Dardanus, the gentleman who crossed on his inflated skin from Samothrace to Asia and founded the town which afterward became the city of Troy.—London Chronicle

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.

I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

Astoria Clay Product Co.

Offers a Limited Amount of Stock for DEVELOPMENT PURPOSES

An enterprise of merit with full equipment ready to manufacture Brick and other Clay products

The company is composed of a number of Astoria business men who are anxious to establish this industry for developement of Astoria's interests in the erection of more permanent buildings.

It has passed the experimental stage; has raw material on its own ground sufficient to supply the plant for the next 50 years; is clear of debt, and has a strong market.

The object of selling a quantity of stock at this time is to secure sufficient capital for operating purposes and supply additional machinery. It's an Astoria enterprise with a good future. The stock sale is limited.

The Astoria high school is again to participate in the interscholastic debating league, which will include teams from practically all the high schools in the state. The training secured by pupils in these contests should result in considerable good, and in addition to the benefits attained by those participating, interest in studying the questions discussed is aroused among the others. Last year the team representing the local school made an excellent showing. If this year's team can do as well, it will have no occasion to feel ashamed of the result.

WALL STREET INQUIRY

Gov. Hughes' appointment of a committee to investigate the practices of the New York Stock Exchange will interest the whole country. The language of the governor shows that the committee is chosen to gather facts and inquire into the views of prominent business men and other authorities regarding "what changes, if any, are advisable in the laws of the state bearing upon speculation in securities and commodities, or relating to the protection of investors, or with regard to the instrumentalities and organization used in dealing in securities and commodities which are the subject of speculation."

This inquiry is of interest all over the United States because New York is the financial center of the country; because the clearings of its banks amount to double those of the banks of the other cities which make reports that get into the papers; and because the bulk of the speculation in stocks and bonds or the entire country is made in New York. No blow is intended at legitimate speculation in securities or commodities. The stock and produce exchanges are an essential part of the machinery of modern trade.

The difference between gambling and legitimate speculation is vital. This must always be kept in mind in estimating the value of the work which the great bourses perform in the economy of modern society. Gambling is an afterthought. The cornerers and plungers had no hand in the creation of the great exchanges. They are excrescences which ought to be abolished, and Gov. Hughes' committee will doubtless recommend some plan whereby they may be abolished. To strike down the gamblers, however, without impeding the legitimate operations of the exchanges is a difficult problem. The country will await with interest the plan which the New York committee will urge to accomplish this.

Earthquakes now and years ago differ little, if at all. Buildings are razed and fires add to the destruction. The waves sweep in from the sea as they did at Lisbon in 1755 and as they have done heretofore on the shores of Italy and Sicily. The same forces are at work beneath the earth's surface as were at work one, two, three, ten or twenty centuries ago. The causes are the same, whatever they may be. We now know more about the manifestations, but very little more about the cause of earthquake. Fewer persons are superstitous than in the olden times. Fewer now attribute earthquakes and tidal waves to divine wrath or ill will against a sinful people. However, the attempt to give a scientific explanation of earthquakes is not modern. Lucretius, the Roman poet believed the sea found its way under Mount Aetna and thus the steam and vapor were caused and he thought earthquakes due to vapors, even though the vapors did not find their way to the surface. Lucretius lived 95 to 52 B. C. But long before that efforts were mdae to give a scientific explanation. Aristotle (384 to 322 B. C.) thought earthquakes and volcanoes due to vapors. Strabo (66 to 24 B. C.) advanced the doctrine of the upheaval and subsidence of the land. It is natural that people, in the midst of such a distructive and suddenly manifested power as the earthquake and the tidal wave, should attribute it to divine wrath, rather than to eternal forces ever at work as is the force of gravity. But today more look upon an earthquake as a manifestation of permanent laws than as a special visitation of a power that may be exercised or with held at will.

Look for a bill to put some sort of "inter-sky traffic" hopple on the airship business among the freak legislation this winter.

Election's aftermath keeps us guessing, too, so we have no rest, whether it is coming, going or gone.

There's a crowned head recruit waiting for the "let us alone" movement to pitch camp in Germany.

HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

AS THE OLD YEAR DIES—

Pay off all your old grudges. Never mind about [illegible] debts[illegible] is no doubt what[illegible] but a good lawyer will [illegible] to collect them for your creditors but you will have to attend to your grudges yourself.

Put your indigestion into the hands of an expert physician. How can you expect to hold to the resolutions that you are [illegible] to make and entertain chronic indigestion twenty-four hours a day too?

Explain to your wife that you mean to be more saving and careful during the coming year and you feel sure that she loves you enough to help you retrench. She will th[illegible] encouraged to start saving by [illegible] you a twenty-five cent necktie for a Christmas present.

Buying Christmas presents is easy, but paying for them is different.

Take all your old grouches out and bury them. You will during the closing holiday season accumulate such a fresh supply that an ordinary house will not hold you unless you have a clearing out of the old stock before the holiday rush of goods comes in.

Begin to fret about the way the coal in the bin is disappearing. A warm season may occur during the winter and thus the coal may hold out, so if your fretting were not already done the family would have had to get along without the annual coal worry.

NEW BATH HOUSE

Will be opened next Wednesday at the corner of Tenth and Duane streets, and will be run Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week Seperate department for ladies. Steam and tub baths. Dry electric baths will be added shortly. Pattents received for massage treatment as before, Patrons can leave their changes of under clothes with us to be laundried.

DISMISSES ALL LAND SUITS

Proceedings Against Hyde-Benson Claims Quashed

Practically all the suits brought by the government some time ago for the purpose of cancelling the patents to the alleged fraudulent Hyde-Benson lieu selections in this state, have been dismissed by Judge Wolverton, in the federal court, on motion of United States Attorney McCourt, upon the ground that an investigation of the facts has indicated that the lieu "scrip" came into the possession of innocent purchasers, and was used by them without intent to defraud in the selection of other lands. How far reaching the action of the government in dismissing these suits may be, remains to be seen, but in any event it indicates that no matter how fradulently the base was obtained, if it can be shown that it passed into the hands of innocent purchasers, unfamiliar with the methods employed by the big firm of California bogus operators, it is the disposition of the government to protect these innocent purchasers as far as possible.

The action of the United States Attorney in dismissing the suits affecting patents to the Hyde-Benson selections does not affect those cases where no patents have been issued, as proceedings against them come before the land department at Washington, and in addition, those who purchased the scrip for the latter slections must have done so with their eyes open to the fraudulent character of the same, as the indictments against both Hyde and Benson had been presented by the federal grand jury of the district of Columbia before the transfer of title, so it is claimed.

About 1740 acres are affected by the court's ruling.

LUMBERMEN TO VISIT PINCHOT

Also Go Before Ways and Means Committee

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 6—A delegation presentating the lumber industry of the entire Pacific coast, made up of loggers and lumber and shingle manufactures, will leave for Washington, D. C., this week in time to reach the national capital by January 12.

On that date they hope to meet Gifford Pinchot, chief forester of the United States forest service, who has expressed a desire to meet the representatives of the nation's lumber interests and discuss the conservation problem that just now is playing such a prominent part in the making up of the new tariff schedules.

In addition to meeting Pinchot, the delegation expects also to furnish the ways and means committee with additional data concerning the lumber and shingle industry.

The personnel of the delegatioun that will represent the Pacific coast at the coming conferences is not yet complete. An effort is being made to induce the most prominent and influential men in the industry to go to Washington and fight for the retention of the duty on lumber and shingles. D. E. Skinner of San Francisco, who is president of the Port Blakely Mill company, is the chairman of the Pacific coast lumber committee.

....REGULATION OF BAR FISHING....

Recommended by Fish Warden's Annual Report

In his annual report for the year 1908 submitted to the board of fish commissioners, Fish Warden McAllister says the output of the fisheries on the Oregon side of the Columbia river was as follows: Chinooks, 14,447,797 pounds; steelheads, 2,588,773 pounds; silversides, 1,033,185; bluebacks, 393,791 pounds; total, 18,463,540 pounds. In addition to the above there were 87,772 pounds of tules, 1,001,036 pounds of strugeon and 494,366 pounds of shad taken on this side of the river. While the catch of Chinook and silversides shows a decrease, the increased amount of bluebacks and steelheads taken makes the total catch 311,603 pounds greater than in 1907.

The output of the four hatcheries operated by the state of Oregon is given as 8,075,240 fry, while the total number of young salmon turned into the Columbia river and its tributaries by the Oregon, Washington and government hatcheries is as follows: Chinooks, 27,719,172; silversides, 2,638,161; steelheads, 228,303.

The report recommends the enactment of legislation governing the Columbia river fisheries as follows:

First. Repeal all laws, now inforce, for the protection of salmon, and enact a new law comprehending the entire subject.

Second. Make the closed season for salmon on the Columbia river from March 1st, noon, to May 1st, noon, and from August 15th, noon, to September 15th noon. Also a Sunday close of twenty-four hours during the entire year.

Third. Closed seasons on the Willamette, north of the suspension bridge at Oregon City, from March 1st, noon, to May 1st, noon, and from June 15th, noon to November 1st, noon. A Sunday close of twenty-four hours during the entire year.

Fourth. Close the Willamette, south of the Oregon City bridge, against fishing of any kind, excepting with hook and line.

Fifth Prohibit fishing for salmon in the Clackamas and Sandy rivers, or within one-half mile of their mouths, except with hook and line.

Sixth. Establish joint regulations with the State of Washington on that portion of the Columbia river which the recent United States court decision gives them.

Seventh. Provide protection for sturgeon, by prohibiting the use of baited lines in fishing for same.

Eighth. Provide for the protection of salmon and other fish, by requiring all owners any of irrigation ditch, mill race, or mining ditch, to put in and maintain, when required to do so by the master fish warden, at the intake of said ditches or mill race, an obstruction that will prevent the young fish from being carried into same by the current.

Ninth. Provide a bounty for the scalps of seals and sea lions.

Tenth. Pass a law prohibiting fishing at the mouth of the Columbia river, and establishing a deadline beyond which no person will be permitted to fish.

Eleventh. That an appropriation of $15,000.00 be made for the building of a central hatchery station for the Columbia river.

Twelfth. That the appropriation for the expenses of the Master Fish Warden be increased to $3,400.00 annually.

Thirteenth. That the appropriation for the expenses of the Deputy Fish Warden be increased to $1,000.00 annually.

The Horological Revenge.

They were looking over their wedding presents. He pointed to a small bronze clock. "Seems to me," he said, "that I have seen that before."

"You have," she returned serenely. "You gave it to my first husband and me for a wedding present. When we divided the things after the divorce he kept the clock, and now he is sending it back to us."—New York Press.

HOMER BLACK FOUND GUILTY

Will Serve Term in the Penitentiary

Salem, Jan. 6—Homer Black, charged with assualt with attempt to kill and rob Dr. Clarence Robertson, was found guilty in Judge Burnett's department of the Marion county circuit court this afternoon. Though the evidence was largely circumstantial, the jury was out only half an hour.

The penalty is from one to ten years in the penitentiary. The crime was committed in this city on the night of November 20, while Dr. Robertson was on his way to make a professional call. The physician was shot through the body with a bullet from a 45 caliber revolver.

He has fully recovered from the injury. Black was caught by deputies from the sheriff's office within a short time after the shooting occurred. He has been in jail since waiting trial.

HOLIDAYS IN THE NEHALEM

Several Entertainments Held In That District

Elsie, Jan. 6—The holiday season of Christmas and New Year was passed quietly but none the less joyously in Mishawaka and Vine Maple districts. There was no public entertainments, but several private dinner parties were held with Christmas trees for the younger ones accompanied with visits from Santa Claus who arrived on time, taking into consideration the condition of the roads. A very enjoyable dinner and tree were given to invited friends and neighbors by Mr. and Mrs. David Tweedle, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Myllenbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ridderbush and a New Years dinner by Mr. and Mrs. A. McKay, and others thruout the district entertained. Every one is well and happy and looks forth to a prosperous New Year.

ABOUT ASTORIA

First citizenship papers were granted today to Adolf Niclaus Nordstrom, a native of Sweden.

The steamer Thos L. Wand cleared at the custom house today for San Francisco with a cargo of 678,000 feet of lumber, loaded at Rainier.

John E. Johnson, the Grays river rancher who has been ill with the grip for some time, was in the city today on business.

A civil service examination is being held at the federal building today for the position of deputy collector and day inspector in the local customs service. The only applicant taking the examination is James P. McCrea.

There are no changes this week in the prices paid by the local merchants to the farmers of the vicinity for their livestock and produce. If the present weather continues, however, the price of eggs and potatoes will make a sudden and material raise.

Mrs. Thomas Fannon, an elderly lady residing on Ninth street met with a very severe accident last evening. She was engaged in spreading ashes on the walk about her residence, when she slipped and fell breaking her right limb between the ankle and knee.

Cathlamet is continuing to be the breeder of sensations, the least being three street fights in one day between prominent citizens. The most important was the one between Sheriff Flanders and Prosecuting Attorney Snelling, in which the latter not only got the worst of it but also a black eye.

S. E. Harris, who has been quite ill for several days, is getting along as his attending physician, Dr. Alfred Kinney, expected and is still a very sick man. A number of rumors have been circulated on the street about his condition but these have been highly exaggerated.

James Hannaford received a long distance telephone message on Tuesday afternoon from La Camas, Washington, stating that his brother, Edward, had been killed in the pulp mill there but gave no particulars. Mr. Hannaford has gone to La Camas to take charge of the body.

The Astoria school board held a regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening at which all the members were present, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather. There was no business to come except of a routine nature, auditing bills being the principal one.

The city election was held at Warrenton today. There was only one ticket in the field consequently there was no contest. The candidates were V. H. Coffey for mayor; George Warren and C. F. Lester for councilmen, each for a term of two years.

About 30 feet of the railroad track between Warrenton and Hammond was washed out last night with the result that the trains today could not reach either Hammond or Fort Stevens. Repairs are now being made and it is possible that the regular schedule will be resumed tomorrow.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Memorial Lutheran church will be entertained Thursday afternoon by Mrs. Asmus Brix at her home on Exchange street. As it is the annual meeting there will be election of officers and other business transacted. All members are urged to be present, and the friends of the society cordially invited.

Weather conditions were too severe for the steamer Lurline to leave up the river on Tuesday evening and during the night she rolled so heavily that her smoke stack jumped out of its place. This morning it was placed back in position but she will not leave up the river until her regular schedule time and not then unless the weather moderates.

The steamer T. J. Potter had quite a hard time in making landings while coming down the river on Tuesday night. She ran into the wharf at Rainier and damaged her guards some but when she reached Astoria it was difficult to handle her and she broke part of her stem off against the wharf. Her injuries were not such that she could not leave up the river as usual but some late.

The man who fell overboard from the steamer Lurline when near Altoona on Monday night proves to have been Fred Brandon and judging from papers found in the clothing left in the man's stateroom he is thought to have been a sailor. As soon as the alarm was given, Captain McCollough ordered a boat lowered and a search was made but no trace of the man could be found.

The Flytes timber Syndicate of timber owners have just sold a section of timber located north of Hoquiam to the Grays Harbor Logging Company, a nowly formed corporation, for $250,000. The tract contains 50,000,000 feet of fine timber. It was reported two weeks ago that this same syndicate is 117,000,000 feet of timber located on the Humptulips river to O. P. Burrows for a like amount.

The weather conditions last night and today have been peculiar as during the night a strong northeast wind blew with a small fall of fine snow and it froze as fast as it fells but the lowest reading of the weather bureau thermometer was 25 and during the morning it rose and rain fell but froze in sleet. The wind continues in the northeast and with new storm warnings ordered of the same character it gives promise of being again cold tonight and another freeze up.

A petition was filed in the city auditor's office this morning calling attention to the necessity for improving Thirty-ninth street, between Franklin and Grand avenues. The petition says that should the council deem it not advisable to make the improvement in accordance with the former petition filed recently, it requests that a street be built by grading to a width of 37½ feet thru the center, planking 16 feet wide and constructing sidewalks six feet in width.

A number of Astoria merchants are in Portland attending the annual meeting of the Oregon Grocers & Merchants Association, which is one of the most active and progressive organizations of the state. Charles Johnson and Lester McLeod are the delegates from the local association but are accompanied by J. T. Ross, Senator Scholfield, Fred. Johnson, Charles Johnson and B. J. Sloop. Mr. Ross and Senator Scholfield will make addresses before the convention on pertinent topics. One feature of the meeting will be to prepare bills to be introduced at the coming session of the legislature for the protection of their interest and the railroad rate question will be discussed. An effort will be made by the Astoria delegation to have the National Grocers Association, that will be in session in Portland next June, spend one day in Astoria.

An ordinance has been filed in the auditor's office and will be submitted to the council at its meeting Friday evening in adopting the report of the surveyor in laying out a street thru block 69, McClure's. An ordinance has also been prepared and filed for introduction providing for the creation of what shall be known as the judiciary committee of the city council in addition to the standing committees as they now exist. This committee is to have charge of all litigation, have authority to codify and publish the city charter, shall prepare all amendments to the city charter and shall hear all charges that may be filed against any officer of the city. The proposed measure also provides that no supplies shall be purchased without a requisition signed by a majority of the respective committees.

The Astoria police commission met at the city hall on Tuesady evening for the purpose of perfecting a formal organization and attending to a few routine matters. The members had no intention of selecting a permanent chief of police at that time as the affairs of the department are working smoothly at present but at some later meeting the matter will be taken up. Clerk Rhin of the board submitted a report of the work of the department for the past year and it was lucid, complete and interesting. It showed that there had been 707 arrests but as this included 147 lodgers the total should be reduced by that members. There were 332 drunks, 72 disorder and 87 vagrants. The receipts of the department amounted to $6,770.50, while the cost of its maintainance, including everything, was $9,140.36.

L. N. Shaffer, the well known advertising manager of Portland, arrived in the city today on a brief business trip. Mr. Shaffer states that business is rather slack in Portland at the present time due to the extreme cold weather, while in Astoria he notices that the retail business is much stronger in proportion. The indications for the present year's business is good thruout the state and Astoria no doubt will do its share of it.

Councilman Lienenwebr has applied for a 40-days' leave of absence in order to attend the session of the legislature, which will be convened on next Monday. On Friday a meeting is to be held in Portland, when the Multnomah delegation will decide which of the candaties for speaker of the house and president of the senate it will support. A caucus of the Republican members of each house will be held at 11 o'clock on the Monday morning, one hour before the legislature convenes, when the slate will be fixed up.

Some months ago the general merchandise store of S. J. Baseel at Chinook was burgarlized and about $360 worth of goods stolen, including several shot guns and rifles. No clue was ever found to who the thief was until a couple of days ago when Baseel saw a man with one of the shotguns and learned that he had purchased it from an ex-soldier who had recently married a young Chinook girl and had been living over Basset's store. The place was searched and more of the stolen goods found but before a warrant could be sworn out for his arrest the man disappeared and has not been apprehended.

The American ship Reuce evidently experienced and eventful passage on her recent trip from Newcastle, N. S. W., to San Francisco as the following extract from her log will show. "Sailed from Newcastle, N. S. W., May 16; on May 19, lat. 35.48 S. long, 154 E had terrific gales from N E to S E lasting four days throwing ship on beam ends and causing her to leak, and breaking one of the pumps; vessel leaking at rate of 3 inches per hour; put back to Sydney for repairs, arriving there on May 25; discharged 2,000 tons of coal and went in drydock; put in new stern post and rudder, caulked vessel fore and aft and made other repairs; restored cargo and sailed on Oct. 9; had fine weather to equater, which crossed 50 days out in long, 135 W; thence variable E N E winds to port."

Petitions are being circulated among the fishermen of the lower Siuslaw river, in Lane county, asking the legislature to amend the law relating to license on fishing nets so that it will be two cents per fathom of net used, instead of so much for each net. It is argued in behalf of the proposed change that many of the fishermen do not pay a separate license fee for each of their nets but pay for only a part of them. Many think that under the proposed plan it would be harder for the fishermen to evade payment of the license, as the fishermen can tell by looking at the gear when out of the water about how long each net is. Others argue that there would be nothing to prevent the fisherman from concealing part of his net when the water bailiff made his rounds to measure the nets or from procuring more gear after the bailiff had finished his rounds.

The January term of the county court was convened this morning with all the members present and will probably continue during the balance of the week, as a large amount of business is to be transacted. The greater portion of the morning session was consumed in auditing claims on the various funds. The clerk was instructed to make a certified copy of the bill of Coroner Gilbaugh in the sum of $100.95 for holding an inquest over the remains of the late Madaline Longtaine and submit the same to Wahkiakum county, Wash., with the request that this county be reimbursed. An order was made that in the future county officers be required to get a requisition for supplies for their offices, have it signed by the county judge and filed with the clerk. The order also provides that no claims will be allowed unless approved by the persons making the purchases.

A this afternoon's session of the county court the peition of Andrew P. Lillines and others for a road near the Walluski was read and C. W. Loughery, W. W. Sale and George Stevens were appointed as viewers to meet at Olney on January 18 and lay out the route for the proposed road. A contract was awarded to Mrs. Joseph Brown for feeding the prisoners in the couny jail at 20 cents per meal. A contract was awarded to J. H. Hobson & Co for furnishing oil for the county bridges at 17 cents per gallon and a contract for burying the county poor was awarded to J. A. Gilbaugh at $8 for adults and $5 for children, those being the only bids submitted. On printing the court proceedings the Budget bid 15 cents per inch and the Astorian bid 10 per inch. A contract was awarded to each paper, as under the law the proceedings must be printed in two papers. Officers for the ensuing year were named and their monthly salaries fixed as follows: Health officer, Dr. Nellie S. Vernon, $8.50; overseer of poor, Dr. J. A. Fulton, $10; keeper Youngs bay drawbridge, Cy Harriman, $35; keeper of Lewis and Clark upper bridge, L. Anderson, $10; keeper of Lewis and Cark lower bridge, Nate Jones, $25; keeper of Walluski bridge, A. McLean, $20; keeper of Skipanon bridge, J. A. Neal, $20; janitor of court house, Andrew Bite, $85; fruit inspector, C. S. Dow. The appointment of road supervisors will be taken up late this afternoon and the fixing of the tax levy will not be acted upon before tomorrow as no report has been received from Salem giving the exact amount of Clatsop county's portion of the state tax.

Present Cold Wave Will Continue for Several Days

HEAVY SNOW IN NORTHWEST

Uppper Columbia Filled With Floating Ice

Portland, Jan. 7 The greater part of the Pacific northwest is to continue in the grip of the present cold spell for several days to come, according to District Forecaster Beals of the weather bureau, except extreme northwestern Washington and southerwestern Oregon which are excepted. It has begun to snow in the Puget Sound country and in the northwestern part of Washington, while in Oregon the fall of snow continues. The Columbia river is frozen over at the Cascade Locks and large cakes of ice are running as far down stream as Kalama. River navigation is at a standstill above Vancouver. Up to about noon today, there has been about a foot of snow fallen in Portland, from six to eight inches along the lower Puget Sound and slight fall has occurred at Bellingham. In the Willamette valley 4 inches more snow fell this morning. In northeastern Washington a foot of snow has fallen since yesterday. Although trains are running somewhat behind their schedules, no serious delays have been experienced. In this city the street car system has discontinued its service and business is seriously interferred with. The temperatures this morning ranged from four below to four above east of the Cascades and stood about 16 above west of the mountains. Along the coast it is about 10 degrees warmer.

CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT

Woman Bookkeeper Steals Large Sum of Money

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 7--Miss Nettie O'Donnell, aged 32, former cashier and bookkeeper for Schwarzschaild and Sulzberger Co., was arrested last night on a charge of embezzling $40,000. According to the police, Miss O'Donnell has made a complete confession. The embezzlement took place in July, 1908. A short time afterward, fire destroyed a branch office of the company, where the woman was employed. Most of the company's books were burned. Miss O'Donnel's cash book, was however, found only slightly damaged and an expert accountant, employed to investigate the firm's affairs, discovered the shortage. Miss O'Donnell asserts she does not know why she took the money. The fire was believed to have been of incendiary origin, but Miss O'Donnell denies any knowledge of it. Frank O'Dow, also a former bookkeeper for the company, has been arrested and the police state, O'Dow has signed a statement that he received $500 from Miss OD'onnell and with it started a cigar stand. Miss O'Donnell is now his clerk. She declares O'Dow did not know she had embezzled the money.

ACQUITTAL IS JURY'S VERDICT

Women Found Not Guilty of Murder Charge

Media, Pa., Jan. 7 -Mrs. Florence Erb and Mrs. Catherine Beisel, her sister, charged with the sensational murder of Mrs Erb's husband, J. Clayton Erb, October 6, 1908, were today acquitted by the jury and discharged from custody. The jury was out nearly 18 hours. Almost up to the moment, when the jury announced it had agreed, the prospects for an unanimous decision of the 12 men was not bright. During the morning, the jury filed into the court room and asked further instructions on the question of self defense and while the spectators were still standing in the court room, discussing the instructions given the jury, word came that the men had agreed. The defendants were sent for at once. During this heart breaking interval, the defendants were so nervous they cold not remain still. Jumping from their seats, striding up and down, sitting down again with hands clasped behind their backs, they were more restless than any of the jungle animals in the cages of the city zoo.

MRS. J. CLAYTON ERB.
Indicted with her sister, Mrs. Beisel, on the charge of killing [illegible] J. Clayton Erb, the well known Pennsylvania politician

When the verdict was read, the sisters fell into each others arms and women wept, as they looked at the pathetic scene. In an instant the two women were surrounded by friends and their relatives and overwhelmed with congratulations. This scene lasted several minutes, then after the jury had been polled and discharged, Mrs. Erb hurried to the foreman and wrung his hand. Mrs. Duesel did likewise and they went down the entire line of 12 men. Tears stood in the eyes of most of them, as the thanks of the women were sobbed out in broken syllables. Mrs. Erb said, after the jury had gone out, that she was confient she would be acquitted but had not much faith as regards her sister's fate. Mrs. Beisel stated she was not at all confident of acquittal; "For you never know what twelve men will do." She also was confident of her sister's freedom.

TEN EARTHQUAKE SHOKCS PER HOUR

This is the Present Record at Messina

Messina, Jan. 7 Earthquake shocks still continue at the rate of ten an hour. Fire has also broken out again completing the destruction of the city hall and records stored therein. A party of men have been working four days to extricate the bodies of Consul Cheney and wife but there are many feet of wreckage remaining to be removed

TEN INJURED FOUND IN DEBRIS

Work of Rescue Will be Continued

Rome, Jan. 7 General Mazza, commander at Messina, telegraphed the premier today that ten injured persons were found in the debris today and that although he does no expect to find many others the work of rescue will continue so long as one is found alive.

TOWN NEARLY WIPED OUT

Port Essington, B. C., Jan. 7 This town was partially destroyed by fire last night. The fire, which started in the annex of the Caledonain Hotel, was caused by a defective flue. On account of there being no water pressure and the severe weather prevailing, it was found necessary to blow up the buildings east and west of the fire center. The total loss will amount to about $100,000, partially covered by insurance. Other losses included about 151 small cottages and their contents and part of the wharf.

GATES BELIEVES IN FREE TRADE

Washington, Jan. 7 John W. Gates has joined the ranks of those who are speaking for free trade on iron, coal and lumber. In a letter to Speaker Cannon, which was referred to the committee on ways and means, Mr. Gates declares that these articles should be on the free list and that a cut of 50 per cent in the steel schedule would not affect the manufacturers of iron and steel in this country.

ANOTHER PLCT IN PORTUGAL

King Manuel Warned of Plot Against Him

Lisbon, Jan. 7--During a banquet given by officers of the army last night King Manual was publicly warned by a lieutenant that a plot to dethrone him is in course of preparation. Officers declared that the king is surrounded by spies and traitors. Extra guards were no duty today around the royal palace.

DISMEMBERED BODY FOUND

In Stove of Michigan Methodist Church

Detroit, Jan. 7 There is some doubt as to the identity of the body found dismembered in a stove in the Methodist Church near Columbus yesterday. Another man besides Rev. John H. Carmichael is missing from the neighborhood. This is Gideon Browning, a carpenter who lived near the minister. Only the trunk, part of the jaw bone and false teeth of the victim remain on which to base identification which was mad largely upon the fact that Carmichael's bodily clothing and other belonging, including his spectacles are found in the church. Tuesday Browning was at Hickey and inquired the way to the church in Columbus township. He told different men that he had an appointment to meet a man there. There never has been any trouble between Browning and Carmichael as far as known. No reason is known for Carmichael's going to that church unless he had an appointment.

LEGISLATURE IN DEADLOCK

Over Canvassing Vote Cast for State Officers

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 7 -The legislature is in a daedlock on a canvass of the vote cast for state officers and there will be no inaugural on Monday next, which is the day on which the new state officers are unusually inducted into office. The senate is in readiness to go ahead with the inauguration of Governor Deneen and other state officers, but it has served notice on the Shurtliff organization in the house that it will not participate in a joint session to canvass the vote, until fully advised as to the plan of procedure relative to a recount which Democrats demand on the governorship. On the other hand, the house is in readiness to hold a joint session for canvassing and to this end sent its joint resolution to the senate today. Because of the inability to get an understanding from the Shurtliff house, it referred the resolution to a committee and adjourned until tomorrow.

BELLINGHAM IN DIRE DISTRESS

Shivering With Worst Cold in Years

Bellingham, Jan. 7 With the mercury hovering around zero Bellingham and northwest Washington are shivering with worst cold wave experienced since 1893 when 14 below was registered. At Sumas ten below was recorded last night, at Acancortes the schools are dismissed and the lumber mills closed down. John Davis, was frozen to death in his cabin at Noons, eight miles north of here, last night. Bellingham is without fire protection. Thousands of water taps have been allowed to run to prevent freezing and the pressure on the fire mains have been reduced to nothing. Water inspectors have found it impossible to enforce the regulatons or shut the water off. The wind is blowing a gale but there is very little snow. Shipping is hampered.

JUROR SUFFERS FROM MEASLES

Night Riper's Trial Adjourned to Sick Room

Union City, Jan. 7—A sudden turn for the worse in the case of Juror Rosen who is suffering from measles, nearly terminated the night riders trials today. The strain of listening to the arguments, sent the sufferer's temperature to 105 last night and he was unable to sit up this morning. By the consent of all concerned the trial was transferred to his room just off the court. The court suggested the advisability of counsel making the arguments as brief as possible, both sides agreeing.

APPROPRIATION TO BE LARGE

Washington, Jan. 7—Representative Hawley has been busy today working up sentiment among members of the house in favor of the passage of a river and harbor bill this session. It was semi-officially announced yesterday that Chairman Burton was inclined to believe that, in view of the depleted condition of the treasury it would be unwise to have a bill this session. Mr Hawley contends that it is good business policy to pass such a bill, and to make it large enough to keep work in progress on all important projects.

Among the members with whom he talked he found sentiment almost unanimous in favor of a bill. Pressure is to be brought to bear on the river and harbor committee to report a bill carrying at least $50,000,000.

MAS. MAYBRICK TO MARRY AGAIN

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. [illegible] Romance has again come into the life of Mrs Florence Maybrick, the American woman who was convicted in England of a charge of poisoning her husband, sentenced for life, served four years, and finally released on a ticket-of-leave by organized and presistent efforts of the women of America.

Since that time Mrs Maybrick has spent her time in America, and has been lecturing for the Slavton Lyceum Bureau. Now, according to J. H. McCracken, the Atlanta representative of the bureau, Mrs. Maybrick is engaged to and will marry Charles L. Wagner a Chicago man, who is the secretary of the bureau.

DECISION ON WATER RIGHTS

Salem, Or., Jan. 6—One of the most important decisions that has been handed down by the Oregon Supreme Court in many years was placed on record today, when the court held that the Congressional act of March 3, 1877, relating to settlement on public lands, limits all riparian rights subsequently acquired except to the extent of the use of water for domestic purposes. It is estimated that 90 per cent of the settlements in Eastern Oregon have been made since 1877. Practically all the water power rights in the state have been acquired since that time. This decision, therefore, limits the rights of such riparian owners to the rights they have acquired as appropriations, except as to domestic uses, which are too unimportant to be worth consideration.

TROOPS BURN VILLAGES

Amoy, Jan 7—Reports received here today from districts in Manchesteria say the government troops have burned seven villages and that the insurgents are on the defensive. The troops are now awaiting reinforcements. The disaffected district comprises [illegible] villages, west of Tunnag, three northwest of Amoy Island and others to the north.

JUDGE LANDIS TRANSFERS CASE

Chicago, Jan 7—Judge Landis today announced that he would transfer the second hearing of the Standard Oil case to some other judge.

King's Evil.

King's evil is the old English name for scrofula, and it arose from the fact that in mediaeval days it was customary to bring patients to the sovereign to be "touched" for a cure. The prayer book of Henry VIII. contained in this connection a special form of healing service. Queen Anne was the last of our monarchs to "touch" for the "evil," as Edward the Confessor was the first.

A Mare's Gravestone.

There is in a town in England a mare's gravestone bearing the inscription: "Polka. She never made a false step. Ecclesiastes iii, 19." This verse reads, "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; as the one dieth, so dieth the other."

ASTORIA THEATRE

FLORENCE ROBERTS GIVES FINE SHOW

The Astoria theatre was filled with a large and appreciative audience last evening to witness Miss Roberts in her new play "The House of Bondage." Miss Robert was hearily received and her many Astoria admirers were very glad to see her again. "The House of Bondage" is a clever written play but it requires a good cast to bring out its strong points. Miss Robrts is surrounded by good support and her two leaders in Mr. Arthur Forrest and Mr. Thurlow Bergen were excellent and won admiration from all their witnesses. The stage settings and decorations were handsome. Every one who went was highly pleased with this excellent show, but very much dissatisfied with the house on account of lack of heat in the building, every one knew the members of the cast were cold and the performers knew that the people were freezing. Considerable complaint was heard, with the hope that the same would be remedied.

"THE GREAT DIVIDE"

Tomorrow night Manager Hanlin will present the great American play "The Great Divide" That this engagement will be one of the memorable events of the season, there can be no question. No play written within the memory of the present generation has been so thorongly discussed and so unanimously endorse by the foremost dramatic reviewers. For more than two seasons "The Great Divide" has played to enormous business in New York. Every reader of the newspapers and periodicals is familiar with the emphatic verdict of popular approval accorded this brilliant drama of American life from the pen of William Vaughn Moody, who has won recognition as the first American dramatist to write a really great American play. In the masterful presentation of the piece, Mr. Miller has again proven the scope and quality of his genius as a stage craftsman. The play will be presented here with the complete production, scenic equipment and accessories. Seats now selling

"BABES IN TOYLAND"

This gorgeous musical attraction will be the offering at the Astoria theatre Saturday night. A selected chorus of thirty charming girls make no less than twelve changes of costumes from start to finish of the offering. They appear as citizens, then fairies, then dolls, then soldiers, then butterflies, then widows, and so on through the entire offering. A wardrobe mistress who served under the exacting Be[illegible] who [illegible] a star pupil of that master of detail, [illegible] in charge of the [illegible] and with a corps of assistants [illegible] that each member of the chorus corps [illegible] dressed just property before each entrance. And this corps was trained under the proficient Jullian Mitchell, and that means there ha been original ideas introduced that add much to the [illegible]netism of a powerful and clever offering. Secure your seats early and avoid the rush.

"DEVILS AUCTION"

Chas. H Yale's "Everlasting Devil's Auction" which is now announced as presenting the twenty-eighth edition of this really wonderful show piece, is announced as a forthcoming attraction at the Astoria theatre next Sunday evening.

Manager Yale states that most elaborate changes have been made in the latest edition, in the way of new and very capable artists, magnificent scenic accessories, superb costuming, attractive ballets, newly imported European featues, special and exclusive vaudeville novelties and the most elaborate transformation scene called "Amor" (Love) ever presented in this country. Don't fail to secure your seats in advance.

"ARE YOU A MASON".

The Baker Stock Company, the well known Portland theatrical organization which is permanently located at the Bunaglow Theatre that city is to appar here for one performance and Manager Hanlin of The Astoria Theatre announces the attraction Monday next January 11. This was brought about by Geo. L. Baker's donating his popular playhouse for a society entertainment to be given for the benefit of the earthquake sufferers and Mr. Hanlin immediately negotiated with him to bring the company, which would otherwise rest that night, in their big holiday success "Are You a Mason which packed the Bungalow to standing room at every performance last week. The cast will be identically the same as appeared there.

A BEAUTIFUL PLAY

"The Great Divide" will be presented under the direction of Henry Miller at the Astoria Theatre Friday evening. Over five hundred thousand people paid to see this in New York alone, during the two season'run at the Princess and Daly's Theatres. No play ever written has been so emphatically endorsed by the leading critics and reviewers of the daily press, the magazines and the periodicals. Local playgoers are to be congratulated upon this opportunity to see this great play.

Animal Oddities.

The elephant smells, not with his trunk, but with the roof of his mouth, which contains a nostril and olfactory nerves.

When moor hens dive they swim with their wings, practically lying under water. Most birds that swim do so with their webbed feet.

One Trip and---Another

The importunate cabbies and bustling porters failed to attract the attention of Frank Ryals except so far as a nervous person would notice mosquitoes or flies. He brushed them away without so much as a look as he passed down the long pier. With bent head and quickening footsteps he walked, unheeding and unnoticed, through the sweat and turmoil of the city to his home. As he rang the bell his hand shook and the muscles of his throat tightened.

The faithful butler, who had been valet to Frank Ryals before his marriage, held the door open and inquired solicitously if "Mis' Ryals" got off safe and sound.

The reply came after a pause, "Yes, Brown, thank you," but the white, drawn look of his beloved master's face repelled further inquiry, and the butler retired to the kitchen, there to unbosom himself to Cynthia.

"It's my opinion Marse Frank is mighty cut up 'bout Mis' Bess goin' off to Europe 'ithout no warnin' hardly at all."

Cynthia sniffed.

"And her a bride of jes' three months," continued the indignant Brown. "It's my opinion she don't care much about 'im, and 'im the best and jolliest man that ever lived." Brown was growing more aggrieved every minute.

"Gus Brown, would you have a 'oman tied to a man's coattails always jes' 'cause she happens to be married to 'im?" And Cynthia set the pan down sharply on the table.

"I don't expect much of women folks at no time," replied Brown stoutly, injecting as much scorn into his tones as he thought safe, "but I didn't much expect a young bride to go off so cheerful-like and leave her husband for six months on a stretch."

Cynthia turned sharply and looked into the face of the worthy butler. "Did you say six months, Gus Brown—six months?"

The faithful Brown could only bow his head in assent, and Cynthia, detecting traces of real grief in his usual woodeny countenance, was too shocked to take much account of the blister made on her hand by the overturned gravy.

Presently Brown put his head in the doorway of the drawing room to announce dinner, but, seeing his master with bowed head and bent shoulders, retired quietly to the kitchen.

Cynthia called Brown "a white livered coward" on his return, which emboldened that functionary to go back and touch his master's elbow.

"I don't care for dinner, Brown, thank you."

"'Thout so much as movin'," Brown confessed to Cynthia as they prepared to do justice to the dinner now almost cold.

Letters came across the ocean to Frank Ryals, full of life and vivacity, now brimming over with the joy of some bright experience, now breathing awe and wonder of the grandeur of some old cathedral or mystery of nature, but never once did she say "I miss you, dear," or "I wish I were back at home with you," or "I wonder what you are doing." Frank Ryals searched her letters feverishly for some such expression, but it never came.

Old friends welcomed him back to the club, and occasionally he went to the opera. Dinners at home were scarce and finally ceased altogether. Six months had extended into eight because Mrs. Raine wanted to take her party into Egypt, but now they were coming home.

The man who stood on the pier waiting for the North German Lloyd steamer to cast anchor on a bright April day looked very much like the same Frank Ryals who had stood there eight months before except for a certain air of composure and two little patches of gray hair on his temples that contrasted oddly with his fresh face. He received Bess and her friends cordially and told the latter he had made all arrangements to have them at his home during their short stay in New York.

Everybody talked at once at dinner, there was so much to say and the joy of being once more on American soil was so keen. The company rose, protesting vigorously when their host bade them good evening as he prepared to leave the house.

"We refuse to stay and turn you out of house and home this way. It is atrocious," they said.

"It is my pleasure," was the grave answer "and you must stay."

Bess for the first time in her life was thoughtful and said little. On the fourth evening after her arrival, when the guests had all departed and the clock was on the stroke of 11, Frank Ryals rose and, taking hat and cane, said good night.

Bess rose also.

"Where are you going, Frank?"

"To the club," he calmly answered.

For a moment she gasped with astonishment. Then pain, anger and wounded vanity chased in quick succession over her mobile face.

"Our first evening together," she managed to say, and as he still held his hat and looked steadily at her. "Has the club grown so dear to you that you can't give it up—one evening?"

"One has time to become attached to anything attractive in eight months," he said, "especially if it represents boyhood friends and companionship. The boys at the club have been very good to me, and I have come to depend on them. I would choose them in preference to scenery any time, I think," he commented, with a strained smile.

All color and brightness had fled from her face, and as she stood in the firelight, her white evening gown clinging about her, she looked almost pathetic.

"I would like to know—the worst Frank. Is it—any other woman?"

"No," he said; "I have never loved but one woman, and when I found it was all a mistake I suffered a great deal, more than you will ever know But it is all over now She didn't love me, and I have learned to do without her."

A pause "We are on an equal footing now, Bess." And he stroked the gray hair on his temples without looking at her "It is not as much happiness as—as the other way, but there is not so much pain."

Bess had lost all power of speech and was staring at him with eyes almost set in their horror. But he mistook the cause.

"Don't bother your head, Bess, about what the world will say. It need never know. You bear my name, you are the mistress of my home, and you will be free to enjoy your pleasures just as you see fit. You are welcome to all I have."

"Except your love."

"You had that, too, once. How long ago has it been, Bess? It seems years. Good night," he said as she made no answer. "The old servants are here, and you will be perfectly safe."

Still she said nothing, and he went out, closing the vestibule door quietly after him. Bess recovered sufficiently to reach the window in time to see him move down the lighted street toward the club.

"Oh, my God!" she moaned. "What have I done? Have I been dreaming all these months?"

She was awake now, with ten thousand accusing demons contending for the mastery of her soul.

Two months later Mrs. Raine was ushered unceremoniously into Mrs. Ryals' boudoir and found a grave faced young woman bending over the smoldering fire.

"Oh, my dear, I am so fortunate to find you at home!" was her cheery greeting. "I am in the greatest hurry, but I do so want you to join my party to the Yellowstone park tomorrow. It'll be such a glorious trip. I telephoned Mr. Ryals, and the dear, sweet man said he left it entirely with you. Really, my dear, you are to be congratulated—why, Bess"—

Her hostess had risen and now stood facing her, a grayish pallor spreading over her face.

"Don't speak to me of traveling! I hate the word the thought of boats and cars and hotels! I want to be left alone—alone!"

• • • • • • •

Frank Ryals was mounting the steps of his club when an imperious feminine voice stayed his steps. It was Mrs. Raine, and her ordinary gushing manner had entirely disappeared.

"My dear boy, you don't want to stay at the club this afternoon. You really ought to run right up to the house There's certainly something wrong with Bess. She's been treating me to a genuine case of hysterics Imagine Bess in hysterics! And she won't go to California with us. Oh, she's altogether unreasonable! I left her in tears. You must have the doctor."

"Yes, I'll phone for him at once." Mr Ryals' voice and manner were calm, perfunctory. He raised his hat and mounted two more steps. Then he paused irresolutely. Mrs. Raine was halfway up the block A man addressed him lightly and entered the door, and still Ryals stood undecided, a strange light playing in his moody eyes

"She won't go to California. I left her in tears."

Tears for what? For him, after all!

Suddenly he turned on his heel and plunged down the steps. A hansom was drawn up at the curb The driver knew him well and touched his hat interrogatively.

"Home!" exclaimed Ryals, and then as the hansom rumbled over the asphalt he murmured in softer tones, "Home!"

The Story of a Song.

The story of "Ninety and Nine," the well known hymn the music for which Ira D. Sankey improvised in a burst of deep feeling, was told by the Rev Dr. C. E. Locke at the funeral of Mr Sankey. The evangelist had found a little poem, "The Lost Sheep," in a Scotch newspaper, so runs Dr Locke's account in the Brooklyn Eagle, and had clipped it. One night in Edinburgh Mr. Moody asked him to sing. Mr. Moody has just finished his sermon, "The Good Shepherd." Mr. Sankey had no thought of composing a new song, but as he used to tell the story:

"As I sat at the organ my fingers fell on A flat and my eyes fell on that little poem. I began to sing, and I sang the words of that poem."

When he had finished Mr Moody rushed down from the platform and asked him where he had found that song. He said it was the most wonderful song he had ever heard Mr. Moody was weeping, Mr. Sankey was weeping, and the audience was in tears, so great was the impression produced by the song.

"I sang it as God gave it to me," Mr. Sankey replied. He never changed a note of the song from the time it fell from his lips.

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN
I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.
I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

The state fish warden in his annual report makes several recommendations to the legislature regarding the passage of laws regulating the fisheries, as published in yesterday's Budget. One would naturally infer from reading the recommendations that the only persons interested in the fisheries and the only ones whose rights should be protected are the fishwheel owners of the upper Columbia. Not only is every measure which the wheelmen have advocated for years, endorsed by the report, but it even goes so far as to recommend that the legislature repeal the initiative measure which the people passed by a large majority at the last election to stop all fishing above tide water. Large sums of money are being expended each year by the statis of Oregon and Washingon and by the federal government to maintain salmon batcheries on the Columbia river and tributaries but that money might as well be thrown into the bay if the slaughter of young fish in the spawning grounds is to be permitted to continue. The people of the state have decreed by a large majority vote that this slaughter must be stopped. Records will show that the Columbia river is the only salmon stream in the world where fishing in the natural spawning beds is permitted. That being the case and knowing that the people favor the abolition of fishing in the waters of the upper Columbia, it would seem as though an officer of the state fisheries department who really had the best interest of the fisheries at heart could do no less than recommend to the legislature that a bill restricting all fishing to tide water be enacted. At the coming session of the legislature, it is probable that the usual number of fishery bills will be introduced As usual every effort will be made to prevent the passage of legislation that will protect the salmon, but after the thoro campaign that was waged last spring in support of the initiative fish measures, no individual legislator can plead ignorance of what is at stake, neither can he plead ignorance of what the people of the state demand, namely the abolition of all fishing above tidewater, and any one who fails to cast his vote in support of that measure, will have betrayed his trust and violated his oath of office.

An editorial appearing in Wednesday's Oregonian says: "Herman Wise for the past four years mayor of Astoria, returned to private life Monday with the record of placing a new Astoria on the map. The Astoria that was known all over the Pacific Coast when he assumed office had a bad record for dancehalls, gambling-houses and many low dives. The Astoria which will not soon cease to honor him for the change he brought is a decent, orderly city, and neither the fishing season nor any other season brings with it the rabble of gamblers, thieves and other disreputables that in the old days flocked to the city by the sea. It was of course, impossible for Mayor Wise to accomplish this great reform without the hearty support of the best people in the city. The firm stand he took for decency and morality means much for the future welfare of Astoria, and the effect of his policy will be felt through many continuing administrations."

THE SUFFRAGISTS

The unusual tactics of the women of England who seek the suffrage are not without justification, according to the English press, which has recently pointed out laws of the realm bearing unjustly upon women These injustices, it is also said, the present lawmakers show no disposition to correct. In recent years the rights of women in England have been enlarged, but it seems that the reforms have been only halfway measures. It is still the law that a husband having means may leave his wife destitute at death and also that any money she may have saved out of allowances from his income during his life must go back to his estate, even though the widow be left penniless.

It has been asserted by the more conservative woman suffragists of England that it is not primarily unjust economic laws which incite them to demand the ballot. They ask for a voice in the affairs of the nation. Every form of injustice, inequality and political abuse or evil appeals to them, and they claim that in legislation relating to social conditions they, uniting with the men, will bring about improvement that the men, acting alone, cannot accomplish. The recent overt acts of the suffragettes, however, are candidly confessed to arise from indignation at the palpable injustice of some few laws that hold women in actual economic slavery.

URGENT NEEDS OF COLUMBIA

Major McIndoe Talks on Progress of Work

That failure on the part of congress to pass a river and harbor bill, including appropriations for the continuation of improvements at the mouth of the Columbia river and a Celilo on the upper Columbia, this session would mean serious loss is the opinion of Major James F. McIndoe, United States engineer corps, in charge of this important work.

It would seriously delay the completion of the Celilo canal and put a stop to construction of the jetty at the mouth of the river before the close of the next working season. Especially damaging would it prove to the jetty, as discontinuation of work would leave the tressle at the mercy of storms and waves to such an extent that possibly a great deal of the expensive and difficult work would have to be done over again.

"It is very essential indeed that the river and harbor bill be passed at this session of congress," said Major McIndoe "because without further appropriations at this time it will be impossible for us to carry on work. We expend about $1,000,000 annually on the jetty at the mouth of the Columbia and have now only about $800,000 on hand for next year. From this it will be seen that it will be impossible to work to the end of the season unless more money is arranged for.

"The jetty is exposed to heavy storms and much of the trestle work, around which the jetty is built is liable to bewashed out by the fall and winter storms unless it is filled in and supported with stone.

"As to the Celilo canal work, it can only be said that it too would suffer severly from lack of money to continue the work uninterruptedly. One large contract is now under way with the understanding that it is to be completed long before the expiration of that time. Hence further appropriation at this session of congress would result in a much earlier completion of the project than if we have to wait another year. We have about $600,000 on hand for the Celilo canal, but without another appropriation this year the completion of the canal will be seriously delayed."

REPORT AGAINST FULTON BILL

Elkins Committee Opposes Rate Law Amendment

Washington, Jan. 7—An adverse report of the Senate on Fulton's bill to prohibit railroads from increasing the freight and passenger rates without due notice was made last evening by Chairman Elkins of the committee on interstate commerce. The action anticipates a message from Roosevelt calling attention to need of further legislation on the railroad rates as indicated by the present decision of the supreme court of the United States in case of E. H. Harriman against the interstate commerce commission. The report by Elkins was made after two votes had been taken on Fulton's bill at a meeting of the committee earlier in the day. Several members of the committee were absent. Senators opposing the bill obtained authority to make adverse report after having procured the vote of Foraker, one of the absentees. It is expected the president's message will be used as an argument in favor of taking up the Fulton bill, regardless of the report against it and Fulton has given notice that he will try to do so.

WICKERSHAM AFTER POSITION

Seeks Appointment as Marshal at Nome

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7—Delegate-elect Wickersham of Alaska is already beginning to make his influence felt at Washington. It is reported today on good authority that largely because of Wickersham's protest Thomas C. Powell of Portland, now marshal at Nome, Alaska, will not be re-appointed when his term expires next month, but that Dan Sutherland of Fairbanks, favored by Wickersham, is likely to get the job.

Powell was also opposed by Francis J. Heney when in Washington recently, on the ground that his record in Portland was not good. Delegate Cale is standing with Wickersham on this appointment and both are opposing Governor Hoggatt.

The renomination of Judge Gunnison of Juneau today was another blow to Governor Hoggatt, who had protested against it. Many attorneys in the Juneau district had also protested against Gunnison, but the president ignored their objections.

The Hobo as a Barometer.

The Armourdale (Mo.) police are predicting a long, hard winter.

"What do you judge by—the thickness of the goose's breastbone or the number of shucks on the corn?" was asked.

"Neither," said the officer, "but by the number of garments on the hoboes. We caught one recently in the Rock Island yards who wore six shirts, three pairs of trousers, four vests, two coats and a waiter's jumper."

Obesity and Will Power.

Obesity is easily cured with the exercise of the proper care and restraint on the part of the patient. Without this, however, the cure is impossible and no physician or medicine can be of any help. The happy-go-lucky dispositions of fat people, their tendency to regard their ailment lightly, cause them to look upon nothing seriously, to deny themselves nothing. These characteristics, which generally are responsible for their ailment, furnish the greatest obstacles in the way of curing them. As a rule, the fat person does just the opposite of what he ought to do. He eats the very foods he should avoid, avoids those he should eat, shuns exertion of every kind, indulges in rest and luxury and seeks the way of the easiest resistance generally.—"Will Power."

The Ancient Manufacture of Copper.

The ancient Syrians and Phoenicians are well known to have been active traders in copper, and they manufactured this metal into bronze by melting it with tin. Learned antiquaries assure us that the Phoenicians actually came to England and to Ireland in search of tin for this purpose, and some years ago some curious bronze articles were found in several of the old mine workings in Cornwall, which are believed to have been left there by that ancient people at a time when no bronze was either made or used in England.—Chambers' Journal.

A Willing Victim.

"Well, Mr Bickers," said Lawyer Breef, "your wife sues for divorce and asks $5,000 a year alimony. Of course we will defend it."

"No, Mr. Breef, we will not defend," replied Mr. Bickers.

"But that is an enormous alimony."

"That's all right, but I am for peace at any price."—Detroit Free Press.

ABOUT ASTORIA

Mrs. Geo. Morton, who has been critically ill with pneumonia, is much improved and is believed to be out of danger.

Captain R. E. Howes has been confined to his home for the past week with an affection of the liver but is now gradually improving.

As the tenth of the month will be on Sunday, tomorrow and Saturday will be the last days on which to pay water rates and avoid the penalty of 25 cents that is charged every delinquent.

An officer from the regular army is expected here during the present month to conduct an inspection of First Company Coast Artillery Corps, but the date has not yet been fixed.

Chairman Wright has called a meeting of the water commission for 1:30 tomorrow afternoon when the new board will be organized, and the reports for the past year submitted.

While coasting down Fifth street Wednesday evening, Miss Ruby Rich was thrown from her sled against the fence and sustained a fracture to her right arm.

A daughter was born this morning to the wife of Sheriff M. R. Pomeroy and during the day the latter was the recipient of hearty congratulations from his numerous friends.

S. A. Gimre, wife and family will leave next Monday for Los Angeles and vicinity, where Mrs. Gimre and children will spend the balance of the winter. Mr. Gimre is expected to return in about one month.

Representative McCue is in Portland where he will attend a conference tomorrow relative to candidates to be supported for president of the senate and speaker of the house. Representative Leinenweber will leave for Salem on Saturday evening.

Boats arriving from Deep and Grays rivers this morning report that there is at least two feet of snow in those sections and that it is still falling. Unregistred thermometers there have recorded as low as 13 degrees above zero during the past few days.

D. R. Blount, former road poll tax collector, announces that he lost a small receipt book containing stubs of poll taxes collected during 1908. The return of the book will be greatly appreciated by Mr. Blount.

Swepson Morton was over from Kanppton this morning and reported that the thermometer had registered there as low as 15 above zero but when he learned that this was ten degrees and more lower than on this side of the river he purchased a new one to take back with him as he knew that there could not be that much difference.

The snow storm during the past two days has interferred greatly with the movement of steamboats and launches, but the transportation lines operating on time schedules are endeavoring to resume their routes. The steamer Lurline is announced to leave this evening on schedule.

This is the kind of weather when the lovers of birds has an opportunity to show his appreciation by throwing some crumbs for them to feed on as otherwise they will be in dire distress. Even if no birds are seen around the kitchen door they will soon be attracted by the food.

At this morning's session of the county court the reports of the supervisors of roads from No One to 18 were read and approved. These reports showed that there are on the roads in the county 267 bridges 20 feet or over in length, comprising a total length of approximately 25,000 feet. Some of these bridges are in need of repairs and the court is of the opinion that considerable bridge work will be necessary during the coming summer.

The steamer South Bay cleared at the custom house today for San Francisco with a cargo of 175,000 feet of lumber loaded at the Hammond Lumber Company's plant.

While crossing the river Tuesday on the steamer Nahcotta, George Hibbert jr., son of Editor Hibbert of the Chinook Observer, was thrown to the deck by the rolling of the steamer in the gale. His head struck a cuspidor and was badly lacerated and bruised, but his injuries are not of a serious nature.

As the steamer T J. Potter was coming down the river last night she experienced considerable floating ice between Kanpps and Martins, which is short distance below the mouth of the Willamette. Her hull was damaged some but not seriously and she left up this morning again as usual but a tug was telegraphed for to meet her down the river and pilot her the balance of the way, clearing the ice.

Ignorance of a Brooklyn N. Y., man of geography was illustrated in a letter received this morning by the chamber of commerece. His inquiry was the business opportunities offered in Oklahoma and Oregon. He will be informed as to Astoria and Clatsop county but beyond that there is no local information of exact character for distribution.

The demand for skilled Chinamen to work in canneries will be greater the coming season than ever before, especially the slitters and solderers. A great run of salmon is expected on Puget Sound this year and extensive preparations are being made to handle it. Some of the Columbia river slitters have been offered $1,000 for the season and some soldierers $600. These prices are about double which have been paid in former years but as a matter of fact Chinamen are getting scarcer every year.

The ice covered streets and sidewalks afforded much pleasure to the younger generation last evening. Besides the coasters on the hillside there were a number with ice skates skimming along the smooth boards with perfect delight. If the cold weather continues a few days longer excellent skating will be afforded on the lakes of Clatsop plains. In years past when the winter freeze up were more general Smith's lake on the west side was a mecca for those who love the sport of ice skating. The opportunity for good skating this winter appears excellent.

The Port of Astoria commission held a meeting Wednesday evening and organized by the election of the following officers: President, G. Wingate; vice-president, C. H. Callender; secretary, J. A. Eakin; treasurer, S. S. Gordan. Commissoners Callender and Finlayson were appointed a committee to prepare a set of rules and regulations governing the use and control of the harbor to report at the next meeting, when the question of appointing a harbor master will be taken up. Commissioners Ball and Wilson were named as a committee to select a hydrographic engineer for the work of making a survey of the harbor.

The city council will meet in adjourned session at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon for the especial purposes of taking up the contest over the election of councilman from the First ward for the two-year term. The auditor has requested the city attorney for a written opinion as to the council or any committee therefrom demanding the ballots without having an order from circuit court. That opinion will be submitted before the meeting of the council tomorrow, so whether or not the recount of the ballots will be proceeded with tomorrow remains to be seen. It is understood that the new council will hold its first regular business session Friday evening, when the standing committees will be announced.

Manager Hanlin of the Astoria Theatre has rather an explanation than an apology to make for his play house not being as comfortably warm as it should have been on Wednesday morning. The night previous the water had been turned off the building but had not been run out of the pipes so when fire was started at 8 o'clock in the morning it was found that the pipes had frozen and broken. Two plumbers worked until two in the afternoon before the repairs could be made and it was impossible to warm the house thoroughly by the time the audience arrived. Then shortly after ten o'clock the chimney was discovered to be on fire and the department summoned and this extinguished without either the players or the audience knowing of it. This necessitated putting the fires out and the house quickly became chilled but this was unavoidable.

A complaint was filed today charging Jennie Crowner with insanity and the woman will probably be examined before the county board this afternoon.

At the meeting last evening of Court Astoria, Foresters of America, officers to serve during the ensuing term were installed as follows: George Olson, chief ranger; John Vragnizan, subchief ranger; F. P. Leinenweber, treasurer; C. E. Foster, financial secretary; George Dyer, recording secretary; Chris Leinenweber, trustee, R. R. Wallace, lecturer.

School Clerk Sherman has completed the census of children of school age in Astoria district and finds a total of 2597, of these, 1311 are boys and 1286 are girls. The total number of school children in the county according to the census is 4101, which is 31 less than last year, altho the attendence at the shools is much heavier. The falling off is undoubtedly due to the fact that in 1907 the census was taken during the summer, when there were a number of transient people in the county and when the numerous pupils who attend shools outside the county were at home. Under the state law the county court is compelled to make a levy for school proposes sufficient to raise $7 for each child of school age and this year that amount will be $28,924.

Present conditions of the weather will likely continue to exist for several days according to advices from the weather bureau. At an early hour this morning the thermoneter registered 26 degrees above zero but has moderated considerably since, yet it may grow colder again tonight. Following the flurry of snow during the night it began to snow hard this morning and did not stop until about two this afternoon when fully two and a half inches lay on the ground. As under this there is a coating of ice over frozen ground it is apt to remain for some time. The wind was still in the east this afternoon although a northwest storm was predicted last evening. Of the mouth of the river this morning it was snowing very hard when the bar tug Wallula went out.

The Oregon Game and Fish Association put itself on record at its annual meeting held recently as desiring certain changes in the Oregon laws for the protection of game. The alterations will be asked of the coming legislature. Resolutions were adopted asking that the duck season be limited to from September 1 to December 1, with a limit of 50 birds in any one week and no sale to markets. It will be asked that pheasants be protected exeepet from September 1 to December 1, and that a week's bag be fixed at 10 birds. It is desired that no female pheasants be shot at all and that no sale be permitted. Practically the same protection will be asked for quail, except with regard to the female birds. The state will be asked to put bounties upon the scalps of preying animals of $5 each for mountain lions, cougars, wild cats, coyotes and skunks and 5 cents on crows.

Before the adjournment of yesterday afternoon' session, the county court appointed supervisors for the several road districts as follows: District 1, George W. Warren; No. 2, A. W. Duncan; No. 3, Rollie S. Wood; No. 4, J. W. Johnston; No 5, F. H. Mudd; No 6, Andrew Johnson; No 7., John Waterhouse; No 8, A. B. McMullen; No. 9, Cornelius Hunt; No. 10, W. H. Twilight; No. 11, Dan. McLean; No. 12, John Nelson; No. 13, Gus Gronnell; No. 14, H. Hill, No. 15, Ralph Wooden; No. 16, John Takola; No. 17, Peter Gullickson; No. 18, R. A. Abbot; New Astoria, C. M. Mekula, city of Astoria, Fred J. Brown. Some of the above are now appiontees. Some of the districts submitted petitions for more than one man and the court seeing that the resident taxpayers could not agree upon the man they wanted, made its own selection. The court also made an order that an appropriation of $10 per month be made to the Boys & Girls Aid Society of Portland.

In response to a petition from numerous citizens presented by Judge Bowlby, the county court at this afternoon's session made an order endorsing the action of Senator Fulton in asking congress to make a national park of Humbug and Saddle mountains, a district including about 3000 acres. The order states, however, that the court desires to be understood as not wishing to take away any rights of actual settlers. Notice was received today that Clatsop county's portion of the state tax will be $27,030 as against $22,190. This afternoon the court is discussing the question of tax levy with interested property owners. As the court is compelled to raise about $5000 additional for state taxes, $1500 for high school and $1000 additional for poor fund as well as a larger sum for interest and nearly $15,000 will be required for new bridges and repairs, the court will probably make a levy of about 18 mills, for county, state, county school and court house purposes, altho the matter had not been decided upon at a late hour this afternoon and may not be before tomorrow. Such a levy would make the total levy on property in the city 35.8 mills, whereas last year it was 57 mills.

Later—Before adjourning this afternoon the court made the tax levy 18 mills.

HOUSE WILL NOT ACT ON MESSAGE

Because it is of Objectionable Character

Washington, Jan. 8 Having given considertion to the president's further views regarding the secret service, contained in his message to the house Monday the special committee appointed to deal with the subject today brought in a final report. Accompanying it was a resolution in which it was declared it is the sense of the house that it shall decline to consider any communication from any source which is not respectful and recommending the objectionable portion of the president's annual message be laid on the table and that similar action be taken in respect to the message of last Monday because of it being "Unresponsitive to the inquiry of the house as to what the president means when he says, referring to the limitation placed upon the field of operations of the secret service and that the chief argument in favor of the provision was that the congressmen did not themselves wish to be investigated."

Crowded galleries greeted Representative Perkins of New York when he arose to make his report as chairman of the special committee. Messrs Tawney, Smith, Sherley and Fitzgerald were on the floor prepared to present what they deemed insinuations of the president upon them as members of the committee on appropriations. They were not alone in their indignation. Indeed for some time past the feeling of the members had been growing more and more intense and some of them have been giving way to their sentiments in language which fully testified their wounded pride.

After Perkins had concluded his speech on the secret service resolution Denby said the president had veered from the path of recommendation and just criticism into the realm of personal abuse speculation and innuendoes. During the discussion Secretary Lat a appeared with three messages from the white house and his appearance was greeted with roars of laughter. The messages proved to be of routine character and were not allowed to interrupt the proceedings for any length of time. Bennet, of New York, opposed the adoption of the Perkins resolution and declared that if the house should accept it its action would have no more effect on the character which history would give to President Roosevelt than the action of the senate on President Tyler's record in connection with his attitude towards Andrew Jackson.

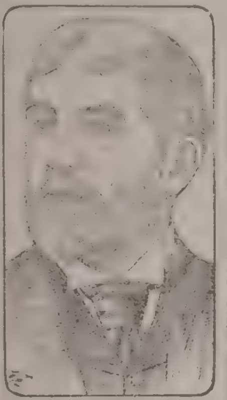
AUTHORITY OF THE PRESIDENT

To be Investigated by Senate Judiciary Committee

Washington, Jan. 8 By a viva voce vote the senate today adopted Culberson's resolution instructing the committee on judiciary to report to the senate whether the president was authorized to permit the absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Co., by the United States Steel Corporation.



EUGENE HALE.

The death of Senator Allison of Iowa left the way clear for the advancement of Senator Hale of Maine to the chairmanship of the senate appropriations committee, generally considered the most important post in the upper house of the national legislature.

MURDER MYSTERY STILL UNSOLVED

Whose Bones Found In Church Unknown

Detroit, Jan. 8 The murder mystery of Battle Run church, near Columbus, is apparently far from solution. Rev. J. H. Carmichael, pastor of the church, and Gideon Browning the Adair capenter who was the minister's neighbor have not been seen since Tuesday. Various theories of the bones found in the church is that they are those of one or the other.

KERN GANDIDATE FOR THE SENATE

Indianaposlis, Jan. 8 The 6th Assembly, which convened today, promises to be one of the most interesting held in years. For the first time in 18 years the Democrats are in control of the legislature, and will elect a succesor to James A. Hemenway. There are six candidates.

John W. Kern, of this city; L. Wardslack, of Franklin, and B. F. Shively, of South Bend, Ind., seem at this time to have the largest following. It is admitted, however, that unless a combination is formed, none of these can win.

Those who profess to have some information as to Mr. Taft's plans for the new cabinet believe that Colonel John J McCook, the well known New York lawyer, is slated for a portfolio. SEVERE BLOW FOR DEFENCE

Received from Unexpected Quarter in Hains Trial

Flushing, Jan. 8- A blow from an unexpected quarter was received by the defense at the trial of Thornton Hains when Dr. L. Samuel Manson, an alienist, under cross examination by Prosecutor Darrin declared that Captain Hains suffered from maniac depressive insanity last August, an aliment that would have prevented him recognizing a face or the name of an enemy.

The alienst said the patient was suffering with such a malady that all power was practically lost. Darrin, taking advantage of the admission of the defense's alienist asked him if in his opinion Captain Hains mental condition had been changed and if he knew that the army officer had conversed intelligently before and after the shooting of Annis and that he recognized his victims as his boat neared the float. The medical expert said in his opinion he remained unchanged. Dr. Pierce Clark testified in his opinion Capt Hains was insane on August 15 and that he was insane early in November when the witness made his last examination.

MARINE INTELLIGENCE

The steamer Geo. W. Elder left out this morning for Eureka and San Francisco with freight and passengers.

The steam schooner F. S. Loop, with a cargo of lumber for San Francisco went to sea this morning.

Captain Harry Emken, who brought the steamer Geo. W. Elder down the river last night reports that there was considerable ice in the river from the mouth of the Willamette as far down as Rainier and at times it was with difficulty that he got through and would not consider it safe for a wooden vessel to attempt to make the trip. He believes that the river will be frozen over from shore to shore in some places by tonight.

The steam schooner Majestic arrived in this morning from San Francisco to load lumber. She reported good weather outside except that it was snowing hard.

The steamer Lurline did not leave up until this morning and it is questionable if she will be able to get through to Portland on account of the ice. The steamer T. J. Potter did not come down the river this morning but it is understood that the Harvest Queen, which is well sheathed, will try it this evening.

TO OPERATE DREDGE OREGON

Washington, Jan. 8—Represenative Hawley yesterday introduced a bill appropriating $150,000 for operating the new dredge 'Oregon,'' recently constructed for use in the harbors along the Oregon and Washington coast. The bill provides that the dredge shall first operate at Coos Bay, then go to Coquille, Tillamook harbor, Grays Harbor, Willapa Bay, and such other points as may be designated by the secretary of war He also introduced a bill providing that the unexpired balance of the appropriation for the jetty at Coos Bay, amounting to about $[illegible]000, be expended in operating the dredge, "Oregon," now at Coos Bay in widening and deepening the channel at that point.

CONSTITUTION IS REVOKED

St. Petersburg, Jan. 8- Special dispatches received here from Teheran say the Shah of Persia has again issued a manifesto revoking the constitution

There has been an outbreak of disorder at Shiraz similar to the recent disturbance at Ispahan. It is feared that the news of the successful plundering of this latter city will result in uprisings of the lower classes, particulary among the starving.

FULTON WORKING FOR COAST

Washington, Jan. 8 -Senator Fulton today had a conference with Senator Frye and Representative Burton, chairman of the respective committees handling river and harbor legislation, and learned from them that it had been finally determined to pass no regular river and harbor bill this session.

The senate adopted Senator Fulton's concurrent resolution directing the secretary of war to survey the Siuslaw river to determine what project for its improvement can be completed with the expenditrue of $100,000 in addition to a like sum to be provided by local residents and also to survey the Columbia river for improvement in front of the town of Hood river.

Senator Fulton has prepared and will offer an amendment to the postal savings bank bill authorizing the postmaster-general to deposit postal savings funds in other than national banks when he is satisfied with the security offered by them. Fulton says there is much demand for such an amendment, as it will permit a wider distribution of savings deposits.

POLICEMAN SHOT BY SOLDIER

Dead Man Oldest Sargent In San Francisco

San Francisco, Jan. 8 – Sergeant Anton F. Nolting, one of the oldest and most popular officers of the San Francisco police department, was shot and killed early this morning by James Jordan, a private of the coast artillery, whom Nolting was attempting to arrest with two of his comrades who were creating a disturbance in a saloon at Washington and Kearney streets. After the men were in the street a shot was fired and Nolting accused Jordan of firing it. The soldiers knocked down the officer and while he was partially stunned a shot was fired into his side. From a recumbeant position the wounded officer fired several shots at his fleeing assailants then staggered along a block and fell unconscious and died before he reached a hosiptal. Bystanders identified Jordan as the man who fired the shot. He and his companion, Richard O'Connor, were arrested. The third man in custody refuses to give his name.

GREATER NAVY IS PROJECTED

Washington, Jan. 8 -The authorization of an entire squadron of four monster battleships was urged on the house committee on naval affairs when Secretary Newberry appeared before that committee yesterday. Besides the battleships he said that the navy should be provided with four new scout cruisers, ten destroyers, four submarines, there colliers, one repair ship, one ammunition ship and two mine laying shisp.

Mr. Newberry told the committee that the new battleships should be of the heavy single-caliber, all-big-gun type, and added that it was desirable that a squadron of eight of these ships be completed as soon as possible.

About $75,000,000 would be required to carry out the Secretary's programme for increasing the Navy.

COAL LANDS ARE PURCHASED

American Syndicate Buys Large Tract

Victoria B. C. Jan 8—Financed by Liegh Hunt, the New York multi-millionaire, formerly of Seattle, who has earned millions from his Korean mines, Egyptian lands and enterprises, and English capitalists, a company is being formed with large capital, probably $10,000,000, to take over the 27,000 acres of coal lands on Graham Island, of the Queen Charlote islands, acquired from a Victoria syndicate by Messrs. F. D. Hilis, E. M. Fracksell and L. L. Butler and H. M. Hamilty of this city, who interested the capitalists who have liberally backed the big enterprise. Work will be commenced at once.

An application is now before the British Columbia legislature for a charter line of railway between Skedegate and Rennell Sound to open up the mining district, and before the city of Prince Rupert has become anything like the large customer the new Northern city will be the bunkers of the big corporation will be built and its own colliers will be calling here. A fleet of colliers will be required. The local company held the coal property since 1885, when a company was formed, including William Wilson, C. H. Toud, Capt. John Irving, Robert Tennant, Maj. Nichols, T. A. Gore, Dr. G. L. Milne, W. A. Robertson and others.

The big coal deposit which is to be developed on such a large scale was discovered in 1885 by W.A. Robertson, of this city, while making an exploration on behalf of the provincial government. It is located near the Yakoun River, about nine miles from Skedegate. The property is considered the best and largest on the Pacific Coast.

When the prominent American and British financiers were interested they sent experts, who reported most favorably and probably $10,000,000, will be expended in mining operations. Work will be commenced at an early date and the sinking of the shafts will be followed by the necessary additional works, bunkers, etc. A fleet of colliers will be built. When the provincial government meets, January 21, application will be made for a road from Skedegate to Rennell Sound, on the west coast of Graham Island.

APPROPRIATION FOR NAVYYARD

Amount Wanted May be Cut In Half

Washington, Jan 8—Present indications are that when the naval appropriation bill reaches the house it will be found that the Puget Sound Navy Yard will be allowed about one-half the amount in cash called for in estimates furnished by the navy department, and that the only appropriation for the yard will hardly exceed $750,000. This cut is indicated in hearings before the committee at which Admiral Holliday, chief of the bureau of yards and docks, testified to the needs of the Bremerton yards.

The biggest cut is in the estimate of $100,000, asked to continue the construction of a new dry dock. Admiral Holliday said this could be cut to $400,000, as the balance of $400,000 heretofore provided had not been expended and that, with an additional $400,000 all the work to be done in the fiscal year ending, June 30, 1910, could be paid for.

Admiral Holliday also told the committee they could do with two instead of four officers' residences, the two to cost $18,000, and that the cost of railroad extension could be cut from $20,000 to $10,000.

In his testimony Admiral Holliday insisted on the pressing need for the construction of pier No.8 to cost $125,000 and a new storehouse.

Other items estimated for and which excited no comment from the committee were:

Extention of the water system, $8,000; sewer system, $8,000; pattern shop, $40,000; roads and walks, $5,000; grading, $20,000; anchor park, $5,000; fire protection system extension, $20,000; warrants officer quarters, $4,000.

SHARPSHOOTERS IN THE NAVY

Change Six Years Has Made in Men Behind the Guns

Six years ago the standard for [illegible] heavy turret guns, which are now a battleship's sole weapon of consequence in battle, was one in five minutes. The average of hits on the target [illegible] would not have been [illegible] guns [illegible].

[illegible] The [illegible] Six [illegible] the [illegible] for [illegible] guns [illegible] than [illegible] minute. A [illegible] shown [illegible] 1902 [illegible] than [illegible] shot in six hit the target. Today [illegible] frequently make as many [illegible] minute and the average of the whole navy is six hits a minute. These are the records at the 1,600 yard range. At the last long range target practice in Massachusetts bay the battleships of the [illegible] Atlantic fleet firing at a [illegible] three to five miles away [illegible] nearly 30 per cent of hits. With a target one-third the size of the ships at Santiago at distances from two to three times as great our fleet made more than fifteen times the percentage of hits.

Translated into terms of war these changes mean this: Six years ago an American battleship would not hit an enemy's vessel at a battle range of three miles more often than twice an hour. Today every ship of an enemy's fleet steaming into range would be struck by two tons of steel shell every minute by every modern American ship firing at her. Solid metal spatters like mud when these great projectiles strike it. When charged with their high explosives these shells are swept through the ship in fragments of from 200 pounds in weight down to the finest steel dust. In all human probability no ship in the world could stand such a fire fifteen minutes.—McClure's.

A Close Distinction.

"You ain't going to kill me, is you, boss?" asked the negro of the man holding the bloodhounds.

"Naw," replied the leader of the posse, putting the noose around his neck. "We're only stringing you."—Yale Record.

"Yes," said the musical young woman, "we spent the whole evening trying to play a new sort of polka."

"You don't say!" replied Jack Potts. "What was the limit?"—Philadelphia Press

ASTORIA THEATRE

"BABES IN TOYLAND"

This gorgeous musical attraction will be the offering at the Astoria theatre Saturday night. A selected chorus of thirty charming girls make no less than twelve changes of costumes from start to finish of the offering. They appear as citizens, then fairies, then dolls, then soldiers, then butterflies, then widows, and so on through the entire offering. A wardrobe mistress who served under the exacting Belasco and who is a star pupil of that master of detail, is in charge of the costumes, and with a corps of assistants sees that each member of the chorus corps is dressed just property before each entrance. And this corps was trained under the proficient Jullian Mitchell, and that means there has been original ideas introduced that add much to the magnetism of a powerful and clever offering. Secure your seats early and avoid the rush.

"DEVILS AUCTION"

Chas. H. Yale's "Everlasting Devil's Auction" which is now announced as presenting the twenty-eighth edition of this really wonderful showpiece, is announced as a forthcoming attraction at the Astoria theatre next Sunday evening.

Manager Yale states that most elaborate changes have been made in the latest edition, in the way of new and very capable artists, magnificent scenic accessories, superb costuming, attractive ballets, newly imported European fentues, special and exclusive vaudeville novelties and the most elaborate transformation scene called "Amor" (Love) ever presented in this country. Don't fail to secure your seats in advance.

"It is."

"Where is the ghost?"

"The ghost, herr, is only to be seen by children. They describe it as a woman raking leaves. When she looks up at them they see only a skull instead of a face. She may be raking over there now. Yet we cannot see her."

Annette, who was with me, looked at me with a frightened expression. We were in the valley of Chamonix surrounded by snowy peaks, among which Mont Blanc rose highest. Hearing of the legend, I had engaged a guide to conduct us to the spot the ghost was said to inhabit.

"Your children hereabout," I said to the guide, "are doubtless under the influence of the story. Imagination paints the image on the retina of the child's eye."

The guide shook his head negatively "If herr will bring a child here who has never heard of the legend he will know better."

"That is a proposition which meets my concurrence. An American family arrived at the hotel this morning among them a little girl of seven. What do you say, Annette? Shall we make the test with her?"

Annette winced. She placed the tips of her fingers on my sleeve as if for protection.

The act gave me a suggestion. It was not clearly defined, nor had I much faith in it. Nevertheless, I had a mind to proceed.

"We will bring the child here," I added, then, turning to the guide, "and, Herman, if she sees the ghost I will give you an American gold eagle for a memento of the occasion."

"Thanks, herr. I consider myself richer by that amount."

"Don't say we will bring her here," said Annette, with a shrug. "I shall have nothing to do with the matter."

"Surely you do not expect—well, then, Herman must lose his eagle."

"I'll come," said Annette after a bit of struggle with herself.

We succeeded in getting permission from the child's parents the next afternoon to take her to walk with us. I felt sure that if spirituality would enable her to discern the ghost she would see it. She was like a waif from spirit land, large dreamy eyes—wonder eyes I would call them—the face of a child Madonna, sensitive lips, the figure of a sprite. She walked with us in silence, treading the ground so lightly that I sometimes wondered if she touched it at all. Annette could not keep her eyes off her, seemingly enthralled by her, though our quest may have had much to do with that.

Besides, our surroundings were impressive. What is there more typical of the infinite than a mountain raising its white head into the heavenly blue? And what more typical of infinity than a host of such mountains looming on all sides, three snow fringed glaciers wriggling like serpents down their sides? Our little friend looked up at the peaks with a sort of trustfulness, as if they were animate—her older brothers, resting, silent, conscious of latent power. The wind was fresh, and it seemed that it would take up the child and carry her to some far peak gilded by the afternoon sun where she would be nearer her own country.

As we drew near the spot we sought Annette weakened. I saw in her expression that she feared we would have evidence of the specter's presence. The child was walking before us, and Annette, sidling toward me, laid her hand on my arm, as before, this time clutching it in terror.

We stood on the ground we had occupied the day before, looking out on the spot Herman had referred to when he said, "She may be raking over there now." A wind rolled over some dead leaves where we fancied the woman worked. Annette drew near me so near that her silken sleeve rubbed against my arm. The child stood a few steps before us, looking at the mountains, the valleys, anything, everything that made up the view.

"Herman has lost his eagle," I said in a low voice to Annette. "She sees nothing unusual."

"Thank heaven!" was the whispered reply.

"What a desolate spot!" I remarked aloud. "Not a living thing here but ourselves."

"Yes, there is," said the child. "There's a woman over there raking dead leaves."

I felt a convulsive grip on my arm. I knew Annette needed support, and I put my arm about her to steady her. I confess I was startled myself.

"Where?" I asked of the child.

"Over there," pointing. "She sees us. There are only holes where the eyes should be."

"Oh, come away!"

It was Annette who wailed the words. But she had no power to go. My plan had worked too well. Its object—to excite in her that craving for protection which would throw her into my arms—had succeeded, but I feared the shock. I took her in my arms and put my face against her cold cheek. I looked love into her wild eyes. All to no purpose. I could get nothing but convulsive shudders, clutchings.

That was a long while ago. Annette is my wife, but I have never ceased to regret that I uncovered her heart in a way so dangerous. She was long in recovering from the shock, and even now I do not dare refer to the matter. No explanation of the wonder has ever come to me. I have no theory concerning it and don't wish any. All I ask is that I and Annette may forget it.

Saving a Fortune.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

When I was at Cinnamon that enterprising town was 120 miles from any railroad and a hard place to get away from. It was a desirable place to leave, since the population was composed of gamblers, cutthroats, dispensers of alcoholic drinks, miners and storekeepers, mentioned in order of importance. The only respectable family in the place was that of George Jones, who kept a general store, and as he was the only man who never sold anything on trust all the money gradually found its way into his coffers. It was like washing gold. The dirt was constantly shaken up among the citizens, the metal sinking to the bottom of Jones' pan.

Every one knew that Jones was gathering a snug sum and that he wished to take it and his children to a respectable place. Every one was waiting for him to make the attempt, relying on the road agents when he did so to relieve him of the funds while on the route and start them again in circulation. Furthermore, the road agents were waiting to carry out this praiseworthy object.

One day a red flag apeared at Jones' store, and it was anounced that he would sell the remnant of his stock at auction. He sold on sixty days' credit, letting it be known that when the notes fell due and were collected he proposed to leave Cinnamon with his family and his fortune. There was not a thousand dollars' worth of goods left, and these Jones sold to anybody who wanted anything on his credit plan. Everybody wanted goods so easily obtainable, and Jones in a few hours exchanged the stuff for notes.

While Jones was thus giving credit for money credit was due Mrs. Jones for being a very shrewd woman. A week before the falling due of the notes she issued invitations for a "suarry," to which every one in town, including gamblers and road agents, was invited, to celebrate the departure of the Jones family on the day after the said notes fell due. Her husband, generous man, made it known that if any of the debtors found it inconvenient to pay up at maturity the matter would be left open for a reasonable time. These two propositions enhanced the popularity of the Jones family, and the cutthroats got their horses and their guns ready to return the family fortune to circulation.

I had clerked for Jones and was ready to do anything in the world for him, but he didn't trust me till the last minute, though he told me to be ready on short notice to go somewhere with him. I was not included in Mrs. Jones' invitations for her "suarry," which surprised me. I had a room opposite the Jones house, and the night the party came off I watched the throng go in and knew by the gradually increasing sounds coming from within that the guests were getting cheerful. By 11 o'clock most of them were drunk, the worst element being laid out on the floor where they had sunk in their exuberance of spirits. I could see through the windows Jones opening champagne, his wife serving eatables and the children carrying the luxuries to the guests. Then I saw Jones himself, drunk as a lord, pledging his guests, while his wife took up the corkscrew, which he was no longer able to wield.

I had been told to remain in my room ready for orders, and at midnight I saw Jones emerge from his house and come across the street, and, walking straight as an infantry sergeant, he headed for me. When he came under my window he called to me softly. I went down, and, taking me through the back door and the yard, he stopped before a two horse team standing on the street beyond. Jones told me to get in and take the reins. I did so, and as we drove off he strapped a brace of pistols around his waist and laid two more at my feet at the bottom of the wagon. On the outskirts of the town we stopped for a minute at a house while Jones lifted into the buggy a box containing $80,000 in gold.

We had the best team of horses in that region, and they did good service. Of course we didn't know whether we had been betrayed by some one who had got wind of the trick, though Jones had taken no one into his confidence. Anyway every now and then we pulled up and listened for footfalls. Considering what he had at stake, Jones was pretty cool.

On the start I drove pretty fast, but Jones concluded that we had better save the horses as much as possible, and I soon slowed down. We made thirty miles without stopping except for water and another ten before giving the horses a feed. Then we breakfasted ourselves and gave the team a two hours' rest. And so we went on by easier and easier stages till we reached the railroad. Jones boarded a train, and I drove leisurely back to Cinnamon.

I found the town perfectly quiet, but despondent. Jones had got away with all the money there was in it, and the prospect was not attractive. Nobody asked me about where I had been, for everybody knew. Mrs. Jones was the only one interested. She said that none of the agents awoke before 10 o'clock the day after the "suarry," and it was not evident to them before noon that they had been tricked. It was then too late to make chase.

On the day the notes fell due none of them were paid. I drove Mrs. Jones and her children to the railroad. At the station I found a letter from Jones asking me to meet him at Frisco and become his partner in business.

The county court has fixed its total levy at 18 mills, making with the city and school district levies, of 35.8 mills on property inside the city, a reduction of about one-third from last year's levies. This action is eminently proper and will be appreciated by every one, as it will probably mean that the assessor will continue to increase the valuations on the assessment oil. There is a certain amount of money which must be raised each year to carry on the city, school district and county governments, make improvements and provide for gradually paying off the indebtedness. It is much better in every way to raise this money with a low tax rate on a high valuation than it is to raise the same amount by a high levy on a low valuation. There is certainly no reason why the valuation of property in this city and county cannot be so increased that within a very few years the total levy for all purposes will not exceed 15 mills and perhaps be less. Nearly every person who visits a city for the purpose of making investments, inquires about the rate of taxation, while few if any of them ask concerning the valuations of property. Taxation of nearly six per cent as was the rate in Clatsop county under the low valuations has been the cause of keeping several people from investing here in the past, but with the rate of taxation being reduced, the county and city will within a short time be relieved of one of its greatest handicaps.

There has been much said and written regarding the decrease in the hard wood supply and the inquiry has been how this is to be overcome. It seems that the eucalyptus will come to the rescue if given a chance. This tree will supply hardwood timber on short notice, but it will only grow in California and Florida as well as in the Philippines and other countries where there is no frost. The tree grows five times as fast as other species. The consumption of our hard woods has stimulated the planting of seeds of the eucalyptus tree, which, from seedlings has been known to grow an average of six inches in height in a day. The statement is made that a maximum diameter of 7 inches and a height of seventy feet has been attained in three years. One California tree alone reached a height of 125 feet and a diameter of 86 inches in nine years. It looks very much as if we would be obliged to go to the eucalyptus tree for hardwood timber in the future.

A professor in California claims to have discovered how to read the ancient inscriptions and say the Romans descended from the Trojans just as Virgil's Eneid says they did. After all it doesn't appear to matter much. The Romans were the real thing all right and made the world wig their way for several hundred years—in fact cut their mark indelibly into the fabric of world history. What they did and not who their ancestors where is their title to remembrance.

Mr. Knox will be the fourth secretary of state since 1897 to bear a one syllable name. He succeeds Root, who succeeded Hay, who succeeded Day; Monosyllable secretaries of state were Smith, Clay, Cass, Black, Fish and Blaine. Only one secretary of state—Freylinghuysen—had a foursyllable name. There are seven three syllable names in the list and twenty-one two-syllable names. In going from the senate to the department of state, Mr. Knox does what Daniel Webster and William H. Seward did before him.

Red Blood In Fiction.

Harper's Weekly recently sounded a reactionary note against the present day demand among American readers for novels of action. The editor declares that sensibility is the great possession of the truly modern novel in contrast with the old novel of action. The argument sets forth that an act in itself is nothing. It becomes something only when thought interprets its intent and effect. Yet we have often been told of late that to depict life as it is and as it might be is the highest achievement of fiction. Life is action.

Novelists of today are not barred from moralizing on the side, but they are asked to portray life that is within range of the reader's experience. This makes the story readable anyway and may make it helpful. Perhaps it would be better for us all to think out our acts and their probable effects beforehand. But we don't do it, and few of us can grasp characters in novels who always "hew straight to the line." Something in the blood impels our actions day by day, and the average novel reader enjoys stories of blood compelled experiences and adventures above all other kinds.

HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

There are [illegible] people in the world who are so perverse that they will not let us [illegible] how [illegible] the world could [illegible] without them

An obstinate man would rather have his own way than be popular and genial, and it is lucky for him that he would

In the [illegible] of the town gossip a little knowledge [illegible] apt to be a slanderous thing

Some men regard the man who has [illegible] to be drowned as a truly pitiable individual

Lots of men who are always running for office never seem to get anywhere.

Probably the greatest service a doctor does is keeping us from being scared to death

The unpreparedness that sometimes overcomes us in an emergency is attained in some cases only by much preparation.

The mean things we didn't say don't keep us awake nights, even if they won't let us go to sleep

Blessed, ah, blessed indeed, is it to give, more so than to receive, but how about the poor mortal who can do neither?

Pride is a very foolish thing, but it is the foolish things of the world that have made the most noise in it.

Perpetual Youth.

What's the use of growing old?
Not the slightest bit.
At threescore a man need not
Fold his arms and quit.
That's what the professor says.
Calm your doubts and fears,
You can just be starting in
At one hundred years.

It is easy, so they say
Who have never tried.
Only need to have the rules
Thoroughly applied.
Just like falling off a log
Backward, they allow,
But they always die before
They have shown us how.

Once in every little while
Some one comes along
Who can beat the dying game
Or his guess is wrong
He can tell you what to do
So you'll last and thrive
For a century or two
And still be alive.

What's the use of dying young,
Dropping off for keeps,
At the age of ninety-two?
Hear them sigh, "He sleeps."
You can spend some fifty more
Years of pleasant ease.
As the tall Missourian says,
Show us, if you please.

ASTORIA MOTOR BOAT CLUB

Preliminary Organization Affected Thursday Evening

Preliminary organization of the Astoria Motor Boat Club was affected on Thursday evening at a meeting held in the rooms of the A. A. A. A. when about 20 owners and those interested in motor boats collected for the purpose.

Dr. K. Vaughn was chosen chairman and F. C. Fox secretary for a temporary organization, then the general subject of organizing a club was discussed at length. That it would fill a long felt want was agreed by all and that it would be a success all felt certain. To prepare a constitution and by laws a committee was appointed to consist of F. C. Fox, E. C. Judd and Louis Hartwig. As a committee to secure a mooring place for the boats of the club the following were appointed: T. Driscoll, Robert Carruthers and Albert Johnson. An adjournment was taken until next Friday evening when a meeting will be held in the rooms of the chamber of commerce when the constitution and by laws will be adopted and the election of officers follow. To this meeting all those interested in motor boats, whether they are owners or not, are invited and can become members.

THE GERAT DIVIDE

Tonight the Astoria theatre should hold a record breaking audience to witness the great American play in three acts "The Great Divide" The first represents the interior of a cabin on a cactus farm in southern Arizona, the second a picturesque plateau high up in the Cordillera Mountains--"the roof of the world" and the third the parlor of an old New England home in Milford Corners, Mass. From this idea the spirit of the play may be formed.

The heroine is a Massachusets girl who goes with her brother to Arizona to make their fortunes in the cactu-fibre industry. There she meets a man of the west, one used to a wild carefree existence and loose philosophy of life. They are strangely met and she is strangely won. This is in the first act. The remainder of the play is a dramatic adjustment of the lives of the Puritan woman and the son of the mountains and plains.

The man is regenerated through love for the woman, while she, at first all pride and priggishness through training and heredity, at last by force of the same sovereign power--love--recognizes him as her lord and master.

INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS

Joint Session of Workmen and Auxiliary Lodge

A joint installation was held last evening by Seaside lodge No 12 A. O. U. W. and Charity lodge No 53 Degree of Honor. The following officers of Seaside lodge were installed: P. M. W., Wm. Ross; M. W., Geo. Knboth; foreman, A. R. Cyrus; overseer, J. A. Montgomery; recorder, Patrick Shea; financier, Wm. C. A. Pohl; receiver, J. E. Higgins; Guide, O. F. Morton; I. W., A. L. Steele; O. W., W. H. Gray; trustee, Wm. Kelley. The following were installed for Charity Lodge: Mrs. Christine Carlson, P. C. of H.; Mrs. Hannah Porter, C. of H.; Mrs. Emma E. Cyrus, L. of H.; Mrs. Barbara Hartwig, C. of C.; Mrs. Bertha Morton, L. U.; Wm. C. A. Pohl, recorder; A. R. Cyrus, financier; Emma C. Bayard, receiver; Edith L. Moore, O. W.; A. R. Cyrus, D. D. G. M., installed the officers of Seaside Lodge, and Mrs. S. A. Fastabend, D. D. G. C. of H., installed the officers of Charity Lodge. After the installation addresses were made by several of the officers of the two lodges followed by a short musical program.

HARRIMAN ASKS FOR MORE MONEY

For Extension Work in Oregon and Washington

General Manager J.J. O'Brien of the O. R. & N. will leave New York the last of the week for Oregon. Mr. O'Brien has been in New York during the holidays, and while there has been taking up with Mr. Harriman the mater of the Southern Pacific extensions in Oregon, particularly the Deschutes Central Oregon line.

Mr. Harriman is said to have asked for about $40,000,000 from the directors of his lines for new construction work in Oregon and Washington, and if its appropriation is granted, as it is believed it will be, the greater part of the money will be spent in Oregon and Washington.

J. D. Farrell, head of the proposed Oregon & Washington, the Oregon Railroad & Navigation company extension from Portland to Seattle has announced that he will beign work at once on the line and on a depot at Seattle. If the Oregon & Washington is built it is regarded as a certainty that the Oregon Central will also be rushed through at once.

The announcement that Harriman will have a depot of his own at Seattle may throw some light on the Union depot controversy between Hill and Harriman in Portland and may point to a permanent difference between the two systems.

"ARE YOU A MASON"

Next Monday evening the Astoria theatre should be crowded to the doors to witness the great rollicking success "Are You a Mason. Everyone knows the Baker Stock Company of the Bungalow Theatre, Portland and the announcement that the popular organization intact will be brought here to give a performance of their big holiday week's success "Are You a Mason" will doubtless be real news to our theatre goers. Manager Baker donated his popular Bunaglow theatre (the home of Baker Stock) for a society entertainment to benefit the earthquake sufferers and was solicited to send the company to two or three neighboring cities for the evening. He decided to play in Astoria. The Bungalow was packed every performance during New Years week. The cast will be exactly the same as presented in Portland. Seats should be secured early.

NIGHT RIDERS FOUND GUILTY

Verdict Returned by Jury Late Last Evening

Union City, Jan. 8—With the verdict of guilty, the jury in the night riders case reported at 8:45 yesterday. Garret Johnson, Tid Burton, Bob Ransom, Fred Pinion, Arhur Clear, and S. Applewhite were convicted of murder in the first degree with mitigating circumstances and "Bud" Morris and Bob Huffman, other defendants were found guilty of murder in the second degree. Their punishment was fixed a 25 years in the penitentiary. Punishment for the first six named was left to the court and may be death or life imprisonment and court has indicated intension to pronounce the death penalty. The defense made a motion for a new trial which was set for hearing Saturday and which will be overruled. Sentences will then be imposed. Defendants received the verdict calmly. Attorney Pierce then turned to them when it was announced and said: "We will tear this suit to pieces in the supreme court."

Huffman is one, according to Fehringer's confession who fired the shot which killed Captain Rankin as he was being drawn up by the rope.

This afternoon the members of the county court discussed the question of changing the boundaries of certain road districts but no final action was taken and the balance of the afternoon was consumed in drawing the list of 200 taxpayers who will be eligible for service as circuit court jurors during the present year.

Thre seems to be a wide divergance of opinion as to the species of the different birds that are spending the winter about Astoria. There are at least a half dozen different varieties and if there [illegible] a competent ornithologist living here and make himself known he could settle many contentions in this line.

District Deputy Thomas B. Loughery of the Knights of Pythias has been invited by Seaside lodge of the order to be the installing officer at its installation exercises on next Monday evening and he has accepted. Astor lodge No. 6 K of P. will hold its public installation on next Friday and the grand chancellor and the grand keeper of records and seals are expected to be present.

The schooner William Bowden was four days in making the trip up the river from here to the North Pacific mill, where she will load lumber for the west coast of South America. The ice was so thick that the last 30 miles was a hard drag for the towboat and the schooner suffered so much damage from contact with the ice that a survey of her hull has been ordered by the insurance underwriters.

Fears are entertained for the safety of the American ship Fort George, now 166 days overdue from New York to Honolulu. Reinsurance of 20 per cent has been quoted. The vessel, with a crew of thirty men, was last sighted on August 22, a month after she left New York. At that time she had not yet rounded the Horn, which has since been reported as a dangerous passage because of floating ice. The Fort George is owned by the Matson Navigation company of San Francisco.

Work on extending the taxes on the 1908 roll is progressing finely. All the road and school district and municipal levies have been extended and the one remaining is the levy made by the county court yesterday afternoon. The indications now are that the roll will be ready to be turned over to the sheriff for collection about the tenth of next month. This will be much earlier than usual and will allow property owners over a month in which to take advantage of the three per cent rebate allowed on taxes paid on or before March 15.

At the meeting of Beaver lodge I. O. O. F. last evening officers to serve during the ensuing term were installed as follows: J. A. Gilbaugh noble grand; J. M. The members of the Rebekah lodges as well as the wives and families of the members of Beaver lodge were present and after the ritualistic services a literary program was rendered, refreshments were served and dancing indulged in.

City Attorney Abercrombie filed a written opinion today in response to a request from City Auditor Anderson for a ruling relative to his right to turn the ballots cast at the recent city election over to the council or a committee therefrom, upon demand, for the purpose of making a recount. The opinion is an extended one and goes into the details of a number of simular cases arising in cities having charters like the one goverrning the city of Astoria. It says in short, that as the charter provides that the common council is the "final" judge of the qualifications and election of its members, it excludes the courts from jurisdiction in election contests. Therefore the council has the right to examine all the evidence in the case and the ballots being the best evidence of who was elected by the people, the council has the right to examine the ballots cast for the purpose of making a recount, if it so desires. The opinion advises the auditor to obey any summons from the council to produce the ballots.

A man named J. E. Toomills, who resides in a scow in Uppertown, was arrested last evening on a charge [illegible] sanity, as he had been threatening to shoot a number of persons. The man is now confined in the county jail, where he was given medical attention and he will be held until tomorrow before being examined by the county board on the charge of insanity.

Rev. C. L. Owen, pastor of the Baptist church, has been called to the St. Johns Baptist Church to begin his pastorate there the first of July. He has not given his decison, but will begin a revival meeting with the St. John people next week. At the close of this meeting he will give an answer to that church. In any event, he will not leave Astoria before the first of July.

In accordance with recommendations submitted recently to the war department by Audjutant-General W. E. Finzer, of the Oregon National Guard, instructions were received at guard headquarters yesterday for the organization of a full company of Coast Artillery at Marshfield [illegible] as early a date as possible. The department also asked for a report on the work and present status of other coast artillery of the Oregon guard service. Upon receiving authorization from the war department, General Finzer at once took up the plans for the Coos Bay company. He will communicate with Marshfield, requesting that a roster be prepared of the citizens of that place who are willing to enter the service.

Weather conditions today were even worse than on the two days previous with the single exception that the east wind, still prevailing has not been so severe. It grew colder during the night and the minimum weather bureau thermometer registered 23 degrees above zero, which is two degrees colder than it has been. With the prognostications of the weather bureau and local indications present conditions will continue. Most of the day it has been spitting snow but the amount of the fall is slight. So far business has not been materially affected but there is danger of the mills having to close down at any time on account of the scarcity of water as the reservior is getting low on account of so many letting the water run in their homes and places of business to prevent the pipes being frozen up.

Before adjourning its session last evening the county court announced that during the year 1909 increased scalp bounties will be paid by Clatsop county as follows: For cougar scalps, $20 each, for bear scalps, $5 each and for bob and wildcat scalps, $1 each. This advance in the bounties is occasioned by the great destruction that has been wrought by these animals during the past year not only among domestic animals but to game as well. In order to guard against fraud by parties bringing scalps from adjoining counties where the bounty is less, the court made an order that every one who presents a scalp must file an affidavit that the animal was killed in Clatsop county. The tax levy of 18 mills made by the court is segregated as follows: county, state, high school and school library, 13 mills; court house, 1.6 mills; county schools 3.4 mills; total 18 mills. An order was also made directing that the $3 poll tax be collected as usual.

At this morning' session of the county court, a petition from F. M. Blaisdell, asking for permission to haul logs across the county road near Olney was granted on condition that he file the required indemnity bond. The bond of Sheriff Pomeroy as tax collector in the sum of $50,000 with Frank Patton and O. I. Peterson as sureties was approved. The reports of the clerk and treasurer for the six months ending on December 31 were read and referred to the expert for examination. The clerk's report shows the warrants drawn during the six months were $83,393.90 on the general fund and $20,994.90 on special funds, a total of $104,388.80 The outstanding warrants amount to $162,240.56 and the available cash in the hands of the treasurer is $2227.76, leaving the ne indebtedness $160,012.80. The report calls attention to the fact that in compiling the list of liabilities and assets, no accounting was made as assets of the taxes due, the two rock crushers, road machinery, other county property or the court house, the latter representing an expenditure of $209,616.35. The judge and the expert were instructed to compile a comparative statement of the expenditures for publication.

BLIZZARD OVER ALL NORTHWEST

Cold and Snow Contnue for Some Days

Portland, Jan. 9—From all portions of the Pacific northwest come reports of continued cold weather, with temperatures at many points below zero. At Bellingham the mercury has been below zero for several days, however, the thermometer today registers ten above. Train service is more or less delayed, but so far the transportation companies have been fairly successful in combating the storm. Ice is piling up in the rivers and navigation especially in the Columbia, both the upper and lower rivers, is interferred with to some extent. The weather bureau predicts further cold weather and snow with no appreciable improvement in the situation.

MEXICO HAS EARTHQUAKE

Damage Was Slight and No One Was Killed

Mexico City, Jan. 9—The entire western coast of Mexico was shaken by an earthquake yesterday which was most severe at Acapulco and at Oaxaca. The damage was trivial and no faltalities are reported.

NEW WATER COMMISSIONERS

At a special meeting Friday afternoon, of the water commission reports of the clerk and other officers were examined and approved and then the question of the eligibility of certain of the newly elected commissioners to qualify as member of the board under the provision of the charter which says that each commissioner must have paid during the year previous to his election not less than $25 in city taxes. All the commissioners-elect had taken the oath of office and all excepting Gimre, Jenser, Kankkonen and Brix had taken an oath as to the amount of taxes paid, and the committee on credentials recommended that these four named be seated. There is no law, however, requiring the commissioners to take such an oath, and as there is some question as to the meaning of the charter provision, all the commissioners were finally seated and a motion made to request Judge McBride to interpert the meaning of the charter. F. A. Fisher was elected chairmar of the board and Frank Patton was elected treasurer. All applications for appointment as clerk and inspector were laid over until the next meeting.

NIGHT RIDERS ARE SENTENCED

Union City Jan. 9— Six of the night riders were sentenced to hang on February 19 and two were given life sentences in the penitentiary at todays session of the court.

STREET FIGHT ENDS FATALLY

Girl Killed and Several Persons Badly Injured

Williamstown, Ky. Jan. 9—Miss Ethel Ransom, aged 25 years, was killed, and five other persons were injured, two perhaps fatally, in a street feud fight early today. There has been long and bitter feeling between the Lantern and Ransom families. It led to trouble, when they met at a dance last night at the home of Wesley Barnes, two miles east of Williamson and culminated in a fight on the street, clubs, stones and pistols being used.

JOEL COOK.
Representative of the Second Pennsylvania district, Republican, elected to succeed himself. He is an editor by profession and one of the best known men in Philadelphia.

CHEAP RATES TO SEATTLE FAIR

Chicago, Jan. 9—Trouble is brewing among the Western railroads over the rates to the Alaska-Yukon Exposition, which will be held in Seattle this year. Today the Burlington road caused surprise among its competitors by quoting a rate of $62 for the round trip from Chicago. In this connection the Burlington has stolen a march on the other roads, which were waiting for a general agreement among the lines of the transcontinental passenger association as to what the rate should be from Chicago.

WATER NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that owing to the continued cold weather and the great drain of water from the reservoir on account of service pipes being left open, the supply of water will be shut off between the hours of 8 p. m. and 6 a. m. beginning with this evening.

MME. STEINHEIL, HELD IN CELEBRATED PARIS MURDER.
Mme. Steinheil, who is held in Paris as accessory to the strangling of her husband, was compelled to undergo great mental torture recently when the crime as she had related it was rehearsed in the exact spot where it had occurred and with living actors. The woman had accused two men of killing her husband, and these were brought into the room masked and required to go through the strangling episode. The woman stood the scene stoically.

NEW ZEALAND MILLS CLOSING

Because of the Importation of Oregon Pine

Wellington, N. Z. Jan 9 A great conference of the timber trade was held here today to discuss the question of the importation of Oregon pine. The press was excluded but several delegates asserted after the conference that owing to the recent wholesale importations of pine fully 50 sawmills would close down indefinitely. The mill owners demand the imposition of a duty on all imported timber in bulk.

AUTO WRECK INJURES PARTY

Prominent New York Real Estate Man Killed

New York, Jan. 9—Edward Ciot Gilman, a prominent real estate dealer, was instantly killed, Miss Julia McKim, severely injured, and Frank Brennan, perhaps fatally in the wreck of an automobile in which they were riding with a party of friends. All resided at Flushing, New York.

MARINE INTELLIGENCE

Capt. Holmes of the steamer Rosecrans reports to the Branch Hydrographic office, by wireless, that on Jan. 2, 1909, in lat. 35 31' long. 126 52' W. he saw a log 4 feet in diameter and 40 feet long.

Capt. C. Peterson of the schooner Stinson reports that on Dec. 28, 1908, in lat. 36 40'N.S. long. 123 1' W., he passed a whistling buoy.

The steamer Arago arrived in this morning from Tillamook with a good freight.

The steam schooner Yosemite with a cargo of lumber from Rainier for San Francisco, went to sea today.

The steamer Lurline did not come down the river last night and will be laid up until weather conditions moderate on the river. The same is true of the O. R. & N. boat.

The steam schooners Yellowstone and Mayfair, with cargoes of lumber for San. Francisco, arrived down the river this morning and proceeded to sea. Both were fortunate in getting through the ice in the path made by the Senator but their sides showed the grinding of the ice against their hulls.

WARNINGS OF EARTHQUAKES

Waters of Lake Geneva Were Greatly Disturbed

Genoa Jan. 9—The inhabitants of this city state that the waters of Lake Geneva rose and fell for two days with a curious syphonlike action, three weeks before the earthquake at Messina. The same phenomena was noticed before the San Francisco disaster and was attributed to seismic gases.

HARRY THAW BEFORE COURT

His Mother Seeking to Liberate Her Son

Fishkill Landing., New York, Jan. 9—Harry Thaw was taken from the Matteawan State Hospital for criminal insane today to Nyack to be present at the hearing before Justice Thomkins on the application of his mother, Mrs. William Thaw, for a trial by jury to determine whether Harry is insane or whether he ought to be liberated.

Thaw is entitled to a trial on the question of whether he has recovered his sanity, according to Justice Tompkins, who today heard the arguments on a writ of habeas corpus obtained by Mrs. Mary C. Thaw, his mother. In replying for the writ Mrs. Thaw declared Harry is not a criminal having been acquitted by jury, that he now was sane and should not be in prison. Jerome appeared in court and asked that the case be transferred to New York county.

"Oh, the snow the beautiful snow, etc." What a delightful time it has brought to the young who for the past few days have been coasting and skating all over the hills, while sleighing parties have been joyous and numerous both night and day. It has been about twelve years since Astoria was visited with such a plentiful supply of heaven's white mantle, and even then its duration was only for a day, but to think Astoria will now have at least a week of it seems incredible for such a moderate climate, at least it can be said to be unusual. While the bleak east winds temper the spirit to activity and make those who must face it complain of its sharp piercing edge, yet there are those who do not have to leave the warm fireside of their abode who revel with delight when they see the snow flakes fall. Is a glorous time for house parties as well as outside amusements. There has been a long list of entertainments during the past week and if the present weather conditions prevail for another week there will be some elaborate functions announced among the society folk.

Cards was the feature attraction for the fore part of the evening, Five Hundred being the selected game by the charming young hostess. Before refreshments were served the prize winners were announced and the high card holders were Miss Drain and Miss Fastabend. The young ladies were given quite a surprise near the tenth hour of the evening when about Twenty-five of their gentlemen friends all supplied with horns and their identity concealed with masks of various designs, approached the home and disturbed the congenial party with thunderous blasts from their cracked instruments. The tin horn serenade continued for a few minutes after which their identification was made known, which was not hard to guess especially for the members of the Wike Wike and were welcomed to the party. The closing hour was exceptionally jolly and all the young ladies were safely escorted home by their brave intruders.

All cigarettes look alike to the smoker, except—

IMPERIALES CIGARETTES

There are none made just like them—surely none that taste just like them.
It's this indescribable, individual, inimitable taste and flavor of Imperiales Cigarettes which has put them head and shoulders above all other brands sold in the West. They're reaching eastward, too—steadily.
You don't taste the paper when you smoke an Imperiales—just the tobacco.
Furthermore, the mouthpiece Imperiales insure a perfectly cool, sweet smoke.
Smoke them all day long if you want to —no after effects.

INCREASE OF DIVORCES

One for Every Twelve Marriages in the United States

That divorce is two and one-half times as common in the United States as it was forty years ago and that one marriage in twelve nowadays ends in divorce are conclusions reached by officials of the census bureau in Washington in a new compilation of statistics of marriage and divorce covering the twenty years from 1887 to 1906, inclusive.

A previous investigation covering the twenty year period from 1867 to 1886, inclusive, had been carried out by the department of labor, and Mr Carroll D. Wright, who was then commissioner of labor, has been associated with the present inquiry as an expert special agent of the census bureau.

In the twenty year period covered by the latter investigation there have been 12,832,044 marriages recorded. In the same time there have been 945,625 divorces. For the previous twenty years there had been reported 328,716 divorces, little more than a third of the number for the second twenty year period. When the first investigation was instituted, forty years ago, divorces occurred at the rate of 10,000 a year. Now the annual rate is 66,000. This increase, however, is to be considered in connection with increase in population.

The report adduces statistics to show that divorces are now increasing about three times as fast as population, while during the decade 1870-1880 they increased only about two and two-thirds as fast. The divorce rate for each 100,000 of population increased from twenty-nine in 1870 to eighty-two in 1905. In the former year there was one divorce for every 3,441 persons and in the latter year one for every 1,218.

But a more significant divorce rate is that which is based not upon total population, but upon married population. The rate for each 100,000 married population was 81 in the year 1870 and 200 in the year 1900.

Geographically Illinois leads in total divorces granted for the last twenty year period, with 82,209, and Ohio is second, with 63,982, other states being close up.

New York's list of divorces for the twenty years ended and inclusive of 1906 was 29,125, whereas for the previous twenty years it had been 15,355. The rate in 1900 was twenty-three for each 100,000 population. In 1880 it was sixteen.

Pennsylvania's total for the last twenty years was 39,686 and that of Massachusetts 22,940. The highest rate in the eastern states is that of Maine, 117 for each 100,000 population.

Wives obtain two-thirds of the divorces. Desertion constitutes 38.9 per cent of the grounds for all divorces, and neglect to provide, unfaithfulness, cruelty and drunkenness are other grounds. Five divorces are granted the wife for cruelty to one for the husband. Alimony was asked by three wives out of sixteen and obtained by two out of sixteen.

An odd feature of the report is that the proportion of husbands who asked for alimony was 2.8 per cent and that 2 per cent obtained it. In Utah six husbands obtained divorces for nonsupport.

The fifth year of married life seems to have been the most dangerous and most likely to bring the matrimonial ship upon the rocks. From the first to the fifth year the ratio increases, but after the fifth year there is less tendency to separation, although the number of divorces does not fall below that of the first year.

The average duration of marriages terminated by divorce is about ten years. Sixty per cent, or three-fifths, last less than ten years, and 10 per cent last longer.

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN
I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.
I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

AT this time in the Christian year [illegible] [illegible] reminded that [illegible] [illegible] of the Nazarene [illegible] [illegible] an out of doors religion and in an age when there is so much talk of the value of out of door life it is well enough to bear this in mind. Dr. Henry van Dyke, who has done so much toward stating the truths of Christianity in the language of the time, has written a book entitled "Out of Doors In the Holy Land." Christ was born in a grotto, so to speak, in Bethlehem, and from childhood to manhood, on the journey to Egypt, on the journey to Jerusalem to the temple, in the baptism in Jordan, most of the scenes are out of doors, while during his ministry the Saviour taught the people almost constantly out of doors with numerous references to nature. The sermon on the mount, the many talks by the seaside and on ship, the walks through the fields on the Sabbath day and many other scenes ending in the crucifixion on [illegible], the resurrection and the ascension were all associated with the open air, so that it may be said that, despite the need in these days for churches in which to worship, Christianity in its origin was by no means altogether an indoors religion.

From Palestine to Egypt is a natural transition at this season, for it was from Judea to the country of the pharaohs that Joseph took the infant Jesus and his mother when warned of the angel. One of the new books is "Egypt and Its Monuments," by Robert Hichens and Jules Guerin. Mr. Hichens wrote the text, and Mr. Guerin provided the illustrations, and both artist and author made special pilgrimages to the land of the pharaohs to gather impressions for their joint work. The beauty, magic and mystery of this ancient land are admirably brought out in these pages.

Egypt is coming to be studied more and more both by the lay student and by divines who wish to trace the history of religion from its early manifestations in such ancient races as those which inhabited the country of the Nile. Dynasties might come and go, but the civilization of Egypt seemed to go on forever. So much is Egypt being read about nowadays that the names of Sesostris and Amenemhat and Rameses hardly sound stranger than those of Alexander and Napoleon, and it does not seem such a long time to the era of that dusky ruler, Amenophis IV., who so loved his wife to distraction that he is represented in the art of his day as kissing her on a chariot.

African scenes have a great fascination for Mr Hichens, and one of his best known romances, "The Garden of Allah," has its principal action in the desert of Sahara.

Mr. Hichens has the distinction of being able in an unusual degree to hold the interest of the highly cultivated, the critical and the somewhat jaded reader. The intellectual grip of a story like "The Garden of Allah" or "Barbary Sheep" cannot be denied, for it completely conquers the critical sense, and the ideas of the author insinuate themselves, as it were, among one's inmost thoughts. Yet Mr Hichens' stories are popular not merely with literary connoisseurs, but with the general public as well.

Christmas would hardly be Christmas without some kind of James Whitcomb Riley gift book, and it is said that modern taste and tendency in holiday presents of this sort were given direction by Mr. Riley's "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," which was published some years ago with pictures in color by Howard Chandler Christy. It has enjoyed an enormous vogue and has perhaps given Mr Riley's lines a larger circulation than has been gained by any English poem since "An Elegy in a Country Churchyard." This year there is a new Christy-Riley book, "Home Again With Me," and there is also a new Riley-Betts book. This is "The Orphant Annie Book," in which Miss Ethel Franklin Betts has given admirers of the poet some very quaint, gay, dainty pictures of children in illustration of his popular characters. Riley has come to be regarded as especially a Christmas poet, as Christmas is the holiday of the children and the festival of home, and the humor of the famous Hoosier versifier makes its appeal to the universal love of simple, childlike characters and scenes.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

One of the most popular of the new novels is "The Silver Butterfly," by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow. Hitherto Mrs. Woodrow has laid the scenes of her stories in one of two settings, either in the midst of the untamed western wilderness or amid the ultra fashionable society of New York. Mrs. Woodrow has had personal experience of both. Many readers of "The New Missioner" questioned the ability of any cultivated woman to secure first hand knowledge of the life there portrayed. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Woodrow did herself actually live for a time in a raw mining camp. For one whole winter she dwelt high up in the mountain passes, her little cabin so often drifted over with snow that it was impossible to cut her way out. A mine of fabulous wealth figures importantly in "The Silver Butterfly," though the action is placed exclusively in New York. In this way Mrs. Woodrow combines to romantic purpose the two atmospheres with which she is familiar.

MRS. WILSON WOODROW.

One of the prettiest scenes that have come to notice in some time in connection with leading figures in literature is a picture of John Burroughs having a picnic with his family in the woods near his beloved Slabsides. The veteran naturalist is seated between two tall trees, with his grandchildren at his side. Every season is a busy season for the nature student, and Mr Burroughs, despite his seventy-one years, is as enthusiastic a devotee of such pursuits as ever.

JOHN BURROUGHS AND HIS FAMILY IN THE FOREST.

It is related that in an address before the Young Men's Catholic association in Boston a short time ago Mr Connolly referred to a conversation he had with his friend and admirer, President Roosevelt, on the subject of possible war with Japan. It was just [illegible] Admiral Evans started out from Hampton Roads with his big fleet.

"I asked the president," said Mr Connolly, "if he intended to send the fleet to foreign waters."

"You may be sure the fleet is going," was the president's reply, according to Mr Connolly. "It's a mighty pity if it cannot go from one home port to another."

Mr Connolly is not only a writer about outdoor life, but an athlete himself. He was a participant in the recent Olympic games at London and has just published a novel entitled "An Olympic Victory—A Story of the Modern Games." This is a love story of modern Greece, which reaches its climax in the great Marathon race at the revival of the Olympic games in 1896. Louis, the hero of the story, is one of the Greek contestants in that race. Mr Connolly himself took part in those games.

The state legislature will convene on next Monday and the first vote on the election of senator will take place at noon on Tuesday. It is hoped for the good of all concerned that this matter will be settled quickly so that the members can get down to business early in the session. There is some legislation that is badly needed at this session but the great work of the individual legislators who desire to serve the people faithfully, will be to prevent the passage of obnoxious laws. Among the measures which are expected to come up will be ones to amend the fishing laws, road law, the direct primary and local option laws as well as numerous measures whose effect will be more local to certain sections of the state than general.

The bounty paid by Clatsop county for cougar, bear and wild cat scalps should be an additional incentive not only for the people residing in the country but for hunters as well to join in the work of ridding the county of these pests which do such a vast amount of damage each year in the slaughter of domestic animals and small game. With the cougars and wildcats killed off and adequate protective laws enforced, there will be a chance of increasing the number of deer, elk and smaller game, that are rapidly becoming exterminated.

The cost of putting the American battleship fleet thru the Suez Canal is the tidy sum of $115,000—most of which will go to the Suez Canal Company. Some of the expense, to be sure, is due to quarantine regulations, but the charge on that score is inconsequential. As the American ships form the largest fleet, by twice over, to pass through the noted waterway, the canal company makes the nicest "find" in its history, toward which each federal taxpayer in the United States has contributed his mite. The canal company is a 40,000,000 corporation—precisely the sum which this government paid for the Panama Canal zone and the appurtenances thereto, at the behest of William Nelson Cromwell. We paid $40,000,000 for a mere right-of-way. The Suez company has a $40,000,000 property. Secretary Bishop, of the Isthmian canal commission, thinks we will have completed our canal by 1915. Even so, we will be obliged to levy toll for a long time at $1.47 per ton before we can catch the Suez in earning power.

Andrew Carnegie insists on being an author, although fate seems to have specialized him as a mere maker of money and collector of capital. His latest contribution to contemporaneous thought is an article in which he says that the ultimate solution of industrial disputes will be found in giving labor a share in the business, thereby enabling toilers to enjoy the profits. The plan has worked well with the Pennsylvania Railroad system whose stock is owned by a multitude of small stockholders many of whom are employes of the company—and the Pennsylvania keeps in harmonious reason with its wage earners.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL EMPEROR

By words rather than deeds the impulsive and strenuous kaiser has impressed himself upon the American people as an emperor of the kind that reigned before divine right was seriously challenged and whose "iron hand" or "mailed fist" stands for irresistible sway. William II is not of that kind, and it needed but a clash of his will with the aroused will of the German people to show that the imperial power centered in Berlin is nothing to make the earth tremble unless backed by the national spirit.

Politically the German empire is a union governed as a federal representative system. The parliament is elective and democratic. There is no monarch in the usual sense, but a monarchical feature is retained by making the presidency of the federal council hereditary and vesting the imperial executive power in the king of Prussia. Prussia is the strongest member of the union and holds the balance of power in parliament. But the powerful states of Wurttemberg, Bavaria and Saxony hold special privileges guaranteed by the constitution as inviolable. In brief, the kaiser is a president having unusual powers and privileges, which, however, stop far short of being supreme.

Europe caught at the outbreak in Haiti as an excuse to prod the United States into some more "white man's burden" ventures. This country was urged to remind the negroes of Haiti and their black neighbors generally that they must use their independence rightly or submit to the control of stronger and wiser races. The Europeans know very well what would happen if the big stick were to tackle that job. South Americans know it too.

The truth is that the shadow of the big stick already falls upon Haiti and certain other republics in like estate, including Cuba and Santo Domingo. There has been no bloodshed, no terrorizing south of us to speak of since we put an end to Weylerism. We do not want to actually control the negroes in South America. It would prove a thankless job for this country and spell ruination for their race prospects, which are considerable. Those people should either be let alone or wiped out and are better off free with the big stick as an exemplary neighbor than they would be under its mastery, for it wouldn't be used gingerly if called in. The negroes now live in wholesome fear of it, with respect for what it stands for, and that is enough.

Hawaii is in danger of being orientalized, and the authorities are bidding for American settlers to come over and help stem the rising tide of Asiatics. The Japanese lead in immigration. Honolulu's population has doubled under American rule, yet there are only 7,000 whites among its 45,000 inhabitants, and the natives are said to be dying out. With her expanding industries Hawaii is an inviting field for the alert and energetic Japs, and they rush in without waiting to be asked.

Mrs. E. H. Harris gave a dinner party last evening. The guests were delighted with the coffee. Mrs. Harris always uses Folger's Golden Gate whole roast, and grinds it herself, not too fine, pulverized coffee is bitter.

STRANGE FREAKS OF CLIMATE

Readings of Thermometers at Montana Points

Butte., Mont., Jan. 9—Remarkable climatic freaks characterize the intensely cold wave which is sweeping Montana. At Gardiner, Mont., at the Mammoth Hot Srings entrance to the Yellowstone National park, at an altitude of 7000 feet, the thermometer this afternoon registered 50 degrees above zero, and a heavy rain was falling. At Livingston, Mont., 50 miles distant, and 800 feet lower, it is 20 below zero.

Usually the winters at Gardiner are much more severe than in the lower adjacent country. Butte, on the Pacific side of the continental divide, of the Rockies, registered 33 degrees above zero this afternoon, while Helena, 40 miles distant in an air line, on the Atlantic side of the divide, showed as low as 33 below zero this evening.

Cargo of Five Thousand Cats.

Japan, it seems, is infested with rats, and the reason is explained by a Paris contemporary—viz. that the Japanese cats, which are not prolific, are pampered to an extraordinary degree. During the last few days, the [illegible] proceeds, a ship has left one of the principal German ports with 5000 cats on board. These on arrival are to be settled in the various maritime towns of the mikado's dominions, and we further learn, says the London Globe, that the present consignment of cats is to be followed by four others, each of 5,000. The name of the principal German port is not given.

"Job" Insurance.

Insurance Commissioner James V. Barry of Michigan has discovered a new form of insurance among railroad conductors, says a Lansing dispatch. It is a "job" insurance scheme by which every man who loses his position through any cause except drunkenness or garnishment of salary receives $500. The next legislature will be asked to pass a law regulating and controlling this form of insurance. William J. Ross, a Michigan Central conductor, is the organizer.

TWO CHANGES IN COUNCIL

Karinen and Schmidt Win Election Contests

Two changes were made yesterday in the personnel of the city council and each was the result of an election contest. The committee appointed at Friday afternoon's meeting to count the ballots in the contest between Karinen and Carney over the election of councilman for the two year term from the First ward reported at the adjourned meeting last night that it had completed the recount and found Karinen had been elected by two votes, the vote being Karinen, 147; Carney, 145. The report was approved and a resolution adopted declaring Karinen entitled to a seat as councilman from the First ward. Mr. Karinen then took the oath of office and as he assumed his seat said: I "thank you one and all for a square deal."

The next order of business brought a surprise of nearly every one present, as just before the council was called to order a protest was filed by Chris Schmidt against the seating of George Kaboth as councilman from the Second ward and asking for a recount of the ballots. As soon as the reading of the protest was finished, Kaboth objected to its being considered, as it had not been filed at the first meeting in January in accordance with rules and regulations governing election contests that had been adopted by the council and also said it was not accompanied by any affidavit alleging any cause for a recount. Karinen also spoke against allowing a recount, saying Mr. Schmidt had told him he was satisfied with the result and it was only at the behest of politicians that the contest had been filed. Belland contended the protest was not too late as last evening's meeting was an adjourned session of the first meeting in the year. The city attorney and mayor both supported that contention and on motion by Belland the petition for a recount was granted.

The mayor then appointed Belland, Stangeland, Leinenweber, Karinen and Wilson as judges and Prael, Fox and the auditor as clerks to conduct the recount, which was commenced immediately. Within an hour the committee reported that the recount showed Schmidt had been elected by a majority of one, the total vote being, Schmidt, 257; Kaboth, 256. After the report was approved a resolution was adopted declaring Chris Schmidt elected as councilman for the four year term from the Second ward and he will be seated as soon as he takes the oath of office.

Andrew Anderson was reappointed as janitor of the city hall. T. J. Springdale was appointed sexton of the city cemetery and A. Brix and C. C. Utzinger were re-appointed as members of the board of street assessors. The council then adjourned until its regular meeting on January 18.

GOURT ORDERS CLAIMS PAID

Receiver of Title Bank Will Distribute $235,000

An order allowing Receiver Howard of the defunct Title, Guarance & Trust company to pay claims of $250 and under, aggregating $235,000 and divided among some 2700 individuals who had started small accounts previous to the bank failure was signed by Judge Wolverton in the United States circuit court yesterday. All claims will receive interest from November 6, 1907 to November 6, 1908, this amounting to $65,000. The matter was presented by W. C. Bristol.

Under this order Receiver Howard pays out all the funds on hand and Mr. Ladd foots the bill for the balance as a voluntary payment and out of consideration for the small creditors many of whom are sorely in need of the money at the present time.

The claims which are to be paid today or as soon as Mr. Howard can arranged the details, are those of $250 or less, bearing 4 per cent interest from November 6, 1907, to November 6, 1908 with the additional interest that will have accumulated before the payment of each account is made.

Those affected by the order allowing the receiver to pay the accounts are conductors, motormen, shop girls and many others mostly of the working class who had started bank accounts.

CONNECT WITH JAP STEAMERS

Arrangements Made by St. Paul Railroad

Chicago, Jan. 9—Coincident with plans for the operation of a through trans-oceanic service in connection with the new Pacific Coast extension of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Pau Railroad to Seattle and Tacoma, it is announced that through service with semi-monthly sailings will be inaugurated by the Osanl-Shoshen Kaisha, an established Japanese steamship line for the transportation of freight between the United States, Canada and Europe and Asia. For this service six modern steamships of 6000 gross tons each are under construction in Japan.

ASTORIA THEATRE

"BABES IN TOYLAND TONIGHT"

Tonight the great musical extravaganza "Babes in Toyland' will be the attraction at the opera house and unquestionably will be the event of the season. The plot of "Babes in Toyland" principally concerns Alan and Jane, the central figures, and old Barnaby, their uncle. The story in brief is this. Alan and Contrary Mary are sweethearts; Tom Tom and Jane are sweethearts. Old Barnaby who is the guardian of Alan and Jane, desire to destroy them, that he may marry Contrary Mary himself, as well as secure Alan and Jane's weatlh. Barnaby's first plan goes amiss however, and he sends Alan and Jane out on a ship, hoping they will be lost at sea. His second effort meets with little less success, for when he tries to destroy his niece and nephew by sending them to the woods where the Vale of Spiders is, he succeeds in causing them much alarm and fright, but they eventually find their way into Toyland.

"THE DEVILS AUCTION"

Tomorrow Sunday night, the great spectacular and everlasting Devils Auction will hold the boards at the Astoria theatre. Of late years the promoters to spectacle outside of Mr. Yale, have discarded these effective finales to their performance possibly to save what they consider an unnecessary expense. In any event, the scene has been cut out in the majority of productions of this description; with the exception of the "Devil's Auction." Manager Yale, however, that each year offered his patrons a beautiful series of stage pictures, and in this, the twenty-eighth edition, promises a radical change from anything hitherto attempted in this line.

The new transformation is denied "Amor" (Love) and is claimed to be one of if not the handsomest scenes ever presented.

"ARE YOU A MASON"

Next Monday evening the Astoria theatre should be crowded to the doors to witness the great rollicking success "Are You a Mason. Everyone knows the Baker Stock Company of the Bungalow Theatre, Portland and the announcement that the popular organization intact will be brought here to give a performance of their big holiday week's success "Are You a Mason" will doubtless be real news to our theatre goers. Manager Baker donated his popular Bunaglow theatre (the home of Baker Stock) for a society entertainment to benefit the earthquake sufferers and was solicited to send the company to two or three neighboring cities for the evening. He decided to play in Astoria. The Bungalow was packed every performance during New Years week. The cast will be exactly the same as presented in Portland. Seats should be secured early.

"SI PLUNKNARD"

Next Wedesday January 13 the laughable rural comedy entitled "Si Plunkard will hold the stage at the Astoria theatre. This is one of the most laughable plays ever put upon the stage, but at the same time it has an interesting plot. It is presented by an excellent cast with the famous character comedian J. C. Lewis in the title role. The piece is the production of a clever comedian who knows the public wants and has set himself at work to meet the demand; the result is a rural comedy drama full of queer situations and quaint characters and enlivened by that indefinable snap and go, which is the life and soul of a rural comedy drama.

ABOUT ASTORIA

Mrs. Salkka, mother of Albert Salkka of Deep River, died at his residence there on Friday of old age. She was a native of Finland and 82 years of age Her funeral will take place on Sunday.

The ex-soldier who burglarized the store of S. J. Bassel at Chinook has been captured by the officials there. He was found living in a shack on the hills above the town and some of the stolen goods were found in his posession.

Mayor Smith announced last evening that he will appoint the standing committees of the council during the coming week, so that they will be ready to take up the matters pending before them and report at the meeting on January 18.

At the request of her mother a warrant was isued this morning for the arrest of the 16 year old daughter of Mrs. Huntsinger of Seaside on a charge of incorrigibility. Sheriff Pomeroy went after her and she will be examined before the county court on Monday.

One of the noticeable accidents of Friday evening from coasting was that of Albert Stuart, son of J. W. Stuart, who had his head badly cut while coming down the Seventeeth street hill. His injuries are not considered to be serious but he will be laid up for some time.

Willibald Schmidt, of Flensbery, Germany, has arrived in the city, having been attracted here by one of the advertisements of the chamber of commerce. He is represented to be a man of some means and it is his intention to engage in some line of mercantile life here.

A young woman of Clifton, who lives in the lower portion of the city, attempted to commit suicide last night by drinking carbolic acid. Prompt action by Dr. Pilkington saved her life and this afternoon she is out of danger, but has a dreadfully burned mouth and throat.

Chief Foster of the fire department made a test of all the fire hydrants in the city today and found them ready for immediate use. He desires, however, that householders be exceptionally careful with their fires as the danger now is greater than at any other time.

Miss Minnie Knutsen sustained a fracture of the small bone in her right arm near the elbow while coasting last evenng near her home in Uppertown. The sled on which she was riding collided with a sleigh that was passing along the street. throwing her to the ground and breaking her arm.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Youngs River Telephone Company was held this afternoon and elected officers to serve during the ensuing year as follows: J. F. Bartoldus, president; T. S. Cornelius, vice-president; Wm. C. A. Pohl, secretary; J. P. Ryan, George Richardson and John F. Christians, trustees. Mr. Christians was also named as lineman. The meeting voted to levy an assessment of $1 on each member of the company for making repairs, the assessment to be paid within 30 days. An order was also made that no stockholder shall sell his stock to any one, except to the company itself.

From Duluth a letter was received this afternoon from C. G. Palmberg stating that his son George had been buried in the family plot in the cemetery there and that he, his wife and little son expected to arrive in Astoria on next Friday, January 15.

The organization of a company of coast Artillery at Coos Bay, as has been authorized by the state board will form a battalion with headquarters in Astoria and will undoubtedly mean the promotion of Captain Abercrombie to the rank of major in command of the battalion. There was considerable talk for a time of organizing a second company in this city, but nothing appears to have been done concerning the matter of late.

All the logging camps in the lower Columbia river district have been compelled to close down on account of the deep snow making operations practically impossible. P. J. Brix has about 90 men at his camp on Grays river and today he shipped over several tons of provisions and supplies in order to have a sufficient quantity on hand in case the floating ice makes navigation of Grays bay and river dangerous for the steamers which ply between here and those points.

From the advice of the weather forecaster and local indications the present storm will continue for several days longer and probably with equal or greater severity. Last night was again colder than those provious and the weather bureau thermometer registered 18 above zero. Snow continued to fall during the night and intermittently during the day until fully 8 inches are on the ground this afternoon and still snowing. The river is still open for use by the large and heavy boats but the wooden ones are being more or less damaged.

J. Duff, an electrician in charge of electrical work of the United States Engineers stationed at Fort Stevens., was burned about the arms and shoulders yesterday by the explosion of oil in a stove which he had attempted to light. Supposing all fire extinct, he poured a large quantity of oil upon the coals. His action was followed by a heavy explosion which enveloped him in flames. The timely and heroic action of his wife undoubtedly saved his life, as she promptly covered him with blankets, thus smothering the flames.

The continued drain on the spuply of water in the reservoir resulting from the service pipes in all parts of the city being left open to prevent freezing, has reduced the supply until the large reservoir is only about half full. To let it be reduced lower would be hazardous owing to the danger from fire and for that reason Superintendent Johnson has given notice that during the balance of the cold spell, the water will be shut off between the hours of eight o'clock in the evening and six in the morning, beginning with tonight.

At its meeting yesterday the board of regents of the Oregon Agricultural College decided to ask the legislature for an increase of $50,000 in the appropriation for the maintenance of the institution This additional amount was deemed necessary in view of the phenomnal growth in all departments of the college. Experimental work in dry farming also received the approval of the board, in view of the fact that the government has offered to share the expense with the state in the establishment of an experimental farm and station, conditional that the state shall contribute its portion of the required $6000 a year. The annual report of President Kerr shows that the attendance last year was 1156, an increase of 323 over 1907. The enrollment at present is between 1200 and 1300, with prospects of increase.

An unusually late catch of salmon eggs as taken at the Wallowa fish hatchery last Saturday and Sunday, when 47,000 eggs were secured. The fish were silversides and were caught with grab hooks. So far as known no eggs have been taken at the Wallowa hatchery later than November. This makes the catch of last week all the more remarkable to the hatcherymen, especially when the catch of 1907-08, amounting to 91,000 eggs, is taken into consideration. Previous to last week's catch, 1,240,000 eggs had been taken at the hatchery. Superintendent Bliss J. Thorn says that the fish have been lying in the deep water above the dam until last week when the ice which covered the river broke up and allowed the fish to come down to the shallow water where he discovered them spawning. There are still a number of the fish in the river about to spawn and it is expected that about 50,000 more eggs will be taken in the next few days.

The steam schooner Yosemite cleared at the custom house today for San Francisco with a cargo of 850,000 feet of lumber, loaded at St Helens

A judgment has been handed down in the California courts allowing the owners of the steamship Geo. W. Elder $4000 salvage on account of service rendered the steamship San Pedro in connection with the Columbia disaster in July, 1907. Of this amount $1000 will go to the crew and $3000 to the owners The orignal amount allowed the Elder was $20,000 but on appeal the amount was reduced to $4000 The Geo. W. Elder picked up the water logged steamship San Pedro on the morning of July 22, 1907. after her collision with the Columbia. She had on board a number of survivors and the Elder towed the wreck into Eureka. Owners of the Elder sued the San Pedro to recover salvage.

Manager McGee of the Astoria Electric Co is making every effort to keep the street cars in service and so far he has succeeded. But in order to accomplish this under the present weather conditions with snow falling almost continuously for the past three days, he has employed an extra force of track men, improvised a snow scraper and kept three cars running all night. This energy has enabled the cars to continue to run thruout the day which no doubt is appreciated by the public. Mr. McGee stated this morning that he believed he could keep the track clear so the cars could run right along notwithstanding that the equipment provided to combat the snow was unlike in other cities where the snow is expected every winter and provisions made for its coming.

Arrangements are being made by officers of the Oregon Historical Society for the celebration, on February 13, of the 50th anniversary of Oregons admission into the union as a state. Frederick V. Holman, president of the Oregon Historical Society, and George H. Himes, its curator, have charge of the preliminary arrangements. Frederick N. Judson, of St. Louis, a widely-known lawyer and author, will be the chief speaker. Other notable addreses will also be delivered at that time. It has not yet been decided whether the cermonies will be held in Portland or Salem. While the constitution of Oregon was adopted by the people of Oregon in 1857, and officers chosen thereunder, it was not until February 14, 1859, that Oregon was admitted to the Union as a state by act of congress. As February 14 this year falls on Sunday, those in charge have deemed it advisable to hold the celebration on the Saturday preceding.

The regular meeting of the chamber of commerce will be held Monday night at 7:30 o'clock but no election of officers will take place. According to the resolution passed by the special committee to which was referred the matter of the continuation of the promotion work and the nomination of officers, all officers and committeemen are to hold over until April 1. This committee is composed of the leading business men of the city and after careful consideration the resolution embodied their best opinion and judgment and there is no duoht but that it will be the sense of Monday's meeting. Those on this committe are Frank Patton, chairman; Judge F. J. Taylor, Norris Staples, Judge J. Q. A. Bowlby, Mayor A. M. Smith, C. R. Higgins, E. Z. Ferguson, W .F. McGregor and J. M. Anderson of the Scandinavian-American bank. April 1 is the end of the fiscal year of the chamber of commerce so far as its promotion work is concerned and therefore the reason for postponing the election of officers until that date. The annual reports showing the work done during the past year will be read and suggestions and plans made concerning the year to come.

Notice has been received that the argument of the Christ Neilson case has been set for hearing before the United States supreme court on Monday January 18. This is a case in which the defendant was fine $50 in the justice court of this city for operating a purse seine in the waters of the Columbia river, contrary to the laws of Oregon, which forbid that character of gear being used. The defendant held a license for his seine from the state of Washington, which not only does not prohibit the use of purse seines, but has a special law which provides for licensing them. The case thus involved the question of concurrent jurisdiction of the two states over the waters of the Columbia river, in an instance where the laws of the respective state not only do not argee but are in direct conflict. By mutual consent of the authorities of the two states the case was appealed to the higher courts with the understanding that it should be carried to the United States supreme court for final adjudication. The object of this is not to punish the defendant for this infraction of the law but to secure a ruling from the highest tribunal in the land on a question that has been a bone of contention for years.

An application has been presented to the county court by the Oregon Coast Railway Company for a franchise for constructing and operating an electric car line over the Young's bay and Lewis and Clark drawbridges, along certain public roads and thru streets in platted towns which are not incorporated. While the court has not made a formal order granting the franchise it will do so as soon as the document has been examined by the district attorney and approved by him guarding the interests of the county and of the property owner in every way. The franchise will provde that the railway company must construct new and more substantial draws for each of the bridges and pay half the operating expenses of each, the company to have the old draws. It must also build new approaches alongside the present approaches. The draw at the Youngs' bay bridge is to be raised six feet so that launches and small boats can pass thru without opening the draw. No public road is to be used for laying track unless the road is at least 50 feet in width. The franchise must be accepted in writing within 10 days after it is granted, construction of the road must be commenced within one year and the road must be in operation within two years.

F. E. Woods, the ex-soldier, who was arrested a short time ago on the charge of robbing S. J. Bassel's store at Chinook and afterwards escaped from the custody of the officer, has been recaptured. He was found camping in the woods a few miles back of Chinook and is now confined in the county jail at South Bend.

TILLMAN GIVES HIS ANSWER

To Charges Made Against Him by President

Washington, Jan.11 The senate and galleries were crowded today when Tillaman made his reply to the charges made against him in connection with the Oregon land grant. Many house representatives were present.

Tillman in replying to the charges of the president that he had exerted his official influence as a senator for his own benefit to bring suit against the railroads in the northwest in order that he might be able to purchase land held by the Southern Oregon Co., and granted to the state of Oregon in 1868, for the construction of a military road, said among other things:

"In my public work here I have not hesitated to criticize and comment on the official action and utterance of the president and I have doubtless given him good cause to seek revenge. I have at various times arraigned him in the senate for tyranical invasion of the rights of congress, for the usurpation of authority not given him by the contitution, for disobedience of law and neglect duty of and particularly in the case of Mrs. Morris for brutal and cruel conduct toward a helpless woman."

In his address Tillman declared: "I have not attempted to deceive anybody, I have not told any fasehoods, I have not broken any laws; I have not been guilty of any immoral conduct. I had the right to purchase the land if I could, but my judgement told me it was unsafe as an investment." He also said; "The president's sleuths set to do the dirty work of spying on a senator, when that senator had exposed a fraud which was being prepetrated on the public, reported to him on July 27." He declares it was personal malice that moved the president to bring charges against him and declared he had nothing to do with the change in the law which the president complains of in regard to the secret service. Taking up the president's statement concerning Dorr, a land agent, making his filings through Reeder and Watkins of Marshfield, Oregon, Tillman said: "It will be noted that I accused Dorr in the senate of being a swindler and asked the postoffice department to issue a fraud order against him." Dorr had used Tillman's name in his advertising and had beer denounced by Tillman as a swindler. Tillman said. "Dorr, of whom I had never heard of before, was evidently pushing his scheme of getting suckers to invest and using my name as I have indicated without authority, because I had not paid any fees to him or had written him or filed any applications. I therefore felt it incumbent on me to expose the swindle in the senate, which I did on February 19, and asked the postoffice department to issue a fraud order." Tillman paid is respects to the operations of Harriman and said: "The man who announces to congress that he, Theodore Roosevelt, assumed the right to permit the steel trust to absorb its greatest rival, contrary to law, would doubtless not hestitate to help his dear friend Harriman in holding 2,000,000, acres of public domain in Oregon and California, because Ben Tillman wanted to buy 1400 acres. The president having convicted Tillman proceeded to clear Dorr in both cases contrary to the facts. I await the verdict calmly and without fear and will abide by it."

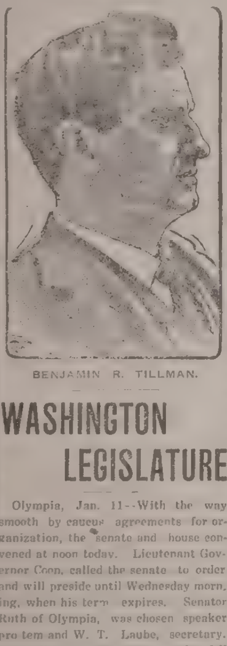
Tillman closed his speech at 1:59. There was no demonstration or applause.

LEGISLATURE CONVENED TODAY

Caucus Agrees on Speaker and President

Salem, Jan. 11 -The Oregon legislature assembled this morning for the 25th biennial session. Temporary organization of the senate was effected with Senator Kay as temporary president and a recess was then taken until the afternoon. The house effected temporary organization by electing John C. McCue as temporary speaker and adjourned until this afternoon. The Republicans have taken every position, the Democrats none of the patronage. The latter neverthless prepared a list of candidates for every position and will make formal nominations.

The plan of permanent organization was determined upon at a caucus held this morning and will be effected this afternoon. Under the caucus agreement C. N. McArthur of Multnomah will be speaker of the house and Jay Bowerman of Gilliam, Sherman and Wheeler counties, will be president of the senate.



BENJAMIN R. TILLMAN.

WASHINGTON LEGISLATURE

Olympia, Jan. 11--With the way smooth by caucus agreements for organization, the senate and house convened at noon today. Lieutenant Governor Coon, called the senate to order and will preside until Wednesday morning, when his term expires. Senator Ruth of Olympia, was chosen speaker pro tem and W. T. Laube, secretary. The calling of the house to order fell upon L. O. Meigs, candidate for the sheakership. Meigs was chief clerk of the last house and because of that fact was requested to preside today. Later he was chosen speaker.

MURDERER KILLS HIMSELT

Leaves Letter Confessing His Brutal Crime

Carthage, Ills., Jan. 11 -Rev. John Savinal Carmichael committed suicide here today at the home of his sister, Mrs. Myranda Hughes. He left a letter to the sheriff at Port Huron, near where the murder of Gideon Browing was prepetrated, asking him to come for his body. In a letter he declared he killed Browning, and cut up his body, while under the hypnotic influence of his wife.

WASHINGTON COURT MUDDLE

Root and Gordon to be Disbsrred

Seattle, Jan. 11 Judge Milo A. Root, went to Olympia this morning. He intimated he may attempt to qualify for a place upon the supreme bench to which he was elected. In the absence of any action by the court or bar association there is nothing to prevent him. The Times has a dispatch from Olympia that the supreme court or the state bar association will recommend proceedings to disbar both former Supreme Judge Root and Judge M. J. Gordon of Spokane is expected by lawyers and legislators here today.

REFORM NEEDED FOR CRIMINALS

Report of Commission Appointed

Washington, Jan. 11—Sweeping reforms, affecting the criminal classes in the District of Columbia are recommended in the report transmitted to congress by President Roosevelt today by the commission appointed to investigate the subject. The report is unsparing in condemnation of the conditions in the federal jail, district work house and other penal and correctional institutions. The commission says that while the protection of society justifies the infliction of punishment, a passionless, patient and impartial attitude should be taken toward violators of the law. But that when a prisoner is released the law should employ all possible agencies to assist him making a new start. The commission recommends a parole system and a system of probation.

AMENDMENT TO COMMERCE LAW

Asked in Report Filed by Commission

Washington, Jan. 11 The report of the inter-state commerce commission was made public today. It states that the financial depression resulted in the diminution of railway revenues and caused several railways to go into the hands of receivers. The gross earnings of all the railroads in 1908 were $164,464,941 less than for 1907, but were $98,875,470 more than the gross earning for the year 1906. The year 1907 was the banner year in railroad history. The report, referring to the Harriman decision, expresses the unchanging opinion of the commission that Harriman by reason of his control of the Union Pacific is a "trustee of the people" and "can no longer claim protection as an American citizen."

"The supreme court, however, is of a contrary opinion," the report says, "and the commission can, of course, only suggest to congress that if there is to be a full investigation by federal authorities of these financial dealings, referring to the exchange of railroads stock to secure control of other railroads, some action must be taken by congress." During the year, 5194 complaints, formal and informal, of forming rates and including practically all the roads in the United States were filed with the commission The number of formal cases and investigations was 554. More than two thirds of the informal complaints were satisfactorily adjusted through correspondence.

THOUSANDS PERISH AT SEA

Many Lives Lost During Year Just Closed

The hungry sea laid a heavy toll upon human life during the year 1908.

Some of the worst disasters of the past twelve months were recorded in the Pacific. Loss of life at sea last year upon the ocean was 2,273, and upon inland waters 199, as compared with 1,785 upon the ocean and 341 upon inland waters in 1907.

One feature of the last year was the large number of missing vessels, whose fate will never be known. Both in Atlantic and Pacific waters this list is exceptionally large, and it includes the names of many well-known ships of all flags, for which hope was maintained for months, only to be reluctantly abandoned when there was no possibility that disaster had not overtaken them.

The past year was characterized by heavy ice floes in the neighborhood of Cape Horn, and the general opinion is that not a few staunch ships met their doom in the great bergs. This theory is substantiated by the fact that not a few ships damaged by ice in rounding the cape of storms.

The ships Arthur Sewall, Alacrita, Banaglore, Falkland Bank, Carnded Llewellyn and Castle Rock are among those who mysteriously disappeared with all hand. No word of any kind, not a bit of wreckage, no clew whatever has ever reached civilization to tell what fate overtook these ships. The Castle Rock was bound from Australia to Seattle with coal, and never arrived. The others were bound on voyages around Cape Horn.

The Asiatic coast witnessed disasters in which the greatest loss of life is recorded. The Japanese steamer Matsu Maru went down in the China sea, March 22, with a loss of 243. On June 8 the steamer Pow An was wrecked, eighty being lost. The steamer Ying King was lost on the same treacherous cast, July 27, and 300 victims, mostly natives, were drowned. A Japanese steamer foundered in the China sea November 27 and the loss of life is given at 700. The British steamer Duncarn was caught in a typhoon August 20, and went down in the China sea. Fifty-two lives were lost, only two being saved of the entire crew. On December 3 two Japanese vessels were lost, the casualties being given as 350. The steamer Ginsei Maru went down off the coast of Japan, December 2 seventy being lost. In the wrecks of the steamers Bankok and Taish Maru in the China sea, 149 were drowned.

Unquestionably the worst disaster of 1908 on this coast was the wreck of the American cannery bark Star of Bengal off Coronation island, September 20. In this disaster 111 live were sacrificed, a majority of them Chinese and Japanese. Early in January the British ship Hartfield went to pieces off the coast of Vancouver island, not a survivor living to tell the tale. Thirty lives were lost. On January 14 the steamer Island Flyer was lost on Puget sound, the death list being given as fourteen.

January's record in the Pacific is incomplete without mention of the loss of the American ship Eclipse, which foundered north of the Hawaiian islands, while bound from Newcastle, Australia, to San Francisco. This occured on January 19, three of the crew being lost, the others eventually making the island coast. In February, the unlucky thirteenth, the American ship Emily Reed went ashore close to the mouth of the Columbia river, and ten unfortunate sailors were lost, the others succeeding in making land. On May 1 the steam schooner Minnie E. Kelton went ashore in heavy weather off the Southern Oregon coast and eleven men went to a watery grave. On March 7 the codfishing schooner John F. Miller was driven ashore in the Aleutian group and ten men were either drowned or frozen to death.

There were many other wrecks in all parts of the world. In January two passenger steamers were lost off the Morocco coast with a casualty list of thirty. In February the steamer St. Cuthbert burned at sea, fifteen men being lost. The British cruiser Gladiator was sunk off the Isle of Wright, April 25, with a loss of thirty-six.

SHERIFF SIZEES NORWEGIAN SHIP

Shipping Agents Claim Master Violated Contract

Everett, Jan 11- The Norweigan ship Hovding, Capt H J Hanson, which finished loaded 1,500,000, feet of lumber at the Weyerheauser mill for Delagoa bay, South Africa, was seized by the sheriff today on a writ of attachment issued out of the superior court of Jefferson county The amount involved is about $400 and is alleged to be due Sims & Levy, shipping agents at Port Townsend. Capt. Hansen is alleged to have violated a contract of three years' duration to take sailors at $35 each from the boarding house masters.

Capt. Hansen, after signing the contract had an opportunity to get men for $12 each, it is said, and upon the advice of the Norwegian consul engaged the cheaper men. Capt. Hansen went to Seattle today to arrange settlement of the difficulty.

First Mate Olson attempted to prevent the sheriff from boarding the vessel, but was soon convinced of the officer's superior authority.

A HUMAN SALAMANDER

Machinist Who Battled in Flames Was Unhurt

The marvelous psychic power of Fred [illegible] Foskett a [illegible] machinist of Orange Mass has attracted the attention of Professor James of Harvard and other leading [illegible] of the Boston branch of the American Society of Psychical Research, who recently gave him tests on two days.

The first of the tests was held at the home of Prescott F. Hall on a Saturday afternoon Professor William James and several well known physicians were there and test conditions as nearly perfect as possible were made Foskett was seated in the center of a room before a small table There he performed every feat of the Hindoo faker and the Buddhist adept

On the table was an ordinary kerosene lamp with a chimney and a flat wick, a pan and several quarts of alcohol According to the reports of those present Foskett succeeded in every test The first test was made with ordinary sulphur matches Foskett lighted half a dozen, one after the other, holding them with one hand so close to the fingers of the other that the flames curled around them He then lighted the lamp and held his hands above the wick while the flames curled over them and the soot completely blackened them

From one of these tests to another Foskett went while the scientists held their breath and watched every motion, until he came to the climax In this he poured a quart of alcohol into the basin, lighted it and then washed his hands, bathing them for nearly ten minutes in the burning fluid, washing it up over his arms and to his face--literally bathing himself in blazing alcohol That completed the tests for the first day As soon as they were finished the physicians present examined Foskett, and they could find not the slightest trace of a burn or blister Foskett told them that the flames did not give him the slightest sensation of burning; that he felt comfortably warm and pleasant and nothing more.

The second tests were made on the next afternoon at the home of Professor James in Cambridge, Mass., and under the same conditions as the day before. Considerable mystery is thrown about them. Mr Hall said they were so startling that he did not care to discuss them until they had been tried again Another scientist who was there said that Foskett performed all of his experiments of the day before and then "absolutely and positively dematerialized.

"He seemed to dissolve into thin air as we watched him; was gone forty-one seconds and then materialized. It was so startling that we, I am afraid, lost sight of the test conditions, and we have asked him to appear before us again It seems unbelievable, but it certainly seemed so. We hardly know what to think of it."

Professor James refuses to talk about the tests.

According to those who were present, Foskett seems in a passive state during the tests, and he says he thinks of nothing in particular Those who examined him discredit the hypnotic theory They believe he has some latent phychic force that never has been studied

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.

I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

A SELF OPENING DOOR

Automatic Entrance Way that Has Been Installed

A well known Fifth avenue restaurant in New York has recently had installed an automatic door which is both novel and unique, and it is attracting much attention from the patrons of the place.

The contrivance consists of a wooden platform carrying doormats. The platform is depressed by the weight of the person entering and admits him, while a series of levers are so disposed as to close the door when he has entered.

The speed of opening and closing is carefully regulated, and the person entering is safe from being struck by the door as it closes behind him. The doors are not affected by wind pressure, and slamming is obviated by an oil dash pot.

Practical Forestry Work at Yale.

In the forest school pamphlet for 1908-9, which will soon be issued, it will be announced that the forest school at Yale university has now obtained the use of the extensive holdings of land of the New Haven Water company for work in practical forestry. A portion of this land has been in charge of the school for several years, but the tract now to be put under forestry management aggregates some 9,000 acres, of which over half is already wooded.

New York As a City Of Light

New York as a city of light is a comparatively recent development. New Yorkers themselves hardly realize what an evolution their town has experienced in this respect. It usually takes the stranger to note the fact as it deserves to be noted. It is the visitor from abroad especially who makes this discovery.

When the Pan-American exposition was opened at Buffalo seven years ago last May the people flocked from all the states of the Union and from many foreign climes to see what had been called in the preliminary advertising of the fair "the Rainbow City." It was indeed an architectural creation remarkable for its multiplicity of colors and the general harmony of the color scheme, but the visitors soon made the discovery that it was rather as a city of light than as a city of many colors that the exposition deserved to be known in the history of such enterprises. It was the first affair of the kind to utilize the opportunities created by science and invention for the presentation of artistic and impressive illumination in connection with architectural achievements on a large scale.

The Pan-American exposition showed how to create beautiful and entrancing effects in illumination by the outlining of buildings with thousands upon thousands of electric lights and by massing the lights in certain places so as to give the effect of a solid, resplendent, tensely luminous surface, glowing, but not glaring, and impressing the beholder with a certain idea of mystery, as if the illumination were the result of miraculous occurrence or the exhibition in some way of more than an earthly power. This was especially the effect produced by the illumination of the electric tower, the great architectural and spectacular triumph of the fair at Buffalo. The night effects of the world's fair at St. Louis were also most striking and beautiful, particularly the illumination of the cascades and the colonnade of states. These expositions pointed the way to what is now being carried into execution in New York—namely, an all the year round display which gives the largest city in the Union a reputation it has not had heretofore for beauty by night. The skyscraper era is responsible for this new evolution of artistic effects. There may be some question as to the symmetry and beauty of New York's sky line by day, but at night, with the towering structures of the lower portion of Manhattan island outlined against the sky by thousands if not millions of little electric lamps the fascination and beauty of the scene are not to be gainsaid. On either side of Manhattan island flow the two rivers which have made the city the greatest commercial center in the new world. The many ferry houses on the Hudson contribute their part to the illumination by the lighting of their frontage toward the river, and the boats plying up and down the stream present a spectacle of dancing and darting lights that has its own particular fascination. Across the East river are the spans of the bridges, their graceful arcs illuminated by rows of powerful lights and the cars passing and repassing affording another spectacle of moving lights.

THE ILLUMINATED SINGER TOWER.

But most conspicuous and impressive of all is the illumination of the skyscrapers of the downtown district, with the new Singer tower rising above them all. In the edge of the evening, when the lights are gleaming from a myriad of offices where employers and employees alike are striving for the almighty dollar, after the sunset hour, the scene is wonderful indeed. The lighted buildings rise tier on tier on both sides of the island from the water front to Broadway and form illuminated terraces, with the shining flagstaff of the Singer tower, 670 feet above the curb, as the topmost point in the brilliant sky line of the city.

The illumination of the Singer tower is just now the newest marvel in the wonders New York by night presents. The tower itself is a striking reminder of the admired and lamented electric tower of the Pan-American exposition. Its architectural lines are quite similar to those of the exposition structure, and when it is illuminated one could almost fancy himself back amid the fairylike confines of the gay city of pleasure which flourished for a season and then vanished, instead of in a place where people work six days in the week and sometimes seven in pursuit of the elusive dollar. The Singer illumination is still in the experimental stage. Never before has a commercial building been illuminated on the plan followed in this instance. The idea was conceived by Charles G. Armstrong, consulting mechanical and electrical engineer of the building, and the illumination is accomplished by thirty eighteen-inch projectors designed expressly for the purpose by the General Electric company. At the height of the fourteenth story are located projectors from which beams of light are thrown upon the exterior walls of the tower from its base to the thirty-fifth floor. The remainder of the exterior is illuminated by 1,600 concealed incandescent lamps. The flag at the top of the tower is illuminated by the projection of a beam of light from a thirty-six inch projector on the roof of a neighboring building. There is a charm about the effects produced which, as the old saying goes, has to be seen to be appreciated.

In the Herald square and Times square districts there are other spectacular illuminations which are most fascinating in their way. Broadway itself is an avenue of light, and it is not inappropriately termed "the Great White Way" now that electricity has come to play such a part in the doings of the town at night as well as by day. A photographic view of Broadway from the Flatiron or Times building reveals a highway up and down which is a stream of light let loose with such prodigality that one would think it was all furnished free gratis instead of with a vast expenditure and with bills which somebody in some way has to foot. From the Battery to the Bronx, from the Jersey shore to Coney Island and the Rockaways, the mysterious fluid flowing over myriad wires makes day of night, but adds a charm and heavenly beauty which sunlight seems not to possess or which at any rate we do not attribute to it under ordinary conditions. Some people think that New York at no distant day will be the most beautiful city in the world. However that may be, it is perhaps the most brilliant by night of any American city.

DORANDO AND HAYES

No Horse Could Have Run Marathorn Race as they Did

Richard Croker, former chief of Tammany Hall, was more interested the other day in Dorando and Hayes, the long distance runners than in politics or finance. After returning from Calvary cemetery in New York, where in company with his son he visited the grave of Frank Croker, the son who was killed in an auto accident, Mr. Croker went to the Democratic club. In commenting on the recent Marathon race in Madison Square Garden he said:

"Those boys furnished the greatest exhibition of running that I have ever witnessed. While I would like to have seen Hayes win, I think that Dorando ran the better race and won fairly. Dorando was in better condition. When you come to think of it, that record was a marvelous one. No horse that I know of could run twenty-six miles at an average rate of a mile in six minutes for the entire distance. It would kill him. But those boys did it without great distress."

Kitchen Novelty.

An aluminium alcohol lamp, with a cup for heating water or boiling an egg, the whole to be carried on a handle like a candlestick, is something new for kitchen or sickroom.

Family Ties.

[The bachelor's lament.]

O Christmas day, O time of cheer
We cannot greet you without sighs!
You bring, glad season of the year
The knitting up of family ties.

Our sisters mourn our piteous state.
They come to take us by surprise.
Our aunts, remembering the date,
Renew again our family ties.

Next morning officeward we go,
Coat collar turned up to our eyes.
We find the weather cold? Ah, no!
We want to hide those family ties.

—Elizabeth C. Webb in Success Magazine For December.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

A proud boast of Gilford, N. H., is Mrs. Susan Emerson, eighty-three years old, who can fry the "real old fashioned New England molasses doughnuts."

Miss Clara M. Howard has been appointed to the international fellowship founded by the Society of American Women in London. She is instructor in rhetoric and composition at Wellesley college.

Miss Julia Morrow has gone to Cincinnati to assume charge of the work of establishing a school to train young men and women to become rescue and purity workers. She is the corresponding secretary of the National Purity federation.

It is reported that Mrs. John Jacob Astor will succeed Mrs. William Astor as the leader of New York society. She was Miss Ava Willing before her marriage and will no doubt very gracefully take up the mantle dropped from the shoulders of the former queen.

TIDE TABLE FOR JANUARY 1909

[illegible]

The chief of United States engineers has informed Senator Fulton that he will endorse the request for an appropriation to repair the dredge Chinook and put her at work on the bar at the mouth of the Columbia river. This is indeed encouraging for if the dredge is placed in operation and is allowed to work without being handicapped with red tape, we need not worry about securing plenty of water in the channel to accommodate the largest vessels which ply the Pacific. Past experience, notwithstanding the test was not made under the most favorable conditions, has shown what the dredge can accomplish, if given an opportunity. Not only has the local Chamber of Commerce requested congress at arrange for putting the dredge to work, but practically every commercial body on the coast has endorsed the project and has urged the congressional representatives from each of the respective states to support it, so there is an excellent chance if a rivers and harbors bill passed for the desired appropriation being made.

The conditions incident to the present cold snap are but another illustration of the urgent necessity if the Columbia river is to hold her own among the shipping ports of the coast, of conducting the shippinfg either from Astoria or some other point near the mouth of the river, where snow and ice never have and probably never will interfere so far as delays to ocean bound shipping are concerned. For several days it has been impossible for wooden vessels to go up or down the river and it is even dangerous for iron or steel craft to attempt the trip. How long this condition will continue is purely problematical, but it will certainly be long enough to cut quite a figure in demurrage on delayed vessels. Of course the argument will be made that these freeze ups are uuusual, but the fact remains that they have occurred and they are liable to occur at any time during the winter months, undoubtedly more often as the timber is removed from this section of the country and the weather conditions are thereby materially altered.

The Manufacturers' Record of Baltimore is never tired of calling attention to the great advances made by the Southern states. Its most recent presentation is a remarkable one, showing as it does that the capital invested in cotton mills in the South has increased from $21,000,000 in 1880 to $266,500,000, in 1908, and that in all sorts of manufacturing industries it has grown from $257,000,000 to $2,100,000,000. In this latter development we find the explanation of the fact that the value of property in the South has increased from $7,505,000,000 to $20,050,000,000 in the period under review. The record is one of astonishing prosperity in which every industry has shared, but the greatest and most phenomenal gain is in manufactures. The south has ceased to be an agricultural country and is now one of diversified pursuits, and when that stage is reached it is impossible to prevent a people being prosperous.

It is generally conceded by reviewers of the great struggle between the states that a strong man in the White House in 1860 might have saved the country from civil war over the slave controversy. Lincoln took the helm in 1861, and the guns of Sumter forced him to act vigorously. For four years he kept doing things to back up the bold initiative he had taken the moment the flag was fired upon. Since that era the demand has been steadily growing for executives of strong personality. Even governors who will do things are wanted, and the most stirring elections in the states often turn upon the personality of the candidate for governor rather than the claims of party.

A writer in the Atlantic Monthly takes the ground that the old school theories of government have been overthrown and the tendency today is to hold presidents and governors responsible for what legislators do or fail to do. While "executive aggression" is sometimes condemned, it is also highly extolled and by the very same voices. In the long run the executive who devotes his energies solely to the good of the state has the support of the masses, for at heart the people are not partisans. They want some sort of program put through and look to the man at the top to do it.

As a hint to Mr. Bryan for March 4 the Brooklyn Eagle recalls the fact that Stephen A. Douglas held Lincoln's hat at Old Abe's first inaugural. But at the national polls in 1860 Douglas had proved to be an ally rather than an opponent of Lincoln. He split the Democratic popular vote, but gained only twelve electoral votes. Douglas' Democratic rival, John C. Breckinridge, received seventy-two votes in the electoral college, standing the second highest, although his popular vote was fewer by 500,000 than that cast for the "Little Giant."

HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

NOBODY KNOWS WHY—

A man invariably looks self conscious when the [illegible] qualities of his [illegible] being [illegible] ussed and held up for admiration [illegible] looks [illegible] the mother [illegible] the same gets vicious.

A dimple in her chin is worth more to a girl [illegible] a whole term of domestic science.

A married man always says to his wife "What is that?" no matter what the kind, quality, origin or nature of the thing causing the inquiry, no matter how obvious or how mysterious its reason or purpose. Many thoughtless married women give flippant answers—see South Dakota.

Broken Spell.

The finding of a horseshoe
Along a dusty way
Brings good luck to the finder,
I've heard the wise ones say,
A case of rare good fortune
As mortal ever struck.
I'd rather find a dollar
And buy my own good luck.

These ancient signs and tokens
That in the long ago
Worked magic just as easy
As hoboes shovel snow
Are not at present writing
So certain to produce
As bales of ready money
Assorted and turned loose.

The finding of a horseshoe
In modern times will bring
A trifle from the junk man—
Perhaps a ball of string—
But put it on a horse race
Or any scheme at hand
Without the aid of money
And see where it will land.

They used to think it foxy
To nail one to the door
A fortune that had vanished
To carefully restore.
But now we do not bother
With junk and such old trash.
We buy our luck serenely
With good and ready cash.

PERMITS FOR FREE FIREWOOD

Issued by Government Forestry Department to Settlers

Washington, Jan 11—During the last fiscal year ending June 30, the United States forest service issued to settlers in the neighborhood of national forests in western states over 30,000 "free use" permits, under which the settlers received free about 264,000 cords of firewood, posts, poles and saw-logs, worth $169,320, or about 64 cents per cord in the forest—a low valuation.

Besides this, the different states received for school and road purposes 25 per cent of the income from the national forests amounting last year to $447,064. The direct return of the states in lieu of taxes on the 147 million acres, the estimated area of unpatented land in the national forests, amounted then in the last year to $616,384 in cash and "free use" timber.

In 1907, the total of "free use" material and money paid over amounted to about $253,400. The increase of the amount given to the states from 10 per cent to 25 per cent of course is largely responsible for the large return in 1908, but even had this percentage not been changed a good increase would have been shown, despite the demoralization of the lumber business caused by the financial flurry. In fact, this increase may be looked for up to many times the present amount as the demand for timber increases and the forests are developed more and more.

RECOVERS ON CROSS LIBEL

Judgment Rendered by San Francisco Court

San Francisco, Jan. 11—On stipulation of the attorneys, District Judge De Haven has made an order awarding the respondents $437.35 and costs of $26.65 in the libel of the Globe Navigation Company against the Russ Lumber and Mill Company. The suit in admiralty was orginally brought to recover freight money for a cargo of lumber, and a cross-libel was filed for loss of a part of the deckload of lumber. On this Judge De Havn decided that the steamer Tampico had deviated from the course outlined in her charter party by taking the windjammer Wilbur M. Smith now, and that the cross-libel would hold. The stipulation resulted to save further litigation.

CREATE TWO MORE JUSTICES

Measure That Will be Submitted to Legislature

Salem, Or., Jan. 11—An effort will be made during the apponching session of the legislature, and a bill is being drafted looking to that end, to increase the number of justices of the supreme court from three to five, the provisions of section 10 of the constitution notwithstanding. It is also understood that Governor Chamberlain, in his message to the legislature, will recommend that the judiciary department of the state, both supreme and circuit courts, be made non-partisan in politics. It has been thought all along that the constitution limits the number of justices of the supreme court to three, hence the submission of the proposed amendment to the constitution, providing for an increase from three to five, to the people at the last election, which did not carry. Some of the most prominent attorneys of the state, including George H. Williams and W. H. Fenton, of Portland, have given their opinion that the constitution does not limit to three justices, and that the number can be increased to seven if necessary.

APPROPRIATION FOR DREDGE

Chief of Engineers Will Support Project

Washington, Jan. 11—Senator Fulton had a conference wtih the chief of engineers with reference to the necessity for immediate appropriations for river and harbor work in Oregon. He learned that the river and harbor commitee had called on the engineers for a report as to the necessity of only three projects in the country, one of them at the mouth of the Columbia river.

The chief of engineers says that $200,000 is absolutely necessary for the maintenance of that project, but he needs an additional $1,000,000 to carry the work ahead and will strongly urge that this amount to be provided. He also believes it essential that suffiient appropriations be made to repair and put in commission the dredge Chinook. In repsonse to Mr. Fulton's inquiry, he also expressed the opinion that ample funds should be provided for operating the new dredge Oregon during the coming year.

The senator feels convinced that he will have the hearty support of the engineers in his effort to get money for the Columbia river and Oregon coast in the forthcoming bill.

HIGH LICENSE AT MEDFORD

Council Increases Rate to Eight Hundred Dollars

Medford, Or., Jan. 11—The city council has fixed the saloon license in Medford at $800 per annum. Both the Prohibitionists and the antis have full tickets up for the approaching town election, and from present indications it will be very close between the two factions. A close canvass is being made, and the Tribune, advocating license, and the Mail, a Prohibition journal, are lining up the populace. Good men have been named in each ward on both tickets, the contest for mayor being between J. A. Perry, of the Fruitgrowers Union, anti-saloon, and United States Conmmissioner Cannon as the license candidate. Both are strong men.

SKEENA RIVER IS FROZEN UP

Navigation Closed by Ice Floes

Prince Rupert, B. C., Jan. 11—The cold weather of the past few days as completely tied up navigation of every kind on the Skeena river, both above and below tidewater limit. Late arrivals from the upper Skeena river report 30 below zero and the river frozen over and full of floating ice on the lower reach, which drifts, up and down stream with the tide. On the coast zero weather has prevailed for some days, and everything is frozen solid.

The tug Lottie N., while moored at her anchorage opposite Port Essington wharf, was caught by the ice floes and driven ashore on the rocky point above the town. A hole was stove in her side, and she sank to the bottom. At low tide part of her deck as above water and the owners have hopes of saving her.

ABOUT ASTORIA

Paul Peterson, lately from Schleswig, Holestein Germany has opened a boarding house near McGregor mill.

Captain Pond, inspector of this lighthouse district, passed thru the city on the steamer Rose City this morning en route home from a trip to San Francisco.

Dr. Rhoda C. Hicks returned from Portland this morning where she has been since the 7th of January to attend a meeting of the Osteopaths of the state.

The government dredge W. S. Ladd is tied up at Wesport until after the present freeze up is over. She is well sheathed but cannot work to any advantage under present conditions.

The lighthouse tender Armeria left up the river this moring to replace several gas buoys with spars as the floating ice will ruin the former. After completing that work the Armeria will proceed to Portland.

The oil tank steamer Washtenaw arrived in this afternoon from California with a cargo of oil for the Union Oil Company. She will discharge a portion of her cargo here and leave up the river in the morning to finish.

A contract has been awarded by the Astoria & Columbia River Railroad Company to W. A. Goodin for the construction of a spur from a point on the main line near Gearhart to the timber tract owned by N. D. Bain on Skookum lake.

Mrs. J. H. Minier, wife of a rancher living near Seaside, died last evening of a complication of diseases after a long illness. Her funeral will be held on Tuesday from the family residence and the interment will be in Ocean View cemetery.

O. F. Morton has closed the sale of a tract 75 by 100 feet belonging to A. Montgomery and located at the corner of Ninth and Duane streets to C. W. Waterman, who recently arrived here from Chicago to engage in business. The consideration is $8000.

Loggers returning from the camps on the north side of the river state that on Saturday evening there was fully 15 inches of snow in the Grays river district and the storm was still in progress. It will probably be several days before the camps can resume operations.

The hull of the steamer Myrtle, which was built at Bandon for the Callender Navigation Company, arrived Sunday in tow to the steamer Breakwater. She brought a hold cargo of Port Orford cedar. The Myrtle will be equipped with the machinery from the old steamer Mayflower.

James Hannaford returned this morning from attending the funeral of his brother at Washougal, who was killed in the La Camas paper mill. He was snow bound for a couple of days and the funeral had to dig thru snow drifts for a mile to get the body to the cemetery.

The new system inaugurated by the Sunflower Dairy Co. for the collection of their monthly milk accounts was started on Jan 1. and so far as proven a success. Chas. Berlingame being the recipient of a handsome ladies writing desk. The judges of the distribution were Fred J. Johnson, Chas. Johnson and E. B. Winters.

The steam schooner Majestic sailed Sunday for the Sound. While lying at anchor in the stream on Saturday, the Majestic had her stem damaged by the steamer Yosemite colliding with her as the latter backed away from the dock. The injuries are above the water line, but will be repaired before cargo is taken on.

Late Saturday evening a break occurred in the wooden portion of the main conduit of the water system a short distance this side of Bear creek and as a result no water flowed into the reservoir during that night or Sunday. The break was repaired yesterday afternoon and since then a full force of water has been flowing in.

The train service on Sunday night was materially interfered with, not on account of the snow as was generally believed, and the down train did not reach Astoria until after midnight and the up train reached Portland a couple of hours later. For some reason the Devil's Auction Company left its special car of scenery in Portland and it was necessary to start for Astoria with it attached to special engine. In passing Wesport it ran off the track and caused the delay of the up and down trains.

A raft of logs, still intact, is a derelict in the river and was seen early this morning opposite Bay View in the ship channel. It is a vauable raft but who it belongs to is not known and the unsheathed steamers in this vicinity dare not attempt to go after it. The steamer Miller will look out for it this morning on her up trip but as she is carrying the mail to north shore points for the regular carrries, that are laid up, she can give little attention to it, except make it fast to the shore if possible.

There will be no performance at the Astoria Theatre this evening. Manager Hanlin has received word that Miss Jewell, the leading lady of the Bungalow Stock, Company which was to present the farce comedy "Are You a Mason" tonight, is ill. Mr. Baker would not play a substitute as he desires his company to be a tits best when it appears here, so the engagement has been postponed until some future date. Mr. Hanlin requests those who have purchased tickets for the performance this evening to present them at the box office today and have their money refunded.

The first regular meeting of the chamber of commerce for this year, which is also the annual meeting, will take place tonight at 7:30 o'clock. The reports of the officers for the year will be read and a resolution from the special committee on ways and means considered which provides that the present officers shall hold over until April 1, the end of the fiscal year for the promotion work. This action seemed to be a wise one on the part of the special committee because it has not yet been determined whether or not the promotion work will be continued after April 1.

As a result of a mishap to the British bark Clan Buchanan, which went ashore on the sands at Cardiff last August, the owners of the vessel will have to pay $10,000 as salvage to three tugs which had the vessel in tow when she went ashore. The Clan Buchanan was laden with grain from Astoria and was en route to Cardiff via Falmouth then she was caught in a storm in the channel and went ashore. Three tugs went to her assistance and later claimed salvage, which the master of the vessel contested. The case was tried in the high court of justice, admiralty division, in England, with the result that the above award was made for salvage.

The largest timber land deal made thus far this year is the purchase of 300,000.000 feet of yellow fir in the vicinity of Grays river by the Portland Lumber Company for $900,000. The land involved embraces several sections in Wahkiakum county, Wash, the most of it belonging to the Charles Green estate, but the logging camps, railroad and timber belonging to L. J. O. Saldren are included. The purchasing corporation, which has large lumber interests in this state, propose to operate its own logging camp and tow boats for the purpose of supplying its big mills with logs. Extensive additions will be made in appliances and a large number of men will be employed as soon as the season opens. Demand for timber lands in the territory tributary to the Columbia never was better than at present, according to men engaged in the business. The tariff legislation has little effect on the price of lumber in the tree, as the area is limited, while the markets of the world are open to the northwest.

The steamer Cascade cleared at the custom house today for San Francisco with a cargo of 580,000 feet of lumber from Astoria.

An order was made in the probate court today appointing A. L. Fox, W. J. McCann and T. R. Davies as appraisers of the estate of Richard M. Leathers, deceased.

The county court at its session today is revising the boundaries of the several road districts in the county. While a few changes are to be made, the only one thus far decided upon is taking a small strip of territory off of the Warrenton district and adding it to New Astoria.

About seven o'clock last evening as J. C. Kendall of Warrenton was walking along Commercial street near the foot of Seventeenth, he slipped and fell overboard. Fortunately the men at the fire department headquarters heard his cries for help and fished him out. The man was nearly froze but otherwise was uninjured.

Two men named John Erickson and Andrew Anderson, were examined by the county board today and adjudged insane. Erickson is the man, who resides in a scow in Uppertown and has threatened to shoot several people in that vicinity. Anderson, is commonly known as the "Terrible Swede" and has been an inhabitant of the lower end of the city for years.

Webber Whitney Morton, the three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond W. Morton of Cathlamet, died in this city last evening of brain fever after an illness of several weeks. While the details of the funeral have not been arranged it will be held on Wedesday from Grace Episcopal church and the arrangements for it will be announced later.

There is some controversy among the old timers of Astoria as to the lowest temperature ever registered in this vicinity. Since the weather bureau has been keeping records the lowest temperature was 8 degrees above zero but previous to that time a number of private thermometers are said to have fallen several degrees lower and from a comulation of evidence this was undoubtedly a fact.

As the train was coming up from Seaside this morning and backing down to Fort Stevens from Warrenton it ran into a snow drift and did not reach Astoria until 10:30. As it carried the mail the up train from Astoria did not leave for Portland until 10:50, but the down train from Portland arrived practically on time as the track was clear.

The city schools today were enforced to give their pupils a part vacation on account of the weather conditions and frozen water pipes. On Tuesady all the schools will be ready again and in good working shape except the Alderbrook school and this will be opened as usual on Wednesday. Considerable difficulty has been experienced with the water systems of the schools since the extreme cold weather began but this will soon be overcome.

Details concerning the reported death of Captain Paul Wagemann, master of the oriental liner Nicomedia, who is supposed to have been swept overboard during a typhoon in the China sea, are eagerly awaited here by a number of close personal friends. Captain Wagemann had been sailing out of his port ever since the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company chartered the four boats now plying between here and Hongkong. His wife lived in Portland until about three months ago, when she left for Germany to visit relatives and friends. Captain Wagemann was a young man aged about 40, and stood high with his company. The Nicomedia is due to arrive here about January 23, having left Yokohama on the 5th.

During Saturday night and Sunday the weather conditions were worse than they had been since the beginning of the present storm and from present indications it will continue for another day at least, if not longer. During Saturday night the weather bureau minimum thermometer registered 21 degrees above zero and this morning 22 degrees, with the wind still in the northeast. Since the snow has first started to fall on the frozen ground, covered with ice, there is fully one foot of it on the ground and it is packing hard. If a Chinook wind should come quickly and be of real warmth damage might be done but it is believed that the ground is frozen too hard for this to happen. Ice is running in the river by the city in large quantities but from all indications the upper river will be frozen up tight by tonight unless conditions change quickly.

BABES IN TOYLAND

The performance of Babes In Toyland at the Astoria Theatre on Saturday evening not only realized the expectations of a large audience but even surpased them. Encores were so frequent and persistent that the preformers actually got warm in the appreciation of their greeting. Taken altogether Manager Hanlin is to be congratulated on being able to secure such a high class show for Astoria and the unfortunate weather conditions were forgotten and the same crowd would be pleased to see the performance again.

PERSONAL MENTION

J. C. McFadden was down from Cathlamet today.

J. E. Walstein of Bandon is a visitor in the city.

J. K. Thompson is down from Portland on business.

N. Goldberg was up from Seaside this morning.

Fred Olson of Cathlamet was in the city today.

James Coffey, of Hammond was in the city today on business.

Capt. Wm. Rehfield, was up from the Seaside today on business.

William Doty of Seattle is in the city on a business trip.

SNOWBOUND

The great fall of snow is interfering materially with the theatrical business, not only here but at other places as well. The company which was to present the Devil's Auction at the Astoria theatre last evening arrived on time yesterday, but the car containing the scenery and baggage was sidetracked on account of the snow and failed to reach here in time, so there was no performance last evening.

Don't fail to see and hear the marvelous synchroscope pictures, they move, talk, sing and whistles all the week. Complete change of program Mondays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Admission remains the same 10 cents, children 5 cents.

ASTORIA DAILY BUDGET

VOL. XXVIII ASTORIA DAILY BUDGET, TUESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1909 Evening Edition Five Cents

FEW BILLS ARE INTRODUCED

Most Important is to Guaranty Bank Deposits

Salem, Jan. 12—Surprisingly few bills were introduced for the first active days of the legislature. One most important house measure is to guaranty bank deposits, following the Oklahoma law. Another important measure is the appropriation of $75,000. for the extension of the Celilo canal, between Celilo and Big Eddy. The completion of this gap will add several hundred miles of navigation to the Columbia river. An additional appropriation of fifty thousand for the Oregon exhibit at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, which if passed, will make a total state appropriation for that purpose of two hundred thousand.

HEYBURN IS RE-ELECTED

Senator from Idaho Gets Majority of Votes

Boise, Jan. 12—United States Senator Heyburn was re-elected today by the legislature in separate session. A joint session tomorrow will ratify today's action. The vote stood: Senate—Heyburn, 11; French, 1; Stocklager, 8; Woods, 2. House—Heyburn, 44; Stocklager, 5; Woods, 4.

CONSPIRACY IS ALLEGED

By Defense in the Thornton Hains Trial

Flushing, Jan., 12—John F. McIntyre summed up for the defense in the trial of Thronton Hains today. He charged a conspiracy among the Bay Side Yacth Club members, influenced by motives of revenge to convict the defendants. The killing of Annis, declard McIntyre, was the act of a madman.

WILL QUESTION HAY'S RIGHT

To Seat as Washington's Lieutenant Governor

Olympia, Jan. 12—Harris Ballinger, attorney for Lieutenant-Governor Coon, said today that proceedings to test the qualification of Lieutenant Governor elect Hay will be instituted tomorrow in the supreme court, after Hay has taken his oath of office. Coon's contention is that Hay disqualified himself for office in the primary election by purchasing newspaper advertising space, of the character alleged to be prohibited by the primary law.

The house and senate will meet this afternoon to canvass the vote on state officers.

Wurtzburger beer at the Gold Star opposite the depot.

PUBLIC FUNDS WRONGLY USED

Charged by Foraker Against Roosevelt and Taft

Washington, Jan. 21—The illegal diversion of public funds by the president and Taft, while secretary of war, to pay for the investigation by private detectives into the Brownsville affair was charged by Foraker in the senate today in a speech replying to the statements of Herbert J. Browne of this city and William G. Baldwin of Roanoke Va. who were employed by the secretary of war to secure evidence of the guilty negro soldiers shooting up Brownsville the night of August 12-14 1906. The government use of private detectives was characterized by Foraker as "Atrocious shocking, revolting" Foraker charged that the $15,000 had been diverted from the $3,000,000 war fund, appropriated March 3, 1899 at the close of the Spanish American war as an emergency to meet unforseen contingencies to be expended in the discretion of the president, but that detailed or itemized reports to congress of the expenditure from this fund has not been made.

SENATOR J. B. FORAKER.

Foraker reviewed the the statements of the president in his several messages that all the evidence pointed to the guilt of the soldiers, but that to the actions of the president in employing detectives, which he asserted was a violation of the statuory provision, "That no employe of the Pinkerton detective agency or of any similar agency shall be employed in the government service or by any officer of the District of Columbia", showed the president was forced to strengthen his case. "as though conscious of, notwithstanding all his assertions and declarations as to the sufficiency of the testimony, it was, in fact, unreliable and unsufficient to justify his order of discharge. We were favored with the further message of December 14, 1908, in which we were informed that detectives had been employed by the war department and that they have been at work for months." Speakng of the reply of the president and of secretary of war to the senate resolutions, calling for information on the detectives' investigations. Foraker said: "This message of the president with its exhibit and his report of the secretary of war present a new and most serious feature of this most unhappy business." Foraker declared they disclose determined efforts on the part of the president to again bolster up the case against the soldiers, that the president employed methods, which can not be fittingly described without employing language, which might appear disrespectful to the chief executive. Foraker declared the methods of the detectives in securing evidence and confessions was such that "the facts make all such testimony utterly incompetent and worthless."

MAXINE ELLIOTT AND HER NEW THEATER.

Maxine Elliott, besides being rated as one of the most beautiful women on the stage, is the only actress in the world who has her own theater. The new Maxine Elliott theater in West Thirty-ninth street, New York, was planned by Miss Elliott and built under her direction. She invested a fortune in it and owns it in copartnership with the Shuberts. The playhouse has many entirely new features. It is probably the costliest theater of its size in the world.

SHAFROTH IS INAUGURATED

New Chief Executive of Colorado Seated

Denver, Jan. 2—John W. Shafroth, former congressman from Colorado, was today inaugurated as governor. The ceremonies were unusually simple and were witnessed by an immense crowd.

"SI PLUNKARD'

Tomorrow night the great laughable and rural comedy Si Plunkard" will be the attraction at the Astoria theatre. The story is that of a good, old-fashioned couple on the farm, whose beautiful home life and surroundings appeal with peculiar tenderness to every author. Anything that tells of the hills, fields, meadows and lanes of the country and quaint characters found there, is always one of the most delightful dramatic treats that a city can behold. During the action of the play a number of new and novel specialties will be introduced, including clever little Arletta Lewis, presenting a program unexcelled for fun, originality and novelties, giving you an evening of enjoyment that you will not soon forget. Watch for the funny street parade given by Si and his Country Band. Secure your seats now selling.

EXPLOSION KILLS HUNDRED MINERS

This Number May be Largely Increased

Bluefield, W. Va., Jan. 12—As a result of another explosion in the Lick branch mine at Switchback, twenty miles from here, between fifty and a hundred miners were killed this morning. This number may be largely increased as from 280 to 300 miners were at work at the time and it was not ascertained, shortly before noon, how many escaped.

On December 28 an explosion occurred in this mine with a loss of fifty lives. The cause of the explosion is yet to be determined.

SEND MESSAGES TO CONGRESS

Urging Passage of Rivers and Harbors Bill

Portland, Jan 12—The Chamber of Commerce, Manufacturers and Commercial Club of this city and nearly all the commercial bodies of the Pacific coast have telegraphed the Pacific coast senators and congressmen in Washington, the speaker of the house, president of the senate, and the rivers and harbors committee, urging the passage at this session of congress of a rivers and harbors bill and especially calling attention to the danger of delay and the great financial loss attendant upon stoppage of the work now in progress in the Pacific northwest and on the Pacific coast. The commercial bodies of all cities and towns are taking similar action.

ANNUAL REPORTS OF THE CHAMBER

Promotion Work Accomplished During The Year

Last evening was the regular time for the annual meeting and election of officers of the chamber of commerce but this formality was postponed until April as at that time the promotion work for the year will be completed. The annual report of President Scholfield and the report of the promotion committee were however read and adopted by the members present and in fact this was the only business transacted at the meeting. The promotion committe's report, after outlining the advertising campaign conducted, closes with the following recommendations.

We wish to acknowledge the kind assistance given us by the county court and to appropriation of $500. It seems to us in view of the efforts put forth by the citizens of Astoria that the county may righfully aid in carrying forward advertising and promotion work, as any benefits derived are enjoyed as much by the county as by the city.

The committee has learned from its experience that one of the great problems which we must meet and overcome is the clearing off of stump lands. We most cordially recommend the plan which we have begun of leasing these lands to practical farmers for a term of ten years, giving them all they can raise for clearing and cultavating. We also recommend to the attention of those who are interested in clearing off lands, the] method of burning stumps by means of a blower. Porter Brothers, the contractors, say they believe this method will solve the problem. Any farmer can operate one and the total cost is about $300.

We recommend that persistent and organized work be done during the coming year towards securing, if possible, a completed good road all the way to Portland so that automobiles may come from the Oregon metropolis to Clatsop Beach. With the connecting road we now have across the soft sands, the most important automobile races of the Northwest could be held on this beach thus greatly advertising Clatsop county and Astoria. These races would especially benefit the hotels of Astoria and Seaside.

We recommend that the Clatsop Beach Chautauqua if possible be held during the coming season. The ground for that purpose has been purchased and the necessary buildings assured. This Chautauqau might be taken up as a private enterprise and made to pay. The promotion committee might further it if sufficient funds are available, as one plan has been submitted and which will be available at any time whereby a compartatively small sum of money would probably insure the program with reasonable assistance from the A. & C. Railroad Company and from the new electric railroad company.

We recommend that the advertising and promotion work be carried on thru the coming year on an increased scale over last year. The seeds have been planted and it would be but the part of prudence and economy to reap where we have sown.

We recommend that in any future advertising that a strong feature be made for the unexcelled advantages along the lower banks of the Columbia for sawmill enterprises. Perhaps the most effective advertising of this section at this time can be done in this direction.

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.

I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

AMERICAN COMPOSER AND IMPRESARIO WHO WILL TRY NEW OPERA.

Giulio Gatti-Cazazza, the new impresario at the Metropolitan Opera House New York, is doing much to encourage American composers and the best American music. When he first arrived in this country he announced his intention to offer as much aid to the composers of the western world as possible. Carrying out this plan, he is now ready to offer a prize for the best opera by an American. Frederick S. Converse, the Boston composer, probably will be the first to have one of his productions tried at the Metropolitan.

FOOD FOR THE SEINE

An Incident in Whistler's Student Days in Paris

The early scenes in "Trilby" have shown us the hilarious squalor of the student life in Paris when Whistler joined the studio that Gleyre carried on in succession to Delaroche. It was the Bohemia, barely modernized, of Murger's novel, and the shifts to which these raw recruits in art descended furnished Whistler for life with some of his raciest stories. Once when an American friend unearthed him Whistler was living on the proceeds of a wardrobe. One hot day he pawned his coat for an iced drink. Invited once to the American embassy, he had to borrow Poynter's dress suit. But the best story of these frolicsome days arises from the eternal copying in the Louvre, either on commission or on "spec." which kept them alive between remittances. Whistler's chum, Ernest Delannoy, had done a gorgeous replica of Veronese's "Marriage Feast at Cana" that took when framed the pair of them to carry it. They tried it on every dealer up and down both sides of the Seine until the first price of 500 francs had dropped with several thuds to 100, then 20, then 10, then 5. Suddenly the dignity of art asserted itself.

On the Pont des Arts they lifted the huge canvas. "Un," they said, with a great swing, "deux, trois—v'lan!" and over it went into the water with a splash. Sergents de ville came running, omnibuses stopped, and boats pushed out on the river. Altogether it was an immense success, and they went home enchanted.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Startled Monarch.

Prince Ferdinand, who now styles himself czar of Bulgaria, rules over a turbulent and not easily governed people. Continual watchfulnes has made him extremely nervous. Some time ago he was out driving in Carlsbad and appeared to be deeply buried in thought. As his carriage was turning a corner a street boy picked up a paper bag that was lying in the road, blew it up with his mouth and exploded it with a loud report. The prince started to his feet, gave a terrified glance around, sprang from the carriage and made off rapidly in the direction of his hotel.

Bob Evans' Benediction.

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans has been writing to his California friends recently, telling them how much he has recovered in health and expressing his thanks for the kindness he received while here. In a letter to James Horsburgh, Jr., general passenger agent of the Southern Pacific, the admiral expressed the felicitious wish:

"May you live with the rich here and the poor hereafter."

Horsburgh says that this proves that the admiral knows his Bible.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Slot Machine Doctor.

A well known doctor in Paris has invented an automatic distributer of recipes. You place 50 centimes (10 cents) in one of the slots marked "Heart," "Liver," "Corns," etc., and in return you receive a recipe to cure your ailment. The machine has already become exceedingly popular.

LURE OF A LANGUAGE

German Loaded with Metaphors and Exageration

In making allowance for the kaiser's uttered indiscretions we must remember the German language. Ordinary German prose suffers from a dreadful excess of metaphor. The "mailed fist" and the "loosened saber" are not altogether rhetorical sparks struck out on the hot anvil of imperial excitement, but examples of that poetic exaggeration so easy to a German. It is a fault most common among the most learned. Professor Jones of Yale or Harvard would probably begin his volume on "The Geology of Yucatan." "By Yucatan in the present work I mean the Central American peninsula known by that name, as well as the adjacent coasts." etc. But Professor Hammerschlag of Leipzig must begin by saying, "The convulsive, continent splitting efforts of Terra"—or perhaps Gaia—"to pour forth her imprisoned, vital forces brought forth in the dim triassic ages the torrid land mass which lolls like a sleeping monster between the warm waters of the Caribbean and the torrid waves of the gulf of Mexico in 87 to 92 degrees west longitude." An English politician speaking in English says, "This country—er—welcomes the—er—friendly rivalry of a great power like Germany, under its—er—honored sovereign as er—conducive to the interests of both nations," etc. But when a German statesman rises to speak the genius of his language demands that he shall say, "Germania wants peace, but it will continue to stare defiantly into the bloodshot eyes of ravening naval powers which with eager claws," etc.—New York Post.

Our Troublesome Teeth.

It is to the teeth that the pathologist should first look for an explanation of those emotional crises in the lives of all of us which assume now the form of an exaggeration of the sentiment of romantic love, again an intensification of insomnia and sometimes a development of religious sensibility to the boundary line of mania. In making good this theory the professor of diseases of the nervous system in the Western Reserve university, Dr. Henry S. Upson, ascribes many of the ordinary cases of nervous wreck met with in daily experience to a misunderstanding of the dental mechanism of man. Not only is toothache the cause, but disease of a dental nature involving no pain whatever to the victim works its havoc and leads men and women to the madhouses, domestic miseries and every kind of excess.—Current Literature.

STABILITY OF GATUN DAM

Official Report as to this Part of Panama Canal

Explaining the settling of the rock "toe," which started the rumor that the foundation of the Gatun dam was sinking and that a subterranean lake had been discovered under the canal, as an event that was expected, a report has been made to the authorities at Washington which, it is hoped, will dispel any apprehension.

A portion of this "toe" on the upstream end of the dam sank about forty feet on Nov. 21. During several weeks prior to this date a slide under the high trestle of the relocated Panama railroad at Gatun made necessary the dumping of an additional quantity of rock before the roadbed was brought up to grade. On Nov. 15 the Chagres river flooded the tracks at Gatun. At the same time the rumor of having discovered a subterranean lake on the site of Gatun dam and beneath it came out. The report says in part:

"The purpose of the dam at Gatun is to impound the waters of the Chagres (an artificial) lake that will form in the valley of the Chagres river. This dam will extend from one ridge of hills west across the valley to the ridge on the hills east and will be one and a half miles long. At the extreme east end the locks are being built through a small hill on which abuts the dam. The dam itself is divided into two parts, from the site of the locks to the spillway, the other from the spillway to the hills west. The spillway will be located through a small hill that rises in the middle of the dam. A temporary spillway 300 feet wide, which will let the Chagres flow during the construction is completed and concreted there early in January. There are three old channels running through the dam site.

"The plan for constructing the dam is to pump sand and clay upon the site selected until the hill is 135 feet above sea level and 1,700 feet wide across the valley. This sand and clay have been found in large quantities down the Chagres valley, convenient to the site, and have proved to be good material for a dam. The dam will be made by suction dredges, which will pump the material mixed with water upon the site, and the water running off will leave a closely homogeneous material. For the purpose of adding weight to the dam and to prevent material from sliding north and south, as a great mass of earth is likely to do, two walls, or toes, are being built across the valley.

"The north or downstream toe is composed of rocks and earth taken at the site of the locks. The south or upstream toe is composed of hard rock taken from the cut at Bas Obispo. The ridge of Bas Obispo rock is thirty feet broad at the top and when completed will be sixty feet high. It has reached that height in one place and has one to one and a half slope.

"Between the north and south toe 3,000,000 cubic yards of clay and sand from the Chagres valley will be pumped. The object of these toes is to hold the material of the hydraulic fill until the water has drained off.

"The rock wall of the south toe has been extended to the spillway, closing the old channel of the Chagres and east diversion beside the old French canal, the river finding an outlet through the east diversion dug by the French. The old French canal crosses the Chagres at five different places between Bohio and Gatun, and it is through that channel that the greatest part of the Chagres flows to Gatun.

"A short distance above the dam the Gatuncillo flows into the Chagres. The building of the toe forces the water of the Gatuncillo and that of the French channel or canal to seek an outlet at a right angle to its natural course, and it has caused the flats south of Gatun to be flooded when heavy rains occur, as the diversion of the French canal is not wide enough to receive the quantity of water that flows down the valley and floods the lower parts. The high water of Nov. 15 was simply the repetition of what happened several times during this rainy season, flooding the flats of Gatun on the south of it, and it was unusually high, as the water rose in some places as much as eight inches above the rails.

Halfway between the foot of the east hill and the spillway the old French canal channel runs through the dam site, but it has been closed by the construction of the south toe. The silt and soft mud that had collected in the bottom of this channel for the past twenty years were not removed when the construction of the toe was [illegible] and when the weight of the [illegible] great enough it displaced [illegible] bottom of the old channel [illegible] it up 200 feet north of the [illegible] the site of the dam.

[illegible] was [illegible]ipated and desired. [illegible] an[illegible]ted that other parts [illegible] the foundation of the [illegible] for the result is simply what it would have been if a big trench had been dug [illegible] settlings [illegible] the toe has reached the desired height of sixty feet, and each settling will only result in more rock being dumped there until the solid foundation is reached and an equilibrium established.

"The idea that there is a lake under the site of Gatun dam probably originated from the fact that the borings made at close intervals all over the dam site revealed water in about 10 per cent of the holes sunk. The results of these borings were published Sept. 2, 1908, and nothing has developed further. The report on these explorations, which will appear in the annual report of the chairman and chief engineer to congress, covers the matter thoroughly from a technical standpoint. Briefly, it shows that water under pressure was found in several places under the dam site.

"The fact that there was no communication between the various holes shows beyond question that the water under the dam site is in pockets and is not a pool or lake, and the fact that the water was under pressure and rose in the test holes shows that it has no outlet. In addition to the borings two test pits were sunk 100 feet below sea level, and they merely confirmed what the borings had already shown—that the dam is being built on a very firm foundation of impervious clay.

"What is true of the foundation of the dam is also true of the foundation of the locks. There is no question at all of its satisfactory character. The locks are being constructed in a series of three double locks, making a rise from sea level to the eighty-five foot level of the Gatun lake. Each lock is 1,000 feet long, 110 feet broad at the entrance and 41 1-3 feet deep in fresh water over the sills.

"The excavation for the south or upper lock is practically completed, and the concrete work will be begun as soon as the power handling and mixing plants are delivered on the isthmus and can be put in running order. The excavation in the second and third locks involves the removal of 1,400,000 cubic yards of material by steam shovels and 400,000 cubic yards by suction dredges. The steam shovel work is already well advanced, and the dredging will be begun soon.

"The locks will be built entirely of concrete, forming a series of three water tight boxes, each divided into two parts. Beneath the level of the floor of the upper and second locks a curtain wall will be sunk to a sufficient depth to keep out whatever water is now finding or is likely to find its outlet beneath the lock site. The excavation on the curtain walls will be begun in a few weeks. The plans for the locks have been completed in all but a few details. The stone and sand necessary can be delivered at the handling plant in Gatun as soon as they are required.

"The slide on the relocated line of the Panama railroad at Gatun is similar to those which occurred at Cucaracha and at other points along Culebra cut and at Miraflores tunnel. It is caused by the earth, which has become saturated from the excessive rains and has been burdened with the weight of the fill, sliding on the surface of the rock, which underlies it. This slide has reached its angle of repose for the present, but it is expected that during the next rainy season, when the fill is continued to the ninety-five foot grade, the slide will begin again. More material will then be dumped into the depression, and the filling will be continued until the material has reached its angle of repose, when no further trouble is expected."

FLOWERS OF SPEECH

Englishman's Address at Ladies' Seminary in Siam

The influential Englishman in Siam flattered himself that he had a very decent knowledge of the language and was ready to do great things. He had already ordered coffee from his hotel waiter with success and asked the boy to bring up his boots.

Now, influential Englishmen in Siam are not as common as cockroaches, and that afternoon the distinguished visitor was requested by a friend to deliver an address on "England" at the only ladies' seminary in the country. Confidently he accepted.

He began famously. Every one applauded and smiled. But gradually as he proceeded he noticed consternation overspreading the countenances of his listeners.

"What's the trouble?" he whispered in English anxiously to his friend on the platform.

"Trouble!" exclaimed the friend hotly. "Why, the trouble is what you are saying."

"But," protested the speaker, "I am saying, 'I am delighted to see so many young ladies rising to intellectual heights, with fine brains and large appreciation.'"

"Oh, no, you're not," corrected the friend. "You're saying, 'I am pleased to see so many small lionesses growing large and fat, with big noses and huge feet.'"—London Tit-Bits.

ALL THE WAY ROUND

An Odd Sort of Dinner and the Result of It

Lord Polkemmet, a Scottish lord of session usually retired to his country residence during the part of the year when the court does no business. John Hagart, the Scottish advocate equally idle from a similar cause, went to shoot, and, happening to pass Lord P.'s property, he met his lordship, who politely invited John to take, or, as he said, to tak', a family dinner with himself, his wife and daughter.

John accepted the invitation, and they all assembled at the hour of dinner. There was a joint of roasted veal at the head of the table and stewed veal at the bottom, veal soup in the middle, calf's head on one side of the soup and veal cutlets on the other, calf's foot jelly between the soup and roast veal and calf's brains between the stewed veal and the soup.

"Noo," said his lordship in his own blunt way, "Mr. Hagart, you may very likely think this an odd sort of dinner, but ye'll no wonder when you hear the cause of it. We keep nae company, Mr. Hagart, and my daughter here caters for our table. The way we do is just this: We kill a beast, as it were, today, and we just begin to cook it at one side of the head, travel down that side, turn the tail and just gang back again by the other side to where we began."

The Year Without a Summer.

The year 1816 has a remarkable cold weather record and is known as "the year without a summer." In that year there was a sharp frost in every month, and the people all over the world began to believe that some great and definite change in the earth was taking place. The farmers used to refer to it as "eighteen hundred and starve to death." Frost, ice and snow were common in June. Almost every green thing was killed, and the fruit was nearly all destroyed. During the month snow fell to the depth of three inches in New York and Massachusetts and ten inches in Maine. There were frost and ice in July in New York, New England and Pennsylvania, and corn was nearly all destroyed in certain sections. Ice half an inch thick formed in August. A cold north wind prevailed all summer.

Taking a Mean Advantage.

Once a thrifty Scotch physician was called to a case where a woman had dislocated her jaw. He very soon put her right. The woman asked how much was to pay. The doctor named his fee. The patient thought it too much. He, however, would not take less, and as the woman refused to give him the fee he began to yawn. Yawning, as every one knows, is infectious. The young woman in turn yawned. Her jaw again went out of joint, and the doctor triumphantly said, "Now, until you hand me over my fee your jaw can remain as it is." Needless to say, the money was promptly paid.

There's always something missing with out I. W. HARPER whiskey. It's so old and so extensively used every where that we should find it hard to get along without it. Sold by American importing Co, Astoria, Ore. x

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

The fact that the Oregon legislature perfected its permanent organization yesterday, makes it obligatory that the first ballot for the election of a United States senator take place at noon on Tuesday of next week.

The escape of the Standard Oil Company from a fine, which however just in principle, was extreme to say the least, completed the case against the law, and the execution thereof, on the part of the labor leaders and such of their friends as uphold and justify and even laud, whatever is done in the name of organized labor. We, in common with other law abiding citizens, hoped that all of the law-breaking trusts without discrimination might be apprehended and punished. But we were fearful from the first that the spirit of radicalism that often characterizes and weighs down reform movements, would assert itself to the deteriment of the splendid work of the administration in its attempt to curb the big trusts that have dominated and plundered the country. But no less do we wish to see all other monopolies, including that of labor, brought under the restraint of the law. It is unfortunate that the denial of the government's petition for a rehearing in the Standard Oil fine case should have come soon after the sentencing of the labor leaders to imprisonment. There must be a comparison of results in the two cases, and while that is not fully warranted by the facts, there is just enough of a failure of justice in the one case to invite the oft-repeated criticism, that the law is entirely onesided in its application and that it is always tempered in case of the wealthy or influential lawbreaker—Commercial News.

Protests against the increased railroad rates which have been filed by the transcontinental roads have been reaching the interstate commission in number sufficient to cause serious deliberation as to whether that body is in position to do anything in the premises. No official determination has been arrived at as yet, but the commission, especially some members of it, have been much disturbed over the conditions which have been revealed by these communications. It would appear that the state of public feeling brought into existence as a result of the advance in rates is extremely intense and that the dissatisfaction will not be allayed otherwise than by some energetic measures. What seems to be desired is that the commission should itself start complaints or proceedings against the roads in order to set aside the increased rates should they prove on further examination to be unreasonably high. There is, however, a substantial feeling among the members of the commission to the effect that such proceedings would be of extremely doubtful legality. While there are sections in the old act to regulate commerce as it existed prior to the passage of the socalled "Hepburn rate bill", it is the view of many experts that these provisions, whatever their scope may be held to have been, were superseded by section 15 of the new measure, and that complaint from some source outside the commission is a necessary antecedent to proceedings before the commission designed to set aside any given rate should it be found to be unreasonable.

POLITICAL REFORM IN CHINA

The actual change of rulers in China came suddenly, but the surprise had been discounted. It had been announced that the dowager empress, who was the real ruler, would abdicate at the beginning of the Chinese new year. In that event the programme for the titular emperor and for the succession would have been managed in the usual way. The nation had been schooled to expect Prince Chun and his heir when the time came for a change, and so the palace was revolutionized without precipitating an immediate outbreak of the people.

Whether reform in China will accept patiently the programme laid out by the imperial council must soon be determined. A constitution has been declared and the time set for the inauguration of sweeping reforms in the structure of good government. Ten years is a long period to expect the people who have waged some of the fiercest and the longest rebellions of modern days to be good. It may be that the reforming element of China is not organized for revolution, but it has a programme which is preached incessantly, demanding practically a revolution of the army, the navy and the civil system of the central government. All Asia is seething with aspirations for radical reform, and the advent of a new regime in Pekin is the signal for Chinese reformers to put their claims up to the palace.

Cuba's new president, who can speak Spanish, but not English, will find that he must think in English and act the part or Uncle Sam will make him "walk Spanish" too.

That football casualty list of over 200 in 1908 goes to prove that head-on collisions pan out in gridiron events much the same as they do on the rail.

GOVERNOR CHAMBERLAIN MAKES RECOMMENDATIONS

Biennial Message of Oregon's Chief Executive Submitted to the Legislature This Afternoon

Salem, Jan. 12—Quoting from his message of 1907 in which he recommends ratification by the legislature of the people's choice in Bourne and Mulkey for United States senators, Governor Chamberlain in his message to the twenty-fifth legislative assembly recommends the voice of the people be again obeyed.

"The fact that a majority of this legislature subscribed to pledges promising to vote for the peoples' choice for senator," continues the governor, "supplemented by a law enacted by the people, commanding all members of the legislature to vote for the peoples' choice for senator is sufficient guaranty that the election this year will be summarily disposed of as it was two years ago, and the time of the legislature devoted to the consideration of measures of public interest."

The governor urges strict enforcement of the depository act of 1907 to safeguard the state against conditions similar to those of the financial stringency of that year. He asks for consideration to measures leading to a uniform system and taxation, throughout the several counties of the state.

Dwelling at some length on state institutions, he recommends additional facilities and increased accomodations at the asylum for the insane; advises the use of convict labor on state highways with reasonable pay for the men to be devoted to support of their families and calls attention to many miner details developing at the other state institutions.

He heartily recommends state and federal co-operation in a move toward conservation of the natural resources for the purpose of bringing about the enactment of a uniform code and collecting definite information as to the resources of the state, urging the creation of a commission by an act of the legislature to do this work.

He recites the history of fishery litigation between Washinton and Oregon over the waters of the Columbia river and mentions the recommendations of the fish warden that all fisherys laws of the state be now repealed and entire new legislation be enacted on this special subject.

He asks for comlete state or federal control of all streams and particularly calls the attention of legislators to the urgent necessity of more comprehensive legislation as to this as one of most important matters to be considered. He asks for careful consideration of the entire subject which will deal with all existing water rights and make a basis for issuing new rights. "The unappropriated water powers of the state ought to be reserved for the use of the public," he continues, "many of the most valuable water powers have been appropriated by corporations and individuals, not for present aid sometimes not even for future use, but for the purposes of speculation. There is some evidence that deliberate purpose has been formed by persons of other states who understand and knew the future uses to which those powers may be put, to acquire, under the laws now in force, the unappropriated powers of mountains and other streams."

For the second time he calls the legislators attention to need of an employers' liability law, but outlines one much more comprehensive and rigid than in his message of 1907.

A unique feature is a recommendation for legislation to prevent carrying concealed weapons, asking that a law be enacted to prohibit the sale of firearms to anyone not carrying a hunter's license and not provided with a permit to purchase weapons, such permit to be issued by the Sheriff or circuit court.

He asks consideration of a bill for a nonpartisan judiciary, suggesting an arrangement of candidates on the ballots without disclosing their party affiliations.

He mentions a bank guaranty plan, suggesting that a law similar to that of Oklahoma would be salutary, but urges caution in the passage of a bill, which might work a hardship on the bankers.

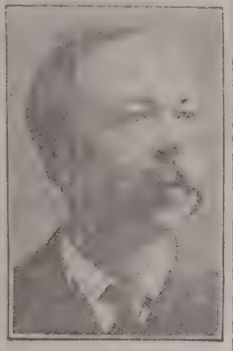
The governor asks the legislature to carefully consider a plan to increase the number of supreme judges by two or re-enact the law providing for a temporary commission to avoid the constitutional provisions. States the proposition at last election was voted down because it contained so many "riders" and attempted to wrest from the people the power of decreasing and increasing the number of justices.

Support of a national and state experiment station on some point along the Umatilla project is pointed out as an urgent need.

Speaking of the Willamette locks, he says in part:

"The canal and locks ought to be owned and operated free of charge by the United States, but if congress declines to act, they should be owned and operated by the state and this unjust burden removed from the enterprise and industry of the people".

The governor asks that legislation be enacted that all private insane hospitals that be compelled to submit state inspection; gives a reminder of the anniversary of Oregon's admission to union, February 14 urges the fitness of enacting a law making Lincoln's birthday, February 12 a legal holiday; urges establishment a sanitariam for tuberculosis sufferers and touches on the need of legislation to make effective the constitutional amendment governing the proportionate representation.



GEORGE E. CHAMBERLAIN.

In conclusion the governor says Permit me to express the hope that you may approach the duties incumbent on you in a spirit of compromise and patriotism. All legislation is the result of compromise, because men are so constituted by nature as to differ sometimes essentially on questions that vitally affect the public welfare. I promise you that I will with the help of him who doeth all things well, assist you as best I can in the discharge of our mutual obligations to the people of the state, whose servants we are."

SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF A NOTED NEW YORK CHURCH.

Recently the Church of the Transfiguration, known popularly everywhere as "the Little Church Around the Corner," celebrated its sixtieth anniversary. On account of its record of marriages nearly 20,000 it has also been called "Gotham's Gretna Green." The Rev. George H. Houghton, D. D., was its first rector, and at his death his nephew, Rev. Dr. George C. Houghton, the present incumbent, was called.

SAVES STATE MANY DOLLARS

Economy Practiced in State Printing Office

Salem, Or., Jan. 12—State Printer Duniway estimates that he has saved the state of Oregon more than $1000 a month on its prining bill in the last two years. He has done this he says by economizing in space, press work, paper and postage. Through the railroad commission has heaped work upon the state printer that was never done before, and though other departments are steadily increasing their printing, Mr. Duniway says his deficit this year will be smaller than it was two years ago.

Matter that was formerly spread over a 400 page volume has in many instances been reduced one third by using smaller type and setting it solid. Mr. Duniway says when he asked for the office he promised to abolish the abuses, and invites inspection of his methods since he has taken the office.

"SI PLUNKARD'

Tomorrow night the great laughable and rural comedy Si Plunkard" will be the attraction at the Astoria theatre. The story is that of a good, old-fashioned couple on the farm, whose beautiful home life and surroundings appeal with peculiar tendernes to every author. Anything that tells of the hills, fields, meadows and lanes of the country and quaint characters found there, is always one of the most delightful dramatic treats that a city can behold. During the action of the play a number of new and novel specialties will be introduced, including clever little Arletta Lewis, presenting a program unexcelled for fun, originality and novelties, giving you an evening of enjoyment that you will not soon forget. Watch for the funny street parade given by Si and his Country Band. Secure your seats now selling.

EARTHQUAKE ON PUGET SOUND

Considerable Damage Reported at Port Townsend

Port Townsend, Wash., Jan. 12—An earthquake shock caused considerable damage here at 3:50 yesterday afternoon, lasting from 10 to 15 seconds. The temblor took form of a vibratory convulsion, swaying buildings and breaking many windows. In many places where water pipes had been frozen, force of quake burst the mains and flooded houses. For a time it was feared the city's entire water supply must be shut off so great was the the damage being done. Reports from localities tributary to this show that the tremblor extended over an area of country at least 50 miles square and in several districts two distinct shocks were felt, separated by more than a minue. Officers at Fort Worden state so far as investigations show, there is apparently no damage to fortifications, although both Fort Worden and Fort Flagler experienced bad shocks.

The shock was also felt at Seattle, Tacoma, Bellingham, Everett, Vancouver, B. C. and other points. A report from Bellingham says that immediately after the shock, smoke was seen arising from Mt. Baker, which is an extinct volcano.

Her One Ambition.

She wanted a job, she told the manager of the big store, and everything about her, from drooping eyelashes to neatly molded instep, indicated that she would draw enough trade, or ought to, to cover her salary

But the manager told her that for one of her inexperience she would command only about $6 a week.

She accepted this, if it was the best he could do, but as she was about to turn away she hesitated and asked demurely, looking at him through the drooping lashes, "Do you suppose you could make that $7 a week, so I could have a little laundry done once in a while?"—St Louis Republic

Long Love.

The word "love" in one of the Indian dialects is "chemlendamoughkunagogagu." Fancy a sweet forest maiden telling her copper colored brave that she "chemlendamoughkunagogagus" him. The conjugation of the verb "to love" in that dialect must take at least a year to recite.—Pathfinder.

Reason For Worry.

"Men worry more than women."

"Yes; they not only have everything to worry about that the women have, but they also have the women to worry about too."—Smart Set.

There are few persons who would not be ashamed of being loved when they love no longer.—Rochefoucauld.

AGED PIONEER DIES SUDDENLY

Pilot Commissioner, Sylvester Farrell, Falls Dead

Sylvester Farrell, a member of the state board of pilot commissioners and a leading commission merchant of Portland, who was well known in every section of the state, dropped dead in his office in Portland yesterday. He had been in his office about five minutes and was playing with a pet cat, when he suddenly collapsed and would have fallen had not his nephew caught him.

Besides his widow, Mr. Farell leaves five children Thomas G. Farell, Robert S. Farrell and Mrs. F. W. Cookman, of Portland; Mrs. W. W. Youngston, of East Orange, N. J. and Miss Jessie Farrell, who lives at the family home.

Mr. Farrell had not been well for some days, but it was not thought that his condition was in any way serious, for his indisposition had not been such as to keep him away from his place of business

With Richard Everding, Mr. Farrell 42 years ago established one of the first commission houses in the state, and the partnership had been unbroken since. Mr. Everding is deeply grieved over the loss of his partner in business of nearly half a century.

Mr. Farrell was past 75 years of age having been born August 2, 1833, at St. Thomas, Ontario Canada, and came to the Pacific Coast in the early '50s, locating in San Francisco about the outbreak of the War of the Rebellion. In 1865 he removed to Portland, where he has remained ever since. He has been engaged in the wholesale commission business at Front and Alder streets with Richard Everding continously since 1868. He was married at San Francisco in 1867 to Miss Honor Miller, and their 42d wedding anniversary occurred yesterday. His widow and five grown children, all of whom reside here, survive him.

Mr. Farrell had held several important political positions and was a member of the legislature several years ago. He also served two terms in the Portland city council, was a member of the pilot board at the time of his death. He was quite prominent in fraternal circles and belonged to Harmony lodge of Masons, besides the Odd fellows and United Workmen.

Mrs. W. Jones praised the grocer for selling her Folger's Golden Gate Coffee which he ground for her.

Baltic to Black Sea Canal.

Russia's ministry of ways and communications has appointed a board of engineers to make preliminary surveys for the long projected canal to connect the Baltic with the Black sea. The canal, in the making of which several rivers will be turned to account, will have its northern end at Riga, on the gulf of Riga, 300 miles southwest of St. Petersburg, while the southern end will be Kherson, on the right bank of the Dnieper and ninety-two miles east-northeast of Odessa. When this project is completed Russia may move her own ships to and from the Black sea without asking permission.

Drop a cake of Ivory Soap in bath tub or washbowl—do you have to grope for it?

No!

Up, up it comes to the surface of the water.

That is one of Ivory's advantages over other bath and toilet soaps—it floats.

Other advantages are: It is pure; it lathers freely; it contains no "free" alkali; it leaves the skin as smooth as satin.

A telephone message was received from Warrenton this afternoon stating that there is good skating on Smith's lake for the first time this season and a number of persons are enjoying the sport.

This morning Mrs. T. J. Kelly, received the sad intelligence from Baker City of the death of her brother, Geo. Donohue, aged 73 years. He left one son, Mr. Donohue was a miner and had lived around Baker City nearly twenty years.

Thos. B. Loughery, deputy district chancellor commander of the Kinghts of Pythias, returned this morning from Seaside where he officiated during the public installation of Nekanikum lodge. The occasion was a brilliant one and closed with a social hop. There were about three hundred guests present.

A number of young people went down on the morning train to spend the day skating on Smith's lake, where the ice is said to be four inches thick and as smooth as a plate glass window. Several parties are making preparations to go down there tonight to enjoy the skating.

The funeral of the late Webber Whitney Morton, the three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Morton, will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from Grace Epicsopal chuch, the services being conducted by the rector Rev. William Seymour Short. The interment will be in Greenwood cemetery.

The Norwegian steamer Henrik Ibsen known as the largest steam freighter in the Norwegian merchant marine, is believed to be booked to come here soon to load lumber for the orient. The Ivbsen was here about two years ago and loaded grain for Hongkong. A dispatch from San Francisco announces that the steamer will have to undergo repairs there as her bow plates had been damaged, persumably in coming in contact with a wharf. It is supposed that the big freighter will leave for Astoria as soon as repairs have been completed.

The Chinese boss at Megler's Brookfield cannery has shipped to Hong Kong 12 barrels of salted shad and 26 cases of canned shad and shad roe. The shipment is made as an experiment and if it meets with a ready sale, more will be sent to that market next season.

The shutting off of the flow of water from the headworks during Saturday night and Sunday was not the result of a break in the wooden portion of the main conduit as was at first supposed. It was caused by the pipe being blocked by a stump which had lodged in the headworks, but has now been removed.

Chinook, McGowans, Ilwaco and all North Beach points are today cut off from the outside world as no boats are able to run across the river in that direction and the railroad from Nahcotta to Megler is obstructed by the snow. Until the weather conditions change these points will be without communication.

At the meeting of the Swedish-American Brotherhood held last evening officers to serve during the ensuing year were installed as follows: Gustaf A. Hemplo, president; Charles Sjosten, vice-president; K. A. Johnson, recording secretary; John Nordstrom, financial secretary; Olof Anderson, treasurer. Past President John Svenson acted as installing officer.

Sam Gelalich, returned last night from a visit of six days in Aberdeen. He reports the worst weather in that region over known, with immense snow banks and bitterly cold. The trip to Astoria, over the North Bank road was very hard and disargeeable and he is mighty glad to be home again. Mr. Galalich stated that had he known before he started of the weather conditions he would have remained at home.

With the exception of the Alderbrook school all of the other schools in the city were being conducted as usual this morning. In the Adair school one room was found to be impossible to heat properly and the pupils were dismissed for the day but it is expected to be in proper condition by tomorrow. Work is being done today on the heating apparatus of the Alderbrook school and it will be opened on Wednesday morning as usual.

An announcedment has been made of the wedding of Ralph H. Jenkins and Miss Belle Ainsworth of Portland and that it will take place at the First Presbyterian church in Portland on the evening of January 22. Mr. Jenkins is the assistant general freight and passenger agent of the A. & C. R. and bas a host of good friends in Astoria who will be glad to congratulate him on winning the belle and wealthiest girl of Portland.

Twelve and a half degrees above zero was the record in this city this morning, which is nearly five degrees colder than since the present storm started. Predictions for tonight are that more snow will fall and that it will be warmer but local conditions do not indicate this except there is another high southerly scud blowing while the lower strata of air is still from the east. More than half of the water pipes in the city are frozen up and the actual damage done will amount to considerable, not counting the wear and tear on the nerves of the householders who are continually thawing out the pipes and often with little success. Hicks, the well known weather prophet, says that the present cold spell will last until the middle of March but the government weather officials say that it already shows signs of moderating and that in a few days normal conditions will again prevail.

Before adjourning its session yesterday afternoon, the county court completed the fixing of the boundaries of the various road districts in the county. A portion of district No One was added to the New Astoria district and the district thus created was called No 19, C. M. Mekula being appointed supervisor. A new district, known as No 21, was created in the upper Necanicum section by cutting off the west 15 sections from district No 4, comprising the territory between the Tillotson bridge and the line of district No 3 and Carl Johnson was appointed supervisor. District No 3 was changed so as to include the main Nehalem road to the summit, by taking a strip of territory, consisting of 10 sections, from the north side of District No 15. Another new district, No 20, was created by taking portions of districts No six and eight. Fred Watson was appointed supervisor. This district begins at the Olney bridge and comprises a strip about three sections wide along the line of the Green Mountain road.

There was no meeting of the state board of pilot commissinors today the meeting having been postponed some days ago until next Tuesday.

From Sumner B. Howard the information is received that his brother died at Stonham, Mass after he arrived there and that now he is visiting at Kittery, Maine

Two rafts of logs belonging to the Hammond Lumber Company broke adrift from Oak Point on Saturday night and drifted some distance down the river in the ice. Yesterday one of them was picked up by C. C. Cross and tied up at Cathlamet, while the other was picked up by the company's steamer Lottie and made fast at Brookfield. About 50 logs had been torn loose from the latter raft by a tramp steamer colliding with it, but they will probably be recovered as soon as the ice breaks up.

At today's session of the county court, an order was made directing the clerk to file no bills for surveying and laying out new roads until the report of the viewers, map and profile have been filed. A 30-year franchise was granted to the Oregon Coast Railway Company to use the county bridges and portions of the county road for the proposed electric railroad to Seaside. The terms of the franchise are the same as published in the Budget a few days ago, excepting that a provision was added that the company shall hold the county safe and harmless from all liability for damages that may arise either directly or indirectly by reason of the operation or maintenance of the electric line. The court will adjourn its session this evening until some date later in the month.

One of the pleasant surprises for Manager Whyte at the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last night was the profuse and highly complimentary remarks concerning the showing of the vast amount of work done as exhibited in the annual report of the promotion committee. On motion of J. M. Anderson, seconded by C. J. Curtis, a unanimous vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Whyte. The secretary responded saying that he valued the appreciation of the members more highly than he could express in mere words. There was prevailing thorughout the evening a most cordial and friendly mutual feeling and a spirit that greater things were in immediate store for Astoria. The report of the promotion committee and of President Scholfield were revelations showing the vast and intricate amount of detail that has characterized the labors of the chamber during the past twelve months and which promises so much for the future good of the city.

The work of clearing the ocean front bordering on the Seaside property is being done by W. S. Henninger, who has a donkey engine and quite a force of men at work. The contract calls for the removal of the logs from a strip 70 feet wide and 2000 feet long. Many of these logs have been on the ground since before the memory of the oldest inhabitant are partly burned de and cayed. Many persons wish to walk on the beach from Seaside around Tillamook and it is extremely difficult to go over and among these logs, so their removal will and not only to the beauty of the beach, but will be a great convenience to those who like to visit Tillamook by this route. One of the residents of that section has a unique well. The cobblestones were removed, making a square hole into which a large heavy wooden box was inserted. Then the work of removing the stones went on from the inside of the box. At a distance of 10 or 12 feet he reached water without going thourgh any sand or earth. As the rocks were removed the box sank making the wall of the well. This man now has an abundance of clear, pure water for family use.

MARINE INTELLIGENCE

The steam schooner Wellsley, which arrived in from California on Monday afternoon, has received orders to proceed to Aberdeen to load lumber.

The steamer Nome City, which arrived in this morning, is at the Clatsop mill dock being sheathed along her water line and as soon as this is done she will leave up the river for Portland.

All the steamers and steam schooners which left up the river on Monday, arrved safely and with little damage. The heavy iron vessels led the way and the others followed close in their wake. No vessels however have left down the river and none are expected to until the river is clear of ice.

POLYGAMY BILL IS DEFEATED

Oregon Legislators Refuse to Consider it

Salem, Jan. 13—A resolution to memorialize congress to suppress polygamy was opposed and defeated this morning by the legislature, Senator Abrahams leading the fight against its adoption. It is asserted that people, all over the country are constantly aiming at the citizens of Utah thru congress because a few men are retaining wives they married years ago. A memorial to congress protesting against the proposed reduction of the tariff on lumber was adopted by a strict party vote, the Democrats being opposed. Memorial, similar to those of Maine, Illinois, Louisiana and Wisconsin was adopted urging the election of senators by popular vote. An exceedingly rabid anti-trust bill was introduced in the house, the most stringent anti-corporation measure ever presented to the Oregon legislature. It provides that any kind of combination affecting the prices or sale of goods shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment or both.

The formal election by the overseers will occur one week from today. Lowell is now professor of the science of government.

MARINE INTELLIGENCE

The steamer Alliance arrived in this afternoon from Coos bay with freight and passengers.

The steamer Eureka left down the river from Portland at seven o'clock this morning and she is the first vessel to make the attempt since the freeze up. She is heavily built of iron but has not much power so it is questionable whether she will get through. From the best accounts there is considerable floating ice in the river below the mouth of the Willamette and it would take a powerful vessel to get through it although all the vessels that have left up have arrived in safety.

The quartermaster steamer Major Guy Howard is laid up at Fort Canby and will remain there until the ice runs out of the river as she is not sheathed and her hull is very light.

The steamer Nome City finished being sheathed on Tuesday evening and left up the river.

DAVID BELASCO, FAMOUS AMERICAN PLAYWRIGHT.

David Belasco is to the stage today what Dion Boucicault was two generations ago or what James A. Herne was ten or twenty years ago. Mr. Belasco is a master of stage technique. His "Heart of Maryland" was a fit forerunner for such careful productions as "The Girl of the Golden West" and his other plays that have won such signal popularity. Much of Belasco's success lies in his ability to produce that subtle attribute of the modern drama known as "atmosphere." He never writes of things he does not fully understand, and when he has staged a play it is well nigh perfect in every detail.

HEYBURN IS RE-ELECTED

Will Represent Idaho in the U. S. Senate Again

Boise., Jan. 13—By a strict party vote Weldon B. Heyburn was re-elected, U. S. Senator. The Democrats united on James L. McClear. The vote in joint assembly was Heyburn 57, McClear 19.

MEDFORD VOTES FOR LICENSE

Medford, Or., Jan. 13—In the liveliest election ever held in this city prohibition was defeated. Both sides have worked hard during the campaign, but so quietly was the matter carried on that neither side would venture this morning to make a guess as to the outcome.

Medford by its remarkable charter giving it the right to govern its political affairs -which charter was sustained by the supreme court of the state, had remained the only "oasis" in the south part of the state. The prohibitionists firmly believed that a vote of the people would decide the matter for some time, and fully confident of the outcome in their favor, they entered the campaign.

The vote was the largest in the history of the city on a city question, 926 votes being cast.

Prohibition was defeated by 127 majority and the attempt to amend the charter to make it comply with the local option law was defeated by a majority of 170.

The complaint alleges that Hay is disqualified, because he paid for advertisements, published by him during the primary election, in alleged violation of the primary election, in alleged violation of the primnary laws. The case will probably be argued next Friday.

HOLDINGS OF SOME RICH MEN

New York, Jan. 13 Holdings of prominent men in railroad corporations which it is asserted are appropriately correct, were published today in a Wall street journal.

The holdings of the Vanderbilts in the New York Central for instance are given as about $14,000,000 of which W. K. Vanderbilt has $10,000,000. Harriman & Co. is credited with holding $1,475,000 of this stock

John S. Kennedey is declared the largest holder of Northern Pacific, having $10,000,000 par value. James J. Hill owns $8,000,000. Henry C. Frick is given as the largest individual stockholder in the Pennsylvania, owning $4,320,000.

E. H. Harriman is credited with holding $75,695,000 of Southern Pacific common and $30,000,000 of Southern Pacific preferred, while Kuhn, Loeb & Co are the registered holders of $14,000,000 common. Practically all of Mr Harriman's holdings belong, it is said, to the Oregon Short Line.

In the Union Pacific Mr. Harriman holds $10,000,000 common and $52,500,000 preferred. Kuhn, Loeb & Co are the registered holders of $29,000,000 Union Pacifics common and a similar amount of preferred.

DON'T WANT HEATHEN GOD

Chicago, Jan. 12—Among the tokens bestowed upon Miss Van Scoy by Har Lai Singh, an aristocratic Indian Punjab whom she nursed back to health a year ago, was a little idol, which the East Indian declared had been given to him by an African river pilot. Now Miss Van Scoy is anxious to get rid of the idol. It has developed that the idol is a god worshipped by over seventy thousand Damaraland natives, who are in a state of unrest because their god has been taken out of the country and German colonial officers are negotiating for the return of it. Miss Van Scoy is willing to part with her present, and will return it as soon as the necessary arrangements are made.

SYBIL MARSTON DRIVEN ASHORE

Two of Steam Schooner's Crew are Drowned

Surf, Calif., Jan 13 The steam schooner Sybil Martson, loaded with lumber was driven ashore off Surf last night and today is being battered to pieces in the breakers a mile below this point. The crew made an attempt to reach shore in small boats at daybreak and two were drowned. One body was recovered. The coast, at this point is rocky and precipitous, that heavy sea making it difficult for small boats to reach shore and with practically no facilities at this point to assist them. People gathered on the beach, ready to do anything possible to save the men. She was seen last night flashing lights for help and blowing signals of distress but nothing could be done for the vessel. The Marston was commanded by Captain Schliinsky with a cargo of timber and sailed from Grays Harbor for Redondo and carries a crew of 22 men. She was owned by Escher Minor of San Francisco.

Four or five men have reached shore safely. The two men who were drowned, were washed from the deck of the steamer. The vessel had lost her way in the fog and rain. The crew consisted of the captain, three mates, three engineers, three firemen, two oilers, three in the steward's department and nine sailors.

The names of the two sailors drowned were McCarty and O'Neil. A line has been passed from the shore to the vessel and the remainder of the crew will be saved. There is no hope of saving the vessel but the cargo may be salvaged. The watch officer mistook the railroad depot light at Surf for the light house at Point Argyle.

ASSIST QUAKE SUFFERERS

Oregon Legislature May Make an Appropriation

Salem, Or., Jan. 13—A bill appropriating $10,000 for the aid of homeless persons in the devastated sections of Sicily and southern Italy is to be introduced early in the session. John Cordano and Joe Morak of Portland are here conferring with legislators, but the sponsorship of the measure has not been settled.

The Diplomat.

"We have imported a few directoire gowns," announced the conservative merchant. "Only the more daring will wear these advanced garments, but we are ready to supply them."

And about three of the gowns were sold.

"We have received a large importation of directoire gowns," announced his rival. "Only the prettiest women can wear them to advantage."

The next day all the women in town bought one of the rival.—Chicago Post.

VALUATION OF TIMBER LANDS

Beales Will Introduce His Former Measure

Salem, Jan 13—Taxation of standing timber upon correct estimates to be furnished by the owners is the keynote of a bill to be introduced by Representative Beals of Tillamook and Yamhill counties. Representative Beals introduced this same bill two years ago at the session of 1907 but it was killed in the senate.

HONOLULU HAS GREAT STORM

Honolulu, Jan. 13—A severe southwesterly storm is raging throughout the islands tonight and much rain has fallen. A peculiarity of the storm is the appearance of numerous gooneys a species of storm bird from the extreme South Pacific, seen here for the first time since 1888. The appearance of these birds so far from their native seas is a good indication of the extent and severity of the present storm.

Despite the force of the wind, the big freight steamer Texan, bound from San Francisco to Salina Cruz, which has been lying in Kahultutti harbor, succeeded in making her way to sea in safety today.

Perversity.

Why do the very apt retort,
That g[illegible] repartee,
I never thought of when I ought
Next day occur to me?

Why is it when I'm snug in bed
Ideas come fast and free,
But when I'm up and dressed my head
Is empty as can be?

Why is it when my soles are through
I fuss for new shoes till
I get a pair, and then, too true,
I wear the old ones still?

Why is it all nice things I see,
And all most good and true,
Should somehow never seem to be
The things I want to do?

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES OF

The Houston Adjustable Shade Holders

1. The lowering of the top window sash and SHADE, affording VENTILATION over TOP of shade without the WIND BLOWING shade when down.
2. Convenience of lowering top sash and HOLDERS, for putting up SHADES and CURTAINS and Adjusting same from floor without use of chair or step ladder
3. Carrying of lace CURTAINS, and POLE, on same HOLDERS with SHADE, thus allowing all to be lowered out of WIND and DUST when ventilation is desired.
4. Does away with all DISFIGURING of Window Casings, caused by use of old style fixtures in fastening up both shade and lace curtain pole.
5. Affording VENTILATION at TOP of window where the COLD air comes in direct contact with the WARM air.
6. SHADES and LACE CURTAINS last Much Longer by being lowered out of WIND and DUST.
7. Especially convenient and necessary for the BATH, BED, SCHOOL, LODGE, or SICK room, KITCHEN, PARLOR or CHURCH.
8. Shade will not JUMP OUT and fall if accidently allowed to FLY up as there are no openings in the rachet piece of the holder, as in old style fixtures.
9. ECONOMICAL, Saves Expense of buying new shades when moving, being Adjustable to various width shades and Depth window jams.
10. No BLOWING or TORN SHADES with WIND, no more Disfiguring of Casings and no use for step ladder to put up shades or lace curtains.
11. Suitable for stone or brick buildings, by placing brackets near inside edge of sash rail, cutting roller and adjusting rachet piece [illegible] to go inside of jams.
12. CHEAP, STRONG, DURABLE and SIGHTLY.

HENRIK IBSEN IS CHARTERED

Will Load Lumber at Grays Harbor

San Francisco, Jan. 13—The Norweigan steamer Henrik Ibsen arrived Sunday, twenty-six days from Ancon, in ballast for repairs and went up to Mare Island, where the work will be done by the government.

The Ibsen carried coal for the Pacific fleet and discharged into the cruisers off Panama, during which operation she collided with one of the vesels and damaged several plates to the exent of about $6,000. After repairing she will proceed to Grays Harbor, being under charter to load there from Melbrune and Adelaide for J. J. Moore & Co. The rate is 31 shillings and 3 pence.

MOORE NOW CHIEF JUSTICE

Is Senior Member of Oregon Supreme Court

Salem, Or., Jan. 31—Justice F. A. Moore has ascended the supreme bench as chief justice, to succeed Justice R. S. Bean, who has filled that position during the past two years. The justices ascend to the honor of chief justice in the order in which they are elected, each serving the last two years of his six-year term as chief justice.

Justice Bean begins his new term, for which he was elected last June. Justice Eakin will succeed Chief Justice Moore the second Monday in January, 1911.

"SI PLUNKARD'

Tonight the great laughable and rural comedy Si Plunkard" will be the attraction at the Astoria theatre. The story is that of a good, old-fashioned couple on the farm, whose beautiful home life and surroundings appeal with peculiar tendernes to every author. Anything that tells of the hills, fields, meadows and lanes of the country and quaint characters found there, is always one of the most delightful dramatic treats that a city can behold. During the action of the play a number of new and novel specialties will be introduced, including clever little Arletta Lewis, presenting a program unexcelled for fun, originality and novelties, giving you an evening of enjoyment that you will not soon forget.

Meerschaum.

There are thirteen recognized qualities of meerschaum.

Iodine.

One of the most important substances used by the physician is iodine, made from the ashes of seaweed, which is a nearly certain remedy for some complaints which were formerly considered incurable.

Gunpowder.

The explosive force of closely confined gunpowder is six and a half tons to the square inch.

Pure Beer.

Pure beer is manufactured from malt boiled with hops and then fermented.

Juice of the Papaw.

In his "History of Barbados" Griffith Hughes mentions that the juice of the papaw tree is of so penetrating a nature that if the unripe peeled fruit be boiled with the toughest old salted meat it quickly makes it soft and tender. Kersten also tells us that boiling meat with the juice of the papaw is quite a common thing in Quito.

The East Room.

The east room of the White House is 80 by 40 feet in dimension.

New York's Islands.

New York city, although not known as the American Venice, contains more islands than any city but Venice, for within its boundaries are thirty-one separate and distinct islands.

Coal Products.

From coal is obtained the means of producing over 400 shades of color, a great variety of perfumes, explosive agents, various acids and medicines, insecticides, salts, saccharine, fruit flavors, asphaltum, lubricating oils and varnish.

Lightning.

Lightning can be seen by reflection at a distance of 200 miles.

Arctic Ice.

Water thrown upon ice in the arctic regions will crack it, just as boiling water breaks glass. This happens because the ice is so much colder than the water.

A POLITE BURGLAR

His Genial Interview with One of His Paris Victims

Nine years ago the house of M. Descaves in Paris was "burgled." The other day he received a "most urgent" message from the police informing him that the burglar had just been discovered. He went to the magistrate's office and was there introduced to his burglar. The first thing that struck him was that Palm—that being the burglar's name—had a marvelous memory. He has burgled innumerable houses since 1880 and he remembers all about the burglaries. In fact, he remembered more about the burglary at M. Descaves' house than M. Descaves remembers himself. The conversation between burglar and burgled was perfectly courteous. "Of course," said M. Descaves, "I should not think of animadverting upon your having made use of my wardrobe, for the garments which you left behind in exchange for mine certainly did require replacing." "Exactly," answered Palm. "As a matter of fact I rather think that of the two of us I came off worse. Just consider your trousers for instance."

M. Descaves looked hurt. Palm explained by gesture the difference in girth between the novelist and himself. M. Descaves apologized for the width of his trousers and the burglar gave him a bit of advice. "When you go away never shut your shutters. By doing so you give burglars the tip. On the contrary, leave them open and leave your mat in front of the door. This will delude my friends into thinking that there is still somebody in the house."

On leaving M. Descaves shook hands with his burglar, but felt delicacy about saying "Au revoir," as Palm has already sentences of a dozen years' hard labor to undergo. "No, don't say au revoir, because if we do ever meet again I am afraid that the pleasure will be for me only," said Palm, who finally showed his breeding by insisting that M. Descaves should pass out of the door before him. It is not often one meets with such polite burglars or that burglars have the luck to victimize humorists who take their misfortunes so pleasantly.—Boston Transcript.

Fresh Air Tablets.

The room was very stuffy, but no one would consent to an open window.

"Then I must squander a fresh air tablet," said the rosy lady.

And she took a brown tablet from her purse and dissolved it in a glass of water. Bubbling, it cleared the air wonderfully. It made the stale air pure and bracing. And no wonder, for it released a great quantity of oxygen.

"I brought these tablets from France," said the lady. "They are the invention of an acetylene specialist. They are a combination of chemicals that in water give off oxygen in abundance. The tablets are in winter very popular in France, where one is considered equal to a window wide open for an hour."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Declining Japanese Industry.

The forging of scimiter blades in Japan was once a flourishing industry, and the workers formed a close and powerful corporation. But the industry has declined for years, and now only two makers are left, Messrs Sonkyama and Myamoto. No young Japanese has come forward to offer himself as an apprentice, and the question was referred to the mikado with a view of perpetuating the industry.

The mikado has come to the rescue and has founded two scholarships of £100 to induce two lads to offer themselves for initiation into the art and mystery of making scimiter blades. London Globe.

Insult to Injury.

"Why am I gloomy?" demanded the undesirable admirer, to whom she had given the cut direct. "Isn't it enough to make one gloomy to be cut by the one he loves best?"

"The idea!" exclaimed the heartless girl. "I didn't even know that you shaved yourself."

Partners to the End

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

One day when Colonel Day came back to his top story room at Mrs. Wilkins' rooming house he found the room next to his occupied. It had been vacant for a year, and the colonel was not only curious, but nettled. The garret of the house was divided into two rooms, and his was one, and he had never even looked into the other, but as he had so long been the sole tenant of the top story he felt that he ought to have been consulted as to a newcomer. When he heard a person moving around in the other half of his domain he went down to Mrs. Wilkins.

The colonel was a man of sixty. He had threadbare garments and an empty purse. While he occupied the cheapest room in the house, it was well known that he was often hard put to pay his rent, while his meals were always taken at the cheapest restaurants. He was a man of dignity and education, and that he had once occupied a place in the world could not be doubted.

"Mrs. Wilkins," began the colonel as he entered the landlady's presence, "I take it that you have rented the other room, and to a female at that?"

"Yes, colonel, but it is to a young woman who is trying hard to make a living."

"But you should have consulted me. I have been with you for a year, and I should hate to remove to other quarters, but please remember that I have certain rights and privileges, and they are not to be abrogated without my consent. I will think it over and consider what steps to take."

Five minutes later he knocked on the door of the other room, and it was opened to him by a young woman of about twenty-five. He bowed stiffly, and she drew aside as an invitation for him to enter. As he looked around the room he saw a cheap old trunk on the floor and a few poor articles of wearing apparel hanging up on the nails driven into the wall. A second glance into the young woman's face told him that she had consumption.

"I came here to ask you why you rented this room," he said as his face softened a little, "but I can see without asking. Miss, let us shake hands."

"For why?" she asked.

"Because I occupy the next room; because we are both victims of fickle fortune; because we should feel sorry for each other; because I feel more sorry for you than you can for me."

"I hardly understand you, sir," she said as she slowly put out her hand.

"You are trying to make a living, I take it?"

"Yes."

"And I am fighting poverty in hopes to live a few years longer, though why I should care to live another week I do not know. The bond of poverty is between us. Let us be friends."

That night, instead of taking his meal at a cheap restaurant, he brought home a loaf of bread and some sausage. Instead of going out to hunt up a cheap place, she went out for a bit of butter and a jar of marmalade. They had dinner together in her room. It was the first of many meals.

The colonel and the young lady got to be very good friends. They counseled with each other; they cheered and encouraged each other; they deceived each other, or tried to, as to what the future had in store. The woman suffered most, and yet she was the bravest hearted. From almost the first day of their meeting they looked forward to certain things. Some day the last of his friends would disappear and his precarious income would cease altogether. He would die before asking a stranger for charity. Some day the disease eating at her lungs would demand the penalty, and there would be no avoiding it. They talked the matter over for an hour and then dropped it and never referred to it again. It was the black shadow in their path, and yet they fought it away. One night, a year later, the colonel came home and found the young woman in bed. The doctor had been there, and the landlady had done all she could do. It was the beginning of the end. The colonel sat down with a softer light on his face than his partner had seen there for weeks, and there was a touch of the exultant in his voice as he said:

"I have come home penniless. The last of my friends has turned his back on me. I am no beggar of alms."

"I am so sorry," she sighed.

"Say rather that you are so glad. You may linger for a month, but you have no hope of getting well."

"None whatever."

"You remember our talk of long ago? The time seemed far off then, but it is here tonight. Why should you be a month in dying? Why should I seek to live for three or four years more?"

"Yes, we had a talk," she quietly said.

"Have you any money?"

"A dime. Take it and buy you something to eat."

"Partners to the last," he said as he smiled and rubbed his hands together. "It makes it far easier where we are to go together. I will be back soon."

"And it is going to happen?" she asked as he returned with a bulky package.

"It must. Why should it not?"

"Yes—why not?"

Half an hour later the colonel sat down beside the bed and [illegible] said:

"We have been partners [illegible] partners. I will sit here and hold your hand while we sleep."

They found them thus the police, the tearful landlady, the bustling coroner, the reporters.

"They simply fell asleep," said the coroner. "The fumes of charcoal always leave that peaceful, restful look on the human face."

PATIENT SHETLANDS

Active as Terriers and as Sure Footed as Mules

Shetlands are "foaled in the fields, live in the fields and die in the fields." They have a rooted dislike for indoor life and thrive best when allowed to feed naturally on green grass, with perhaps hay in winter. Until two years old nature provides a soft, wool-like covering. Afterward the mature coat of hair appears, to be shed each spring, when the ponies appear sleek and handsome. Full grown, they are immensely strong, with wide quarters, powerful legs and a great width and depth over the heart and lungs. And, as Bengle wrote in 1870 in his "Tour In Shetland:" "The Shetland pony is the most lovable of animals in the wide creation. They are sprightly and active as terriers, sure footed as mules and patient as donkeys. The horse is accredited as the noblest of the lower animals, and the Shetland pony stands at the head of this noble race as the most intelligent and faithful of them all."

The great value of the Shetland to the coal miners lies in its ability to work in the low galleries in thin seamed pits, where other ponies could not travel. Their strength does not correspond with their diminutive proportions, and they will travel thirty miles a day in the seams, drawing from twelve to fourteen hundredweight. Underground their lot is hard, but use becomes second nature, and they are treated, if roughly, not unkindly.—St. James' Gazette.

The Chinaman and His Dragon.

If a Chinaman wishes for happiness and peace in this world and the next he feels obliged to consult his majesty the dragon as to where his house shall be built and his grave be made. Through the earth, so say the Chinese, flow two currents—the dragon and the tiger. Now, for a man to have good fortune in life or, as he would say in "pigeon English," to "catchee chance," his house must be put in a certain position in reference to these currents. If he is to rest quietly in his grave, that also must be correctly placed. So called "wise men" make a business of choosing favorable sites for homes and graves, professing by means of a wand and incantations and other kinds of tomfoolery to be able to detect the presence of the dragon and the tiger and to tell in what direction they flow.

Skating.

Skating is believed to have been invented in northern Europe in prehistoric times. William Fitz-Stephen speaks of it in London toward the end of the twelfth century, but it did not really catch hold until the cavaliers who had been in exile with Charles II. brought it with them from Holland. On Dec. 1, 1662, Mr. Pepys, having occasion to cross the park, "first in my life, it being a great frost, did see people sliding with their skates, which is a very pretty art." On the 8th he went purposely to see the sight and again found it "very pretty."—London Chronicle.

Works Both Ways.

"So you think it is an advantage to a man to go to congress for awhile?"

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "It gives the people in his own town a chance to think he is a great man in Washington and the people in Washington a chance to think he is a great man in his own town."—Washington Star

A Nightmare Yankee

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

Bill Meacham, private —th Pennsylvania infantry, escaped prisoner of war, stood at the edge of a wood looking at a house standing in the center of a plantation. Bill's stomach was as empty as a haversack at the end of a two weeks' campaign, and he was wondering if he dare go to the house and ask for something to eat. Would he rather starve or run the risk of going back to that frightful prison pen? Then he looked himself over. He had no head covering whatever, and the last time his hair had been combed was before the fight in which he had been captured three months agone. Half a leg of his trousers was missing as well as the right sleeve of his coat and a part of the left sleeve. As to the coat's skirt, it hung in rag festoons. One old rubber shoe and a bit of blanket constituted his foot covering. It was not danger alone that caused him to hesitate. It was pride.

However, hunger conquered both pride and prudence, and he went to the house. Passing through a flower garden, he suddenly came upon a girl making up a bouquet. On seeing Bill she dropped a pair of big scissors, giving a slight scream at the same time. Bill's hand naturally went up to his head; but, not finding any hat there to doff deferentially, he attempted to propitiate the girl with an admiring smile. It produced an effect similar to that of a dirty faced grinning skeleton. The girl shrank back.

"Don't be afraid of me," pleaded Bill. "I'm harmless, quite harmless." He paused a moment to arrest the ravage of a grayback. "I might as well own up that I'm an escaped prisoner of war."

"A Yankee!"

"Yes, a Yankee, but not a dangerous one just now unless for vermin, and I'd be ever so obliged if you'd give me a bit of corn pone or something to keep me from starving."

Bill's tone was sad, and by this time the girl began to take in the pitiful situation. She was very young and her sympathies easily touched. She stood for a moment thinking, then said:

"We're all loyal to the south up at the house, and if you go there we'd have to give you up. Get under that rosebush, where you will not be seen, and I'll bring you something."

Bill gave her a grateful look, which, though grewsome, didn't frighten her so much this time. She went toward the house, and he crawled under the bush. Presently she came back with some scraps she had gathered from the breakfast table rolled in a napkin, gave them to Bill and told him he'd better be off. Bill, in his gratitude forgetting himself, advanced to clasp her hand, but she darted back with a bit of a shriek, then, seeing that she had hurt his feelings, said:

"It isn't you I'm afraid of; it's the vermin."

Well, Bill backed away from her so as not to show the remains of his protruding shirt tail and went on his way.

When the war ended Bill got a commission in the regular army. During the administration of President Grant he was on duty in Washington, which meant that he lounged most of the day and attended social functions in the evening. It was not long before he married the daughter of a southern congressman, and a very happy match he made.

One morning he kissed his wife and went to his office in the war department, as usual. About 11 o'clock Mrs. Meacham was informed by a maid that there was a tramp at the door who insisted on seeing the lady of the house. "But I wouldn't advise you to go down; he's the worst lookin' beast I ever saw." Mrs. Meacham sent the maid back to tell the man that she was busy, and the maid returned with the information that the man was bound to see the lady, and if she didn't come down he would go up. If there had been telephones in those days Mrs. Meacham would have called the police. But telephones had not yet been invented, and there was no man in the house. Mrs. Meacham finally determined to go down. There in the hall stood the tramp. He wore no hat on his uncombed hair but little more than half of his clothing was available, one foot was incased in a piece of blanket, the other in a rubber shoe. Mrs. Meacham's terror was somewhat mollified by seeing one or two brass buttons on his coat.

"My husband is in the war department," she gasped. "Go to him. He'll provide for you and see that you are taken care of by the government."

The man suddenly put his hand to his hair and clinched something.

"For heaven's sake," cried the lady, "don't bring vermin into this house! Go away! Call on Major Meacham. He'll attend to your case."

"It's hard lines," whined the tramp, "when a man can't get a crust in his own house."

"Good gracious, ma'am," exclaimed the maid, "he's mad!"

The tramp looked at Mrs. Meacham and smiled, a horrible grin which, once seen, would never be forgotten. "Don't you remember the Yankee you fed one day in the flower garden down in Dixie?"

Yes, Mrs. Meacham remembered him. She [illegible] never forgotten him.

"Oh, heavens," she wailed, "have I married that horrible nightmare of a Yankee? Why didn't you tell me?"

"Tell you! How would I have ever got you if I had?"

Major Meacham did not kiss his wife again till he had had a Turkish bath.

The Best Way
To Advertise
Astoria?

✣ ✣ ✣ ✣ ✣ ✣

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

Even the Oregonian admits that serious delays are occasioned to vessels in going up and down the river during the present cold snap and the expense to shipping from this cause is far from being ended. It can readly be seen that with the immense amount of snow that has fallen in the mountains, there will be more serious delays and expense for shipping in the upper river as soon as the freshets occur in the spring. All this could be easily avoided by conducting the shipping from some point near the mouth of the Columbia river, where neither ice nor freshets ever interfere which the coming and going of ocean craft.

The county court has granted a franchise to the Oregon Coast Railway Company, whereby the latter will be permitted to use the county bridges in the construction of its proposed electric railroad from this city to Seaside. The terms of the franchise appear eminently fair to both parties. Under them, the railway company is permitted to take advantage of the county's authority to construct bridges across Youngs bay and the Lewis and Clark river and the county will secure new draws that will be much heavier and more substantial than those now in place, free of cost. The building of this road will be one of the best projects not only for the city but also for the entire district thru which it runs, that has been undertaken here in many years. The history of other places has been that electric lines are great factors in the development of the farming sections and the same result may be expected here.

The average property holder is wondering at this time whether or not the people of this country will be made to pay the losses by earthquake and fire sustained by the insurance companies in Italy and Sicily. It is morally certain that if it can be brought about in any manner the insurance companies may be trusted to put on all the traffic will bear and then some more, for it is not a question of right with them, but a matter of what the people can be made to stand, without too much fighting back.

The Santa Fe railroad announces that hereafter it will abolish the telegraph in the handling of its train service, substituting therefore a telephone service, which is regarded as being cheaper and more reliable. The substitution will be made as rapidly as possible on the lines from Chicago to San Francisco. The coast of the change will be something like $2,000,000 according to the estimate submitted, but the company believes that this sum will be saved in a short time in salaries and repairs of equipment caused by accidents.

There is quite a change in the condition of things this January as compared with January, 1908. The[illegible] was car shortage all over the entire country. Our lumbermen and fruit growers lost thousands of dollars by not being able to get their products to market. People in many sections of the country actually suffered with coal shortage because the coal mines could not get cars.

The announcement on the eve of the great football game that President Eliot would shortly retire from Harvard was followed by a shifting of players in the Yale team. Perhaps the boys of Eli thought the announcement was a ruse to "throw a scare into them." If President Eliot, who has championed "denatured" athletics of all kinds for colleges, abandons the cause it must be because Harvard's men refuse to give up kicking and gouging, and challengers should prepare for a brutal game. Instead of taking it as a scare, the Yale men accepted it as a dare.

The protests of Dr. Eliot and others of influence in the college world against brutal football or too much football and other sport have possibly aroused false hopes as to the taming of the gridiron. Over 200 casualties, including several that proved fatal, in the first ten months of 1908 seem a heavy toll to exact from the little bands of brave boys who make "sport" for the crowd out of sheer loyalty to college colors.

The Maine Farmer advises boys to stick to the farm as a business proposition. The argument is not new, but there is certainly ample justification for it now. The value of agricultural land generally is increasing, and the farmer can often make more than a "living," even though he only supports his family, by improving his acreage and selling out at an advance.

The real boy days are the hardest ones to live through on a farm for a boy of spirit. His work is measured by the work of older and stronger hands, and he naturally thinks he could do better in some other occupation. Farm associations, especially where transient hands are employed, are not always good for growing boys, and if the boy fails to see it his mother sees it and encourages his ambition to get away. Boys dislike school where they cannot learn something useful, and they will dislike farm life that is not an advance for them.

That sudden and mysterious "taking off" of the empress dowager and the imprisoned emperor of China has enough of the color of "deep damnation" in it to incite outsiders against the palace clique.

Great Britain now has six Dreadnoughts and is to build more. Probably the whole dreadful business worries the nation that pays the price more than any other.

HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

Don't get sic[illegible] suffering friends may come around and insist upon your taking your own often prescribed medicine.

Of course we [illegible] be care[illegible] possible of the feelings of our friends if [illegible] could only [illegible] ourselves the right of [illegible] friends to [illegible] feelings.

[illegible] anything that a woman [illegible] on hand nowadays it is [illegible]

[illegible] would [illegible] one grand sweet [illegible] if we could [illegible] friends [illegible] own private end.

No woman [illegible] cause [illegible] jealousy [illegible] who [illegible] the only woman present.

It is hard to endure another's pain unless you are either his physician or his trained nurse.

Had the combination been just a little different every man is dead sure he would have been a great and glorious success.

It may be all right to be strenuous if some one else will stand the expense and let you reap the profits.

Belated Praise.

Sing [illegible] of summer
Hard to [illegible] its praises
When the [illegible] is boiling
And it's hot as blazes,
But its rare attractions
Are immensely pleasing
When the snow comes drifting
And our ears are freezing.

When the days have vanished
That were full of splendor,
Hot enough, I'll venture,
Storage lard to render,
How they strike our fancy
Like a hammer tripping
With a zero layout
And the frost bug nipping!

Then we die of longing
For the breezes fleeting
That with blast of furnace
Were at times competing,
And we can in fancy
Feel them fan our faces
When we find old winter
Getting down to cases.

Thus at every season
Vain regrets come fretting
For the one that's vanished,
On its graces betting,
And we come reciting
Words serene and pleasant
For the one that isn't
On the job at present.

CONDITIONS OF THE FORESTS

Timber Resources of The United States

Few people have anything like a clear idea of the amount of forest wealth left in this country. Those who think at all about this natural resource which has assisted in material development since the landing of the first settlers are usually too much influenced by the condition of that particular state or section in which they are most familiar.

If they live in a much deforested or a treeless region, the people usually imagine that the country's timber supply is even more limited than is actually the fact; on the other hand, with those whose homes located in a section where a pinch in timber has not been experienced, the feeling is likely to be altogether the other way, and some become so indifferent at times as to think that there is really not much reason to worry about a timber problem. Both can profit by a reading of the actual facts.

The forests of the United States now cover about 550 million acres, or about one-fourth of the land of the whole country. The original forests covered not less than 850 million acres, or nearly one-half.

The forests owned by the government cover one-fourth of the total forest area, and contain one-fifth of all timber standing. Forests privately owned cover three-fourths of the area, and contain four-fifths of the standing timber. Besides having three times the area and four times the forests, the timberland privately owned is generally more valuable.

Forestry, or conservative lumbering, is practiced on 70 per cent of the forests publicly owned and on less than one per cent of the forests privately owned. This covers the country's forest resources as they stand today. Senator Smoot, chairman of the section of forests of the national conservation commission, in outlining the future has said:

"By reasonable thrift, we can produce a constant timber supply beyond our present need, and with it conserve the usefulness of our streams for irrigation, water supply, navigation, and power.

"Under right management, our forests will yield over four times as much as now. We can reduce waste in the woods and in the mill at last one-third, with present as well as future profit. We can perpetuate the naval stores industry. Preservative treatment will reduce by one-fifth the quantity of timber used in the water or in the ground. We can practically stop forest fires at a total yearly cost of one-fifth the value of the standing timber burned each year, not counting young growth.

"We shall suffer for timber to meet our needs, until our forests have had time to grow again. But if we act vigorously and at once, we shall escape permanent timber scarcity."

SCANDINAVIANS ENTERTAINMENT

Benevolent Society Holds Public Installation

The Scandivian Benevolent Society celebrated its twenty-first birthday last evening in Logan hall by giving a public installation of officers and a special musical program, the evening closing with a fine luncheon in the banquet hall.

The occasion was a very successful one and the attendance was large. The installation ceremonies were ably carried out under the direction of Past Grand President Chas. S. Gunderson. The officers installed were as follows: Olof Anderson, president; Arthur Peterson, vice president; John Nordstrom, recording secretary; S. L. Nanthrup, financial secretary; August Danielson, treasurer; Alex. Mesford, chaplain; Andrew Bringdale, inside guard; James Peterson, outside guard; C. S. Gunderson, Chris. Christiansen and Ludwig Larson, trustees; Geo. Knutsen and Andrew Rasmussen, finance committee.

At the conclusion of the installation, Judge Anderson, the newly elected presiding officer, made a short address on the benevolence of the order, that was appreciated. The balance of the program was as follows: Recitation by Miss Knutsen, duett by the Collin Sisters,, recitation by J. M. Anderson of the Scandiavian-American bank, violin solo by Miss Esther Sundquist, song by the lodge quartet and an address by Fred J. Johnson. At the conclusion of the program the guests were invited to partake of a nice warm luncheon that included many good things to eat to which all did justice.

EMPLOYERS MUST WARN EMPLOYES

Supreme Court Decides Case Against O. R. & N.

Salem, Or., Jan. 13—Holding that when the hazard attending the usual exercise of any work required of an inexperienced laborer is not apparent, it is incumbent upon the master to inform him of the dangers ordinarily incident to the service, and if in consequence of any failure in the performance of this duty the servant is injured the master is liable in damages for the neglect the supreme court affirmed the decree of Judge W. L. Bradshaw, of the circuit court for Wasco county, in the case of R. T. Elliff against the O. R. & N. Co. Elliff was given judgment for $900 against the company on account of injury inflicted upon plaintiff's eye by reason of the splashing of an acid solution for the preservation of railroad ties, as a result of which he lost the sight of the eye. The opinion is written by Justice Moore,

In an opinion by Commissioner Slater, the appellate court reversed the judgment of Judge W. S. Bradshaw, for Wasco county, and remanded the case of Frank J. Neal et al, appellants, against Charles Davis et al., for a new trial. This is an action to quiet title to a 40-acre tract of land to the estate of Jesse Neal, deceased.

A Way Out of It.

APPROPRIATION FOR NAVY YARD

Large Sum Included in Proposed Measure

Washington, Jan. 13—Among the appropriations to be made for the Puget Sound navy yard in the naval appropration bill are the following items:

Continuing construction of the new drydock, $400,000; railroad extension, $10,000, sewer extension, $8000; improvement of construction plant, $20,000.

Representative Jones has been requested by the people of Spokane to secure an appropriation to aid the national irrigation congress to be held in Spokane next September. An appropriation of $30,000 was made for Albuquerque last session because of its international character, but it will be very difficult to get money for Spokane this year unless it be converted into an international affair.

A Parisian Character.

The revolutionary Libertad has died in a Paris hospital from a kick which he had received during a recent stormy meeting. Libertad was one of the most curious figures in contemporary Paris. He wore no hat, but long tangled hair and a long beard. Over his scarlet shirt he wore a black blouse, and he was never seen without a crutch and an enormous cane. His language was terrific, and he rarely attended any public meeting without calling for blood. The man was a complete mystery. His most intimate disciples knew nothing of his history. On his deathbed he begged his friends not to arrange a funeral for him, as he had left his body by will to the Paris School of Medicine.

SUPPLEMENTARY REPORT

For the purpose of comparison I herewith submit a statement of the work done as pertains to the department of the auditor and police judge for the six years commencing January 1,1896 and ending December 31, 1902, both inclusive as per report of Experts Leherman and H. J. Wherity:

Bonds and bond int. paid	$ 66,373.43
Gen. fund warrants drawn	215,338.92
Road, crossing and street repair	34,333.44
Street improvements	66,624.20
	$382.669.99

For the six years commencing Jan. 1 1903, and ending Dec. 31, 1908, both inclusive:

Bond interest warrants	65,235.61
General fund warrants	[illegible]
Street repair warrants	[illegible]
Street imp. warrants	[illegible]
City hall warrants	[illegible]
	$744,762.80

It will be seen from the above that the work in the auditor's office and as necessarily follows in the treasurer's office, has more than doubled in the last six years.

BONDS DUE AND PAYABLE.

I call the attention of your honorable body to the fact that municipal bonds will fall due on June 1st 1910 in the sum of $16,000.00, and on September 1st 1910 in the sum of $23,000.00.

TAXES AND STREET ASSESSMENTS.

Taxes are outstanding on the 1892 tax roll in the sum of $10,683.44 this amount is counted as an asset, as the city is presumed to have a lien against the property taxed, no efforts have been made to force collections and very little attention is paid to it, except when someone disposes of a piece of property and has to give an abstract of title, the owner will then come before the city council with a petition tendering a small sum as payment in full which tender is usually accepted. I respectfully suggest that said assesment roll be either cancelled, or that it be given to someone to collect and that the city accept a certain per cent on the dollar collected allowing the collector the balance. Street assessments considered by all the experts who have from time to time experted the city's books as of no value are as follows: 5th street Adair's, Cedar street, Chenamus Street, Court street, Geniveve street, Hemlock street, La Fayette street sewer, La Fayette street, Main street, West 8th street, and West 9th street, in the sum total of $72,320.36, the city has a lien against the property assessed for said improvement, but no effort has been made to force collections, the council evidently considers said assessments as illegal, which statement is proven by the fact that whenever a person owning property assessed for any of the aforesaid improvements petitions the council for the cancelling of said lien, the city council invariably grants such petition. If said assessments are collectable proper steps should be taken to force collection, if they cannot be collected the assessments should be cancelled.

AUDITOR'S OFFICE.

During the six years ending December 31st 1908, it has required 1626 sheets of type written matter to record the work of the city council (journal of proceedings) during the same period the council has passed 982 ordinances, all of this has been pasted into books. I mention this to show the necessity of having a book type writing machine for the auditor's office as it is very unsatisfactory to do work in a manner that has long ago been deemed obsolete by cities not one half the size, and not doing one third the business that is being done by the city of Astoria, and respectfully ask that the auditor's office be furnished with a book type writing machine, and a Burroughs adding machine, said machines could be used not only by the auditor but by the different city officials as well.

CITY CEMETERY.

In regard to the city cemetery I respectfully call to your attention the necessity of the following improvements, and recommend it to your careful consideration.

1st, that the city surveyor be instructed to prepare a blue print of the improved portion of the city cemetery, said blue print to show the blocks, lots, and the number of graves in each lot, the reason for this is obvious, as it now is we have no way of knowing how many graves are used in a lot nor how many persons interred in each lot except to go over the records from five to ten years; by having the number of graves marked on the blue print for each lot, each grave would be marked as a burial permit is issued.

That the city of Astoria cause to be installed a telephone for the use of the city sexton at his residence, so that persons could communicate with him at any time, burial permits are granted upon application to the city auditor, and instructions are then telephoned to Warrenton when someone has to find the sexton, which causes a great deal of inconvenience, a telephone at the house of the city sexton would remedy the matter.

3rd. That a toilet be constructed at or near the cemetery for the convenience of persons who visit there.

4th That proper steps be taken to the end that arrangements may be made either with the A. & C. R. Co., or with the proposed Oregon Coast Railway Co, for the establishment of a spur or side-track to the Ocean View or city cemetery, a convenience that would be greatly appreciated by people in general.

Thanking the Honorable Herman Wise, the city council, and city officials with whom I have had the honor of associating for their uniform courtesies and assistance given me, I, have the honor to be very respectfully yours.

OLOF ANDERSON
Auditor and Police Judge.

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.

I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

ABOUT ASTORIA

J. R. and S. A. Wherry, of Elsie are in the city today on business. They report about fourteen inches of snow throughout the Nehalem valley.

The regular drill of first Company, Coast Artillery, has been postpond on account of the weather, but the school for the non-commissioned officers will be held as usual this evening.

The American-Hawaiian line has chartered the steamship Riverside from Chas. Nelson & Co. as a supply boat for the Nevadan and Nebraskan and will handle freight for them between Puget sound and the Columbia and San Francisco.

The new water commission will hold its first regular business session tomorrow evening and at that time the question of appointing a clerk and an inspector will probably be acted upon. There are reported to be several applications for each position on file.

City Auditor Anderson has filed his annual report for the year 1908. The report is published in full in another column and gives in detail all the transactions by the various departments of the municipality during the year, as well as shows the financial condition of the city.

A letter was received today from S. B. Howard, formerly of Olney, from Kittery Maine stating that his brother had died, also stating he was gaining his health and feeling quite smart. He says the weather is fine for winter and he can stand the cold as well as the old natives.

The county court adjourned its session last evening until January 20. Before adjourning, the report of the viewers on the proposed road near Green Mountain as petitioned for by Sam Karell and others was read and referred to the district attorney to be examined.

The funeral of the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray W. Morton was held this afternoon from Grace Episcopal church, the services being conducted by the rector, Rev. William Seymour Short, and were attended by a number of the friends of the family. The interment was in Greenwood cemetery.

R. C. Bell, the logger, came down from Portland this morning to inquire how operations were in progress at his Deep River camp. He found that nearly all of his men were in Astoria and that the camp had been shut down until the snow went out of the woods. He will return to Portland this evening.

Dr. Willis Eugene Everette, scientific writer of Seattle, says the entire Pacific coast, as far north as Alaska, may expect seismic disturbances between the full moon of January and the to moon of February. He says the unusually cold weather in the northwest is due to the fact that the Japan current has been thrown 1500 miles out to sea, and that the cold weather will continue until the current rights itself.

A bill of sale was filed in the custom house today whereby Nels P. Nelson of Prosper sells the hull of the steamer Myrtle to the Callender Navigation Company. The consideration named is purely nominal, being $1.

The entertainment to be given this evening by the members of the A A A, at their club has been posponed until the weather has moderated. All the water in the swimming tank is cold and the heating is not sufficient on account of the lack of water. The date for the entertainment will be announced by the committee later.

The arrival of a launch about 40 by 8 feet marks the commencement of the quarter-million-dollar fire-control system of Forts Stevens, Columbia and Canby. The launch will be utilized to convey men, working material and all other supplies to points hitherto inaccessible because of the greater draught of government boats now in use at the mouth of the river.

It is expected that when the council meets on next Monday evening petitions, which are now being circulated for signatures, will be presented asking that the Adair drain be replaced by the construction of drains leading down each of the several streets between Thirty-third and Thirty-fifth. Is believed that these drains will carry away the surplus water that does so much damage each year.

At the regular meeting last evening of Astoria Central Labor Council officers to serve during the ensuing year were installed as follows: R. S. Hayner, president; William Olson, vice-president; J. L. Moore, recording secretary; H. M. Lorntsen, financial secretary; Rinard C. Rierson, guide; Thomas Sounden, guardian. The reports of the various retiring officers were read and showed that the organization is in excellent condition.

Several degrees warmer was the record of the weather bureau thermometer this morning but it did not reach above the freezing point and the wind still remains in the east. While the predictions are for more snow it appears quite evident from local observation that it will be cold again this evening and the usual precautions will have to be continued. The water in the reservoir is normal and coming in from the head works satisfactorily unless its capacity is tested too severely.

During the past few days quite a gain has been made in the supply of water in the big reservoir, but in order to preserve the spuply so as to be prepared in case of a serious fire, the department will be compelled to shut off the water at night, so long as the weather is so cold that consumers will leave their service pipes open. The main on Taylor avenue pulled apart yesterday and the water in that section of the city was shut off during a portion of today, while repairs were being made.

On Friday evening Astor lodge No. 6 Kinghts of Pythias will hold a public installation of officers and it will be an elaborate affair as Grand Chancellor Commander Gus. C. Moser, of Portland, and Grand Keeper of Records and Seals L. R. Stinson of Salem will be present to conduct the work. An exceptionably good program for the occasion has been arranged by the officers of the lodge and a large number of the friends of the members will be present.

The cold weather has increased the price of nearly everything that is furished of the local grocers and butchers by the farmers of this vicinity. All kinds of meat has advanced and the local supply is now coming entirely from this section as the Portland wholesalers have practically gone out business. Eggs have gone up ten cent per dozen since last week and butter cannot go higher because it is almost unobtainable. Potatoes have jumped up 25 cents per sack and will surely be higher later as many, tributary to Astoria, have been frozen. The only other marketable vegetable is cabbage and it meets with the other advances.

The schooner Virginia, which arrived Tuesday evening, made the run from Mollendo, Peru, in 43 days. The vessel went to the South American port with lumber. She encountered fairly good winds on the trip up the coast and just 30 days out was off San Francisco. When off Cape Blanco, adverse winds came up or, Captain Olson says, he would have reached the Columbia river in 35 days. Only two vessels were sighted on the voyage. They were seen during the past week and both were square riggers bound south, probably from the Columbia river or the Sound. The Virginia is not chartered and will await orders from her owners.

Andrew Anderson, the insane patient who has been ill at the county jails for some days, is considerably improved, but it will be several days before he can be removed to the asylum at Salem.

Among the first matters which the council will take up after its next meeting will be the preparation of the list of streets which are to be improved during the coming summer, so that all the preliminary matters in connection with the proposed improvements can be disposed of within the next few weeks and contracts let in time to have the greater portion of the work completed before the rains begin next fall.

Senator W. C. Chase of Coose and Curry counties has prepared a bill for introduction at the present session of the legislature, providing that counties bordering on navigable bays or streams may tax themselves for improvement of the channels, in conjunction with aid extended by the national government. This measure will [illegible] each county to act for itself in imposing a tax, the levy to be conditional on aid given by the United States. In Coos county there are two sections bordering on navigable waters, the Coos Bay section and the Coquille river section. The bill will enable the formation of separate corporations to provide for each of these districts, each district contributing only to the improvement that will give it direct benefit. Besides Coos Bay and the Coquille, the bill would enable the counties contiguous to the Siuslaw, Rogue river, Tillamook bay and Yaquina bay to impose a tax for the benefit of navigation.

The final contest in the series of debates that have been in progress at the high school between teams representing the Alfredian Wauregan literary socities was held Tuesday afternoon and at its conclusion the following from the lists of contestants were elected to compose the team which will respresent the local high school in the interscholastic debating contests: Mary Kelley, Alex Sigurdson and Carl Thomas, all members of the Alfredian society. There is a question whether Carl Thomas, who was a member of last year's high school team, being able to participate in this year's contests and in that event this place will be taken by Lawrence Dineen of the Wauregan society. The first of the interscholastic contests in this district will be held here in about ten days between the local team and a team from the Tillamook high school. The question to be discussed will be that of municipal ownership, the Astoria high school supporting the affirmative.

A suit has been filed in the circuit court of Multnomah county by L. A. Porter against the American Surety Company of New York, R. W. Bruns, its representative in Oregon, Frank G. Kelley, manager of the Kelley Lumber Comany's mill at Warrenton, and M. R. Pomeroy, sheriff of Clatsop county, to recover damages in the sum of $10,000. The complaint alleges that the defendants conspired to wrongly extort from the plaintiff $270 today claims of the American Surety Company and the Kelley Lumber Company and $10 to pay for hire of launch Pilot No One to take plaintiff and defendants from this city to Fort Stevens. The complaint further alleges that the defendants did conspire to unlawfully arrest and imprison the plaintiff. Continuing, the complaint asserts that the plaintiff was confined in the Clatsop county jail, that he was thus humiliated, restrained from his liberty and the society of his friends and his business reputation was injured to the extent of $10,000, which he asks the court to direct be paid to him. Sheriff Pomeroy in speaking of the case today, said Mr. Porter was, so far as he knows, never inside the county jail as the complaint alleges and was not arrested by him. He assised Mr. Bruns and Mr. Kelley in collecting a claim against Mr. Porter but was acting simply as a collector not as sheriff and no arrest was thought of. It appears, as near as can be learned, that Mr. Porter had a contract for the construction of a brick cistern for the war department at Fort Stevens and the American Surety Company furnished his bonds. He failed to complete the contract and the surety company was compelled to finish the work. After the work was accepted, the war department approved the bill and issued a check to Mr. Porter in payment thereof. There was owing to the Kelley Lumber Company and the American Surety Company the sum of $270 and after the war department had paid the plaintiff, Mr. Bruns and Mr. Kelley, acting for two corporations, respectively secured the assistance of Mr. Pomeroy in collecting their claims, Mr. Porter was interviewed by the three men and as a result the claims were paid in full.

CHILD PERISHED IN FLAMES

Frightful Accident in Uppertown this Morning

A frightful accident that resulted in the death by burning of Arno Elmer Burns the [illegible] son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Burns, and perhaps the fatal injury of Agnes, the lad's [illegible] sister, occurred about [illegible] o'clock this morning. The family, who moved here a few days ago from Salmon river, Wash., had purchased the [illegible] boarding house on Franklin avenue opposite the North Pacific brewery and resided in the small house directly in the rear of the larger building. This morning Mrs. Burns had a warm fire in the kitchen stove and, leaving the two children asleep in an adjoining room, went to the boarding house to work. She had not been away long when piercing screams were heard from the family residence and the interior of the building was found enwrapped in flames. When help arrived and the children were rescued by Peter [illegible], who broke in thru a window, the little boy was found to be so badly burned about his face and body that he died about an hour later after intense suffering. The girl was severely burned about the face and right hand, but Dr. Pilkington, who is attending her, thinks there is a fair chance for her recovery, if she did not inhale any of the flames; a matter that cannot yet be determined definitely. Just how the fire started is not known and can only be surmised, but as the little boy was found lying on the floor, it is supposed that he got out of bed on awakening and went too close to the stove, where his clothing caught fire and then in his fright rushed back to the bed, setting it in flames.

The children were quickly moved to the adjoining house where everything possible was done to relieve their suffering. Mrs. Burns, mother of the unfortunate children, is nearly distracted with grief, but is being cared for by willing neighbors.

As soon as the alarm was given No three hose company responded and soon had a stream of water on the flames, altho the department was delayed considerably by the first hydrant being frozen up. The flames were extinguished however, before the building was destroyed after the interior was badly gutted. That the conflagration was [illegible]

HOTEL BURNED THIS MORNING

One Guest Missing Others Narrowly Escape

Tokpeka, Jan. 14—Topeka's famous hostelry, the Copeland, was destroyed by fire early today. I. E. Lambert of Emporia, one of the most prominent attorneys and politicians of the state, is missing and is believed to have burned to death. Of 150 guests, twelve were injured and several firemen were hurt. The origin of the fire is thought to have been defective electric wiring in the store room. The loss is estimated at a hundred thousand with insurance of $45,000. The building was plentifully supplied with fire escapes, a roomy lobby and wide hallways, but the main stairway was built round the elevator and the flames shooting up the shaft, soon shut off this means of escape.

As soon as the alarm was sounded, men, women and children scantily clad were crowding the upper halls. About seventyfive guests managed to get to the lower floor before the staircase was cut off. Half a dozen were forced to jump from windows, while others were rescued by firemen from the windows of the hotel, the tops of adjoining building and from the fire escapes. But few had time to collect their personal belongings as most got out of the building in their night clothing.

Petition Presented to Oregon Legislature

Cottage Grove, Or. Jan. 14—A petition has been circulated here to be presented to the Oregon legislature asking a bounty on predatory animals that are depopulating the deer at a rapid rate. Twenty-five dollars on a female wolf is asked, $20 on a male, and $15 on a cougar. Timber cruisers in this locality have during the past two years found hundreds of deer caught by these animals.

JAPAN TAKES LITTLE NOTICE

Tokio, Japan, Jan. 14—Though certain of the Japanese newspapers are seriously exercised over the anti-Japanese bills before the California legislature, others style the matter as a tempest in a teapot. There is no tendency to find sinister design in the increase of the American navy, newspapers generally expressing the opinion that America's growing interests in the Pacific demand a stronger navy, even when it has no particular enemy in mind.

STREET DUEL AFTER ROBBERY

Patrollman Killed and Others Badly Injured

Omaha, Jan 14—Patrolman T. A. Smith is dead, Detective W. G. Devereez is probably fatally injured, Albert Clarke is fatally hurt and Betsy Smith dangerously shot as the result of an attempt by Clarke to hold up Anna Wilson's place on Ninth street early today. Clarke entered the Wilson place and at the point of a revolver commanded the inmates to hold up their hands. At the same moment, he snatched a diamond necklace from the neck of the Wilson woman and escaped into the street. Betsy Smith followed him. Clarke fired a shot into her shoulder, inflicting a dangerous wound. Her screams brought Smith to the scene. Clarke at once began shooting at the officer, firing two bullets into his body. Smith raised himself to a sitting posture and fired twice at Clarke, one bullet taking effect in his leg. Clarke escaped. A squad of officers from the police station, two blocks distant, began a search for Clarke. He was found on the Douglas street bridge by Detectives Devereez and Heitfeldt. Clark opened fire, one bullet striking Devereez in the stomach and mortally wounding him. Heitfeldt then shot Clarke twice. At the hospital Clarke said he came from Denver three days ago.

Dixon stated that a young man had come to his house last evening on the pretext of a real-estate deal and had endeavored to learn from Mrs. Dixon how the talesmen stood upon the Ruef bribery case. He declared the incident had made no impression on his mind and he was passed, temporarily, to fill the first place in the jury box.

CONFLAGRATION NEAR EVERETT

Two Men Burn to Death and Others Injured

Everett, Wash. Jan. 14—A fire caused by the explosion of a gasoline stove this morning cost the lives of several guests in the Great Northern hotel, a small two story building at Delata, a suburb of Everett. The dead are: J. A. L. Burnett, a telegraph operator in the office of the superintendent of the Great Northern and F. Leroux, a mill employe.

The injured are: Nora Smith, a domestic, who may die. Mrs. Findlan, owner of the hotel and Frank Cockburn, a freight yard workman.

The men were burned while sleeping on the second floor and perished while trying to make their way down the narrow stairs. Two other men escaped from the second floor by jumping from the windows. The loss is $8000.

BEST METHODS FOR PROTECTION OF SALMON

Communication from Rosenberg and Lorntsen of Fishermen's Union in Reply to Hatchery Superintendent on Matter of Rearing Ponds at Mouth of Columbia River

Astoria, Oregon, January 13, 1909.

Editor Budget: -Returning from a brief visit to Puget Sound, my attention was called by Secretary Lorntsen of the Fishermen's union, to an article in the Budget of January 6, 1909, by Nic Hansen, superintendent of the Chinook Fish Hatchery, in which article Mr. Hansen attacks the minority report made by the Washington special fishery commission.

In that report special stress is laid upon the necessity of allowing salmon to spawn above head of tide, which they now cannot do in the Columbia. The fish-wheels, located above head of tide water do not permit salmon to ascend to their natura spawning grounds. Mr. Hansen contends that all that is necessary to preserve our salmon, is to have rearing pounds at the mouth of the river, feed the salmon about eight months in these ponds and then let them go at the mouth of the Columbia, where they are immediately in salt water.

Mr. Hansen also charges Mr. Lorntsen and myself with misleading the people of Oregon and Washington by our claiming that the fish-wheels must go if the salmon is to be preserved, also by claiming that the small salmon now caught by the small meshes of fish-traps, fish-wheels and seines are young salmon, which if not caught will return to the ocean and become in time large salmon.

That against Mr. Hansen's theory of arising fish at the mouth of the river and then dumping them directly into salt water, the experience and investigation tests of fish culturists of Europe and America are absolutely opposed, evidently does not phase the redoubtable superintendent of the Chinook hatchery.

On his side he has Messers. McGowan, Seufort and Warren, owners of fish-wheels who know how to use their wealth and influence to reward faithful adherents of the fishwheel interests and how to punish officials who dare to tell the truth about the destructiveness of fishing above head of tide in the narrows of the Columbia river. Of course, we do not particularly blame Mr. Hansen of breaking a lance for the fish-wheels. He is in goodly company. The fishwheel owners have looked after that.

Mr. Bowers, chief of the United States bureau of fisheries using his position and his western agents to defend the fish-wheels. Fish Commissioner Riseland of Washington is friendly to the wheels, and because Fish Commissioner Van Dusen of Oregon dared to tell the truth about the destruction the wheels wrought to our salmon, the wheel-owners had him discharged from office and a man appointed who now makes statements defending the wheels. What wonder then that an humble superintendent of a small hatchery should follow the example of his superiors who have taken to heart the old saying:

"And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift may follow wning."

Though a defender of the fish-wheel system of fishing, Mr. Bowers does not stultify himself by subscribing to the rearing pond theory. In a letter to the Pacific Fishermen published Oct. 1907, commenting on an article by Senator McGowan, Mr. Bowers says:

"It raises the old question of fry versus fingerlings, which has engaged the attention [illegible] fish culturists for generations."

"The discussion [illegible] not productive of any good, unless conducted on board lines and considered from every point of view, and for a number of years, the subject has been tabooed at the meetings of the American Fisheries Society, which includes in its membership practically all of the active fish culturists of the country."

Professor Cloudsley Rutter, for many years conducted close investigations of the habits of our salmon on the Sacramento river, and says:

"Fry should be liberated just as soon [illegible] the yolk sac [illegible] absorbed, which is usually at a time when they may take advantage of the freshets and muddy water. Fry should not be held in the hatchery simply for the purpose of allowing them to grow before liberation, because the only food that can be provided there [illegible] unnatural * * * they are also rendered most subject to gastric parasites and are also liable to precocious generative development in the case of males."

Everyone admits that for patient scientific research the Germans are hard to beat.

Director Haack (circular No 1, 1880 of the Deutsche Fisherie Verein, Berlin, February 12, 1880) says:

"As a general rule I consider it best to place the young fish in open waters immediately after the umbilical has disappeared; better still, shortly before it disappears. My reason for this is simply this: that in a large piscicultural establishment, it is utterly impossible to feed and raise the young fish in accordance with the dictates of nature. By giving artificial food, either ground brains, chopped meat, liver, blood, etc., the fish are easily tamed. They forget—or rather, they never learn—to seize their food, which naturally consists of living animals."

Further on Haack says: "We shall most decidedly reach far more satisfactory results if annually at a trifling expense we place several millions of young, strong and healthy salmonoids (but only such) in open waters, immediately after the umbilical bag has disappeared, and then let these little fish fight their own battle for existence. Success will and must crown such effort."

Herr H. Keller of the German fishery association on page 113, in the 1886 bulletin of the United States fish commission, says, in speaking about salmon conditions in the German rivers: "All efforts to regain our former abundance of fish will not reach the object in view until the migratory fish again have free access to their spawning places, and until they everywhere enjoy full protection during the spawinng season."

Further on, referring to the abundance of salmon in the Rhine during the middle ages, when it was necessary to protect the apprentices and servants at Cologne and Mayence by an official decrée against being compelled to eat Rhine salmon during the season every day, both for dinner and supper, Mr. Keller says:

"In those times the head waters of the tributaries of the Rhine, which possess an abundance of excellent spawning places, were not yet cut off by weirs." A weir is a wooden fish trap, located as the fish-wheels are, above head of tide. Since this was written, Germany has proceeded to abolish these weirs in narrow waters.

Authority after authority could be quoted insisting that salmon be hatched and spawned near their natural spawning grounds. All insist that the salmon from infancy should be permitted to grow strong enough in overcoming the lesser dangers in the rivers, to overcome the greator dangers in the ocean. Where the water is always clear and where the small salmon cannot, as they do in the rivers, escape from their enemies by darting under a pebble or by swiming onto the shallow banks.

As to the small salmon caught in the wheels and traps being all stunt male Chinooks who never return to the ocean, we would like to recall Mr. Hansen's memory to a report which the fishery commitee of the Oregon legislature made in 1889. That year it was commonly reported the trapmen and wheelmen had assessed themselve $400 for each trap and wheel and were supposed to be using this vast sum where it would do most good for the traps and wheels.

It is still a standing joke among old time fishermen how Mr. Hanthorn proved to this committee that the small sized salmon were all male salmon. Before the committee came to the cannery to examine these small salmon, Mr Hanthorn promised to several of his employes a certain sum of money if they, when the committee looked at the salmon, would only pick out small male Chinooks. After one of the employes had picked out several small male Chinooks and they had been cut open to prove their sex, another employe was called so as to make the appearance of a fair test.

And this talk of our small Chinook salmon being all stunt male salmon [illegible] based in the main upon evidence of like nature.

The wheels, traps and seines use a mesh of three inches stretch measure and catch small salmon; therefore, a theory [illegible] needed to defend this practice.

Rochefoucauld very wisely said: "Our philosophy [illegible] a complement of our practices."

As to the claim that no full grown Chinook salmon ever return to the ocean once they have spawned, we wish to say that many fishermen have caught salmon that had spawned. It [illegible] true that many salmon that have spawned at our headwaters die but not all salmon die.

In support of this we quote from Mr Loren W. Green (page 314, bulletin United States bureau of fisheries for 1886).

"Salmon in the McCloud river are now very numerous, being more abundant here probably than at other points in the river, on account of the two runs meeting. There is now a very nice run here, fresh from the ocean. The salmon of the large run which went up the river some time ago are now falling back in an exhausted condition, having deposited their spawn near the headwaters. Many of them are floating back dead and a great many more are in a dying condition. In nearly every case their tails are worn threadbare, their eyes sunk deep in their heads, and their bodies covered with a thick coat of fungus. The fish of the up-going run, which [illegible] now here, are fresh, bright, round, and fat; their eyes are bright and rounded out; and they are much above the average in size."

Fishing Inspector Thomas Mowat, writing from New Westminister, B. C., September 6th, 1890, to Judge James G. Swan, says:

"I have much pleasure in informing you that I have proof without doubt that the Oncorhynchus, or Pacific salmon, do in many cases return to fresh water annually, for the purpose of reproducing their species. I have proof of this in the case of the quinnat (Oncorhynchus chouicha) and sockeye (Ounerka), and I am confident from observations that I have made, that the cohoes (Oncorhynchus kisutch,) do return in larger numbers than those first mentioned.

"During the seasons of 1884-'85-'86, I made use of the leather, or harness maker's punch, to mark the quinnat salmon after they had been partially stripped of their eggs and were obliged to be returned to the pens. The marking was done by punching one or more holes through the adipose dorsal fin, and then passing a piece of colored cloth or twine through the hole, so as to distinquish them from the fish that had not been handled. Sometimes we cut a portion, or the whole, of this fin off, and these fish were returned to the water after we had finished stripping them.

"Two successive years later a few of the fish so marked passed through our hands and were recognized, and I learned that some had been taken by the netters. It must be understood that the strings were not left on the fish. The fin was found to be withered somewhat, with the hole partially grown up.

"Since the season of 1887 we have been operating on the sockey and as I have already described, some of these were marked in similar manner; but owing to having so many in the pens we had to keep different marks on them so that the tails of some were bent, or doubled up, and a V shaped piece taken out. Two of the fish marked in this manner were taken by the netters this season, and sent to me. One so marked was shown to the editor of "The Columbian," at my office, and hence the report.

"My contention has always been that at least four species of our salmon return to the rivers to reproduce. The fourth, including those alluded to, is the steelhead, of which none die, except by accident. My opinion is that 75 per cent of the quainnt salmon survive that ascend from 75 to 100 miles inland. Those that ascend from 100 to 1000 miles (or reach the summit of the Rocky Mountains) are reduced from various causes down to from five to 25 per cent. The per cent, of sockeyes that survive is sligthly under that of the quinnat, while that of the cohoes is very large, as they do not ascend so far inland, and have a better chance to return. The qualla and hump-backs die in large numbers as they are [illegible] pugnacious, spawn in shallow water, and are more liable to disease.

"I quite agree with you [illegible] to the views held in reference to the salmon returning. They no doubt descend very rapidly, and in either in the deep water in the center of the streams or along the shores, where they are less apt to come in contact with nets. I have, on several occasions, noticed the spent sockeye salmon swiming down this river, (the Fraser) towards the gulf, and I have been informed by the netters that they have taken them: but of course, there [illegible] not the same chance of capturing them on their return to the ocean."

The voters of Oregon by a decisive majority of 26000 have decreed that the fishwheels must go. The supreme court of the United States will listen to arguments in the Christiansen case on the 18th inst., and no doubt quickly render a decision. Then the injunction by which the Oregon fish commissioner is forbidden to interfere with the operation of fishwheels will be annulled and from 10,000 to 20,000 salmon will yearly be permitted to reach our up-river hatcheries and spawning grounds.

Then no doubt Mr. Hansen will be transferred to the Upper Columbia superintend a hatchery there, inste of making freak expermits in his C nook ponds.

METHODS OF THE CHINESE

Why a Street, Newly Paved, Was Torn Up

M. Monnier, the French Asiatic traveler, vouched for the truth of the following story of how his friend, Hop Sing, a man of means and refinement, was on one occasion sorely victimized. Hop Sing lived in the street of the roasted corn, as unsavory and as ill paved a street as any in all Pekin. The local mandarin was an intimate friend of his, and Hop Sing availed himself of this friendship to press the mandarin to have the street repaved. Certainly, at once. The men would be at work on it before Hop Sing could get back home. A week passed, then another visit, and so on until, in despair, Hop Sing determined to have the street repaired at his own expense. The work was satisfactorily completed.

The surprise of Hop Sing was only equaled by his indignation when on awakening one morning he found a gang of coolies upheaving the newly flagged street. His surprise grew when he heard from the mandarin's own lips that the men were there at his orders.

"You see, my dear friend," said the mandarin, "I am expecting the head inspector around here in a few days. Now, if he were to see the beautiful pavement you have laid down in your street he would come to the conclusion that there was money about, and he would assuredly bleed every vein in my body. This would mean my ruin. Don't you see why your pavement really must come up? It cost me one fortune to secure my post. I don't want to spend another in keeping it."

Forestalled.

"You remind me so of a dear, good friend I used to know—same features, same manner and a similar voice.

"Well, I am not like him in one particular."

"What's that?"

"I have no money to lend."

JUDGE CRANE.

THE trial of the Hains brothers at Flushing, N. Y., for the slaying of William E. Annis at the Bayside Yacht club last summer is a proceeding that naturally excites more than local interest on account of the prominence of the families concerned and the sensational character of the tragedy. Military, society and literary circles are especially absorbed in the outcome of the trial, for the name of Hains has been an honored one in the army and a noted one in literature, while in leading social circles in Washington, Boston and New York the families now enjoying so much undesirable publicity were formerly conspicuous.

The distinction of presiding at this trial—one bound to become celebrated in legal annals—belongs to one of the younger judges of the supreme bench of the state of New York, Frederick E. Crane of the borough of Brooklyn. On the opening morning of the trial when the court attendants rapped for order the standing audience saw Judge Crane advance in his black robe, very fair in complexion, clean shaven, youthful looking and indicating by every action that he was brimful of energy. The lawyers had already learned that he did not purpose tolerating any delay that could possibly be avoided. He had informed them that he would hold night sessions, and from the outset he expedited the preliminaries.

Judge Crane is a graduate of the Adelphia academy and the Columbia Law school and before elevation to the bench was counsel in many noted civil and criminal suits.

Joseph Pulitzer, who is accused by President Roosevelt of libeling the United States government through publications in his newspaper, the New York World, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his connection with the World only a few weeks ago. As the president's recent special message to congress was devoted chiefly to the alleged offenses of the World in connection with the charges of scandal in the negotiations associated with the purchase of the Panama canal, the personality of Mr. Pulitzer is thrust into the foreground. It is an unusual thing for a private citizen to be mentioned specifically and singled out for criticism and denunciation as the proprietor of the World was in this message. Mr. Roosevelt's action was based on his belief that the circumstances of this case justified a departure from precedents.

Mr. Pulitzer was born in Budapest, Hungary, in 1847 and, coming to this country in 1864, entered the army and served until the end of the civil war in a cavalry regiment. Taking up his residence in St. Louis at the close of the war, he joined the Westliche Post, German, as reporter, rising to the managing editorship. In 1878 he bought the St. Louis Dispatch for a price said to have been $500, "and expensive at that." He united it with the St. Louis Post, and by application of his ideas he turned the Post-Dispatch into one of the best paying and strongest papers in Missouri. In 1883 he bought the New York World and duplicated his Post-Dispatch success. He served in the Missouri legislature and in 1885 was elected to congress from a New York district, but resigned after a few months' service.

JOSEPH PULITZER.

Frederick Kohler, chief of police of the city of Cleveland, O., is the best chief of police in America, in the opinion of President Roosevelt. That crime in the cities can be reduced to a minimum, if not actually checked, by the simple observance of the Golden Rule Chief Kohler thinks he has proved. A year's trial of this policy in dealing with crime and criminals in Cleveland has convinced him of it, and now other cities are preparing to follow the example of Cleveland in instituting the Golden Rule policy. It is only a question of time, its advocates say, until it will be adopted everywhere throughout the United States. Chief Kohler was the first man to employ the Golden Rule in treating with crime, so to him belongs the credit of whatever success it has attained. The Golden Rule policy was put into effect a year ago and statistics for the first nine months, which have just been compiled, prove it to be an unqualified success.

The Earl of Warwick, who is on a visit to this country and who has been talking over with President Roosevelt the subject of game in Africa, has made a number of hunting trips to the section the president expects to visit. He prophesies that Mr Roosevelt will have no end of sport and would not be surprised if he bagged an elephant, though the earl himself has not been fortunate enough to get one. The British nobleman has been brought to notice in this country more on his wife's account than his own. The Countess of Warwick, who has been in turn brilliant society leader, philanthropist and Socialist advocate, visited this country not long since for the especial purpose, it was said, of studying the condition of the Socialist movement here. It was reported at one time that the earl had a leaning toward socialism, too, but his utterances during his American visit do not bear out such a view. Indeed, he intimated that his wife was like a good many women, somewhat changeable in her ideas, and therefore he did not like to define her position on economic questions because it might have shifted a little by the time of his return.

EARL OF WARWICK.

The earl and his accomplished wife expect to entertain President Roosevelt at Warwick castle during his stay in England, and the earl has undertaken the commission of having a pair of hunting boots built in London for Mr. Roosevelt specially suitable for service in the African jungles.

Douglas Robinson, President Roosevelt's brother-in-law, whose name figures in the Panama canal controversy, has made specific denial that he had anything to do with the transactions regarding the sale of the canal property to the United States. He is connected with banking and railway enterprises in New York and is at present coreceiver with Adrian H. Joline of the Metropolitan Street Railway company. He is a brother of the present Mrs. Roosevelt and is reputed a man of considerable wealth.

DOUGLAS ROBINSON

Much general interest attaches to the investigation of methods of finance in Wall street which is to be made by a commission recently appointed by Governor Hughes of New York. The commission is charged to report on any changes are desirable in the laws bearing upon speculation in securities and commodities or relating to the protection of investors. At the head of the commission is the noted author and editor Horace White.

Mr. White was born in Colebrook, N. H., Aug. 10, 1834, and was graduated from Beloit college, Wisconsin, in 1853. He early went into newspaper work, becoming city editor of the Chicago Evening Journal in 1854 and Chicago agent of the New York Associated Press in 1855.

In 1857 Mr. White joined the Chicago Tribune in a position which brought him frequently into relations with Abraham Lincoln. He reported the entire series of Lincoln and Douglas debates for the Tribune and in 1860 was secretary of the Illinois Republican state committee during the presidential campaign. During the civil war he spent four years in Washington and with others formed the first syndicate of newspapers in this country for the reception of a joint news service from the front. From 1865 to 1874 he was [illegible] editor of the Chicago Tribune, resigning because of ill health. He joined the New York Evening Post on its reorganization by Mr. Villard in 1881. He has for years been known as one of the greatest financial authorities in the United States and is the author of a half dozen scholarly works

DO YOU KNOW
The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?
A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.
We will gladly assist you in the preparation of an advertising and put your best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

The minister who recently doubled the attendance at his church by display advertising in the newspapers evidently believes, with Wesley, that Satan shouldn't be given a monopoly of the best means for reaching the heart of the busy world. But the question has its practical side. People will consult the papers to find out what is going on around them, and the church that is willing to challenge criticism by advertising may be supposed to offer something worth while.

The record of the California belle who discounts Dr. Osler and remains a coquette at sixty-five was "beaten to a frazzle" by the celebrated French beauty, Ninon de L'Enclos. In her octogenarian days Ninon was asked at what age coquetry ceased to be a passion with women. "Really, you must ask some one older than I," was the naive answer.

The government expects to put $13,000,000 in collecting and printing the next census. If we were in dead earnest about retrenching, we would all chip in the necessary data and save the treasury about $10,000,000 of that money.

Cuban Liberals flaunt a rooster as their party emblem, which is all right, but Cuba Libre's bird should bear in mind that certain live things this side of Florida keys also wear spurs.

Theodore was probably taking a day off when Roosevelt signed that contract specifying that his contributions to the Outlook would be "limited as to length."

As to fourth class postmasters, America is too easily an all around winner to have a fourth class at anything.

Managers of Poe centennial celebrations will do something unique if they bring out an American man or woman who enjoyed even a common school education and never recited "The Raven" or "The Bells."

After the kaiser and Tom Johnson have confessed to going broke on the eve of the holidays the average man will have courage to put up a stronger bluff than ever.

Of course Germany favors our ultimatum that China's door remain open, because therein lies the kaiser's only chance now to get away from home occasionally.

It is easier to find "a needle in a haystack" than an eligible in Uncle Sam's bunch who didn't know that it was leap year until too late.

John Milton undoubtedly was somebody in the era following 1608, but he made the mistake of his life by failing to launch football or invent golf.

It may comfort the kaiser during his convalescence to reflect that all the world knows there are "gags" which do not come off by the [illegible].

Boom in demand for recipes for getting freckled was noted the instant somebody announced that kissing removes freckles.

DOUBLE BARRELED TORPEDO

One of our naval commanders has invented a torpedo which may do more mischief to an enemy's battle ship than one of those "all big gun" Dreadnoughts we are launching. This new torpedo shoots twice, so to speak —that is, it makes two holes instead of one in the target. Theoretically the old torpedo would rip a hole in the side of a warship and let in water enough to sink her. As a rule, however, torpedoed ships have kept afloat until the repair shop made them as good as ever.

The shell of a big gun will do more damage to a warship than any torpedo, provided it explodes inside the vessel, say in the engine room or magazine. But a shell may pass through a vessel, leaving only two small holes and a few wrecked things in its wake. The torpedo which becomes the exclusive property of the United States because an officer in service devised it, will smash a big hole in the armor where it strikes and at the same time project a shell carrying a fuse timed to explode it at any desired distance inside. Unfortunately this government cannot monopolize the genius of the world, and if war comes to us the enemy may have some contrivance that will sink a battleship as effectually as our double acting torpedo.

In the old world the pessimist has been forced to swallow disappointment throughout 1908. England was at one time believed to be facing an irruption of socialism, but the ministry sidestepped the crisis by an old age pension. In Persia the year opened with a clash between the shah and parliament. After some "shooting up" on both sides the masses sustained the shah, who promised to be good.

What appeared to be a formidable revolution in Portugal led to the assassination of the king and crown prince in February, but an appeal to the people found the nation zealous in support of the old regime. A real rebellion placed the pretender, Mulai Hafid, on the throne of Morocco. Having gained his prestige as a fanatic and leader of fanatics, it was supposed that the presence of European police must be ended or a "holy war" for the extermination of foreigners would ensue. But the usurping ruler promptly guaranteed all the rights claimed by outsiders.

When the Turkish constitution of 1876 was restored in July the act was believed to be a concession to reformers which would spur them to fourther aggression. The most important result was the loss to Turkey of the vassal Balkan states of Bulgaria and Roumelia and the nominally Turkish provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Whether Turkey will now be decent and the Balkans quiet are questions yet to be answered. Taking the world over, there have been many situations which would have provoked war had the so called fighting nations been ready for a scrap. That collision was avoided augurs well for peace, at least until some power feels strong enough to thrash one of its size.

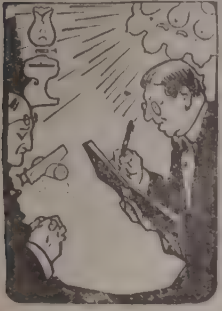
Judicious Advertising Pay

What Changed the Old Town's Name?



Mr. Brown of SLEEPYTOWN,
He wouldn't advertise;
So along came Mr. Strong
And took him by surprise.

Mr. S., as you may guess,
Was strictly up to date;
Knew the game and played the same
At early hours and late.

Strong is still in WAKEFULVILLE,
The merchant of the town;
He advertises and still surprises
Such chaps as Mr. Brown.

COMMISSION ISSUES ORDERS

Directing Improvements at All Railroad Stations

Olympia, Jan. 14—Railroad stations in Washington maintained by the Northern Pacific, Great Northern, the Harriman and other systems will be made to conform to modern standards of sanitation and comfort when a sweeping order of the railroad commission of the state is put in effect during the present month. In towns where there is electric power available the stations now illuminated by old-fashioned oil-burning lamps, as is the case in scores of instances, will be lighted by electric lights. In towns and villages where there is a fresh running water system the railroad companies will be forced to supply this service, and where sewers exits the sanitary features of the stations will be made to comply with modern sanitation standards.

Announcement of the expected order was made today by a member of the railroad commission who explained that it will be the first order resulting from two years' work of the commission which has to do with the general comfort, welfare and convenience of the traveling public. Dimly lighted stations where only a foul-smelling oil lamp furnishes the illuminant, will be made into well-lighted and wholesome places, where human beings can await the arrival of trains in comfort.

Of more importance members of the commission say, will be the effect of the new order requiring toilets to be connected with sewer systems in the smaller towns where there are sewer mains. Sanitation will be aimed at and the railroad companies will be compelled to clear up their stations and keep them clean.

It is explained further by members of the railroad commission that the rule citing the corporation to place their stations in modern condition will precede the exercise of the rate making power which is vested in the commission. The report of the commission, which has just been completed, will contain nearly 100 pages of findings that is, of decisions by the commission covering main questions as to rates on commodities within the state. These findings will form the basis of the exercises of rate-making powers when complaints are hereafter made, but before the rate-making power is exercised the railroad companies will be compelled to improve their stations throughout the state.

OBSERVANCE OF OREGON DAY

Program for Schools Arranged by State University

A suggested program for public schools and literary societies for Oregon Day, February 14, the 50th anniversary of the admission of Oregon into the union. The act admitting Oregon was passed February 12th and signed by the president Feb. 14, 1859. In as much as the 14th falls on Sunday this year, it is suggested that the exercises be held on Friday, Feb. 12th, and that the centenary of Lincoln's birth be commemorated in the same exercises.

This program is suggested by the university of Oregon and was prepared by the departments of history and education:

Song, "Oregon'

Reading Jefferson's Instructions to Lewis (for the exploration of the Columbia River.)

Declamation. Baylies' speech in Congress, justifying the expectation that Oregon would be settled by Americans.

Reading, Applegate's "A Day with the Cow Column."

Decalmation, Bayiles' Speech in Congress, justifying the expectaiton that Oregon would be settled by Americans.

Reading, Applegat's "A Day with the Cow Column."

Recitation, "Campfires o fthe Pioneers, "Simpson, 5th and 6th stanzas, "Pilgrims of the Plain" Joaquin Miller 3d stanza.

Reading, Act for the Admission of Oregon.

Oration, Abraham Lincoln, by a member of the school or some prominent citizen.

LABOR AGENCIES WIN VICTORY

Court Makes Ruling in Their Favor

Olympia, Jan. 14—Cities have no power to punish employment agents who deceive patrons, according to a decision of the state supreme court today in the case of the city of Spokane against A. M. Macho, an employment agent, who was fined under a city ordinance.

The court says the city has no power to enforce an ordinance against such agents which does not equally punish other business men for deceit, that criminal laws cannot be applied to one class and not to another.

In the Adams county case of the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company against Aaron Hollinghead and brothers the supreme court decided today that after judgment has been rendered and before execution issued a defendant cannot successfully set up an exemption claim to prevent money in bank being seized to pay the judgment.

The supreme court today, set aside the judgment recovered by Charles R. McCormick & Co against the Vancouver Lumber Company for damages for breach of contract to sell ties, and granted a new trial. The lower court gave plaintiffs judgment for $2,325.83 Plaintiffs agreed to pay cash at the Bank of California, at Portland, for the ties as soon as delivered to the ship. Owing to the earthquake and fire, the Bank of California, at San Francisco, was closed, and when the ties were ready for delivery plaintiffs offered to give a ten days sight draft. The supreme court says that if it is proved the plaintiffs were unable to pay cash as promised in the contract, they can't recover for breach.

The supreme court also affirmed judgement for $3,000 recovered by Isam Cook against Pittock-Leadbetter Lumber Company, of Vancouver, for loss of three fingers and part of his hand while working in the mill.

Government Vessels About Ready for Trip

Seattle, Jan. 14—Steamship Tremont, recently bought by the government for service between New York and Panama, went to Everett yesterday to load lumber and general cargo for New York, for which port she will leave about January 20. The remainder of the cargo will be picked up at various Sound ports. Capt. N. W. Mowbray, one of the government representatives who have been on the Pacific coast inspecting the vessel, will be a passenger on the ship when the vessel sails for the Atlantic, where he will take command of her. Capt T. W. Garlick will take the ship around to New York.

The Shawmut a sister ship of the Tremont, will take on sufficient coal to take her to New York without a stop She will get away about the end of the week. C. S. Hoyt, a mechanical engineer, who has also been one of the inspecting board here, will go on the vessel as the government's representative. The other two members of the board, Platt Stratton and Carroll Smith, the latter representing The Cramps shipbuilding Company of Philadelphia, have already departed for the east.

Capt. E. V. Roberts will take the Shawmut to the Atlantic Coast.

Word was received by Mrs. C. C. Chapman Monday announcing the death of her mother Mrs. O. T. Perkins at New York city. The Bungalow theatre has been closed for the past few days on account of the death but will open this evening and continue its performances.

Last evening as a party of little girls was coasting down Fourteenth street, their sled was run into by a large sled on which some boys were riding and Annie Ackerman was injured quite severely, one of her limbs being badly sprained.

The cold weather has been very hard on stock in this vicinity during the past few days. As one instance Carl Fisher of Svensen lost 17 pigs and 3 calves through their being frozen to death and other similar cases have been reported. This is one of the few instances in history of stock being frozen to death in this section of the country.

The United Wireless Company has established a station at Sacramento, Californ and is doing business from there with all coast cities as well as with vessels at sea and its commercial popularity has been pronounced from the start. P. Wesley Welch, son of John W. Welch of Astoria, is in charge of this office and stands high in the confidence of the company.

Neil Dow, son of C. S. Dow, county fruit inspector had a close call from being killed by a three-year-old bull a few days ago. As he was going thru the pasture to look after the stcok, he was given a chase and had it not been for a sharp embankment close by which he jumped, the bull would certainly have had him. Mr. Dow got out of the scrape without any serious injury, only a few bruises.

Weather Forecaster Beals gives little encouragment for the weather to moderate within the next three days at least so present conditions may be expected on his advice until Sunday. This morning the weather bureau thermometer registered 23 degrees, a few higher than is Wednesday, but more snow may be expected. On Clatsop plains the weather is reported to be much more moderate and with a touch of southerly wind and that the snow was melting.

The 1909 edition of The World Almanac and Encyclopedia is now ready and is being distributed to its regular subscribers and to news dealers everywhere. This edition is far the most complete yet issued. Every one of the 15,000 facts and figures it presents, whether about politics, commerce, weights, measures, secret societies, populations of cities, states, countries, sporting events, etc., is handily indexed so it may be turned to at a moment's notice. It is one of the few books that may be called a necessity and a luxury at one and the same time. Its 850 pages fairly bristle with facts that people want and ought to know.

Bids were opened Wednesday afternoon by the constructing quartermaster at Fort Stevens for the erection of four double sets of non-commission officers quarters, for one firemen's quarters and a gymnasium and bowling alley. Several bids were submitted and as the proposals were for construction, plumbing, heating, electric wiring and electric fixtures for each building separately, they are very complicated and the details are not yet obtainable. It is known, however, that the bid of E. Gustafson was lowest for the entire work. Erb & Patton of Salem bid $34,725 on the construction while Gustafson's bid for that portion of the work was $34,000. The only bids on the entire contract were submitted by E. Gustafson in the sum of $46,600, and by Ferguson & Houston in the sum of $50,007.

A law requiring express companies to exercise greater care in the handling of meat. An amendment, making fees for dairy inspector proportionate to the size of the herd inspected A law forcing dairymen to wash separators after each use and requiring separators to be kept in sanitary places. A law making the purchase, by creameries, of unfit cream, a penalty punishable by fine. A law providing an appropriation for the organization of cow testing associations and the employment of official testers and inspectors. This in brief is a summary of the laws suggested for enactment for the benefit of the dairy industry of the state, by the legislature by State Food and Dairy Commissioner J. W. Bailey, in his biennial report, which came out of the hands of the state printer last evening.

The lower Willamette river, from Linnton to the mouth of the Columbia is frozen over, the ice varying in thickness from one to two inches. It will be possible to walk over the river on the ice should the low temperature continue a few days longer. This report was brought to Portland yesterday afternoon by a party consisting of Captain O. W. Hosford Lloyd J. Wenworth anda Captain James W. Shaver, who went from there to the mouth of the Willamette and across the Columbia river on the powerful towboat G. K. Wentworth to investigate conditions. The Wentworth had to break a channel through the ice all the way after passing Linnton. She returned without having been damaged by the sharp ice however. "A few days of cold weather will block the lower Willamette with solid ice strong enough to carry a person with safety," said Captain Hosford, "We found ice from one to two inches thick extending clear across the river below Linnton and it will rapidly get thicker afer the flow of the current has been checked by the first thin sheet. The river flows more slowly below Linnton than in the harbor, for instance, but I am of the opinion that it will freeze solid here unless there be an early rise in the temperature."

MARINE INTELLIGENCE

The oil tank steamer Rosecrans arrived in this morning from California with a cargo of fuel oil.

Orders were given to the British steamship Gymeric by the pilot schooner to proceed to Comax for fuel coal before coming here to load lumber for the Orient.

The steamer Eureka arrive down the river Wednesday evening after having had a hard time getting through the ice as was evidenced by her hull being pretty badly cut up by the ice. She reported that the ice a some places to be thick and packed hard and it was evidently freezing fast in the vicinity of Walker's island.

The steamer Nome City, which left up the river on Tuesday evening after having been sheathed, is now tied up at the wharf at Pillar Rock with a line fast in her propeller. The sheathing was torn off by the ice and her planking quite badly scratched.

The steamer Breakerwater left out this afternoon for Coos bay with freight and passengers. It was necessary for her to force herself through the ice nearly all the way down the river.

The steamer Harold Dollar arrived in this morning to load lumber at the mill of the Hamomnd Lumber Company.

After the oil tank steamer Rosecrans was on her way up the river this mroning Pilot Patterson sent a wireless message back there was so much ice in the river that it would not be safe for a wooden vessel to attempt to go up.

ANOTHER VESSEL WRECKED ON NORTH BEACH

CREW SAVED IN OWN BOATS

But Ship and Cargo will be a Total Loss

The treacherous shore of the Washington coast has taken another vessel and from all accounts she will be a total wreck with her cargo but her officers and crew have been saved. She is the French bark Alice, well known at this port from frequent visits, and was bound from London with a cargo of cement via Hobart for the Columbia river and had been making a fair passage in command of Captain Aubert. Few of the details of the wreck are obtainable but she went ashore near Ocean Park at five o'clock this morning, during the heavy southwest gale, an according to an account of the wreck by the Budget correspondent at Nahcotta the entire crew of 24 men all came ashore in safey in their own boats but that there was every indication that she was beginning to break up. The Alice was consigned to Balfour, Guthrie & Co. and was under charter to load lumber at the mill of the Hammond Lumber Company for the Orient. It is understood that the vessel and her cargo are fully insured as is customry with French owners. Edward M. Cherry, Lloyds agent, will be in communication with the captain of the vessel by this evening and when he learns more particulars he will decide as to the disposition of the crew and what shall be done with the ship.

Part of the town of Biggs, is four feet under water. Reports from the San Joaquin valley of the threatened flood are reassuring. The high water at Bakersfield reached its crest during the night and is now subsiding. Portions of Visllia and Protreville are flooded, many people at the later place were forced to leave their homes. In the Santa Clara valley here was practically no damage and the rain was of great benefit to fruit growers and farmers. The melting snow from the mountains is one of the chief causes of the rise in the rivers of the state, warm weather having prevailed for several days.

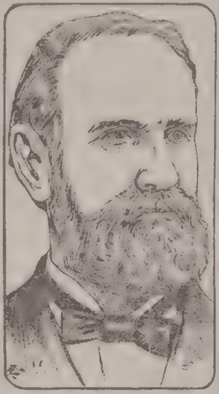
BIG FRESHETS ARE EXPECTED

Columbia and Willamette Rivers Will Rise Rapidly

Portland, Jan. 15 Edward A. Beals, district forecaster, has issued the following bulletin: "The Willamette and Columbia rivers will both rise rapidly during the next few days and precautionary measures should be taken to move property quickly if necessary.

Both rivers are yet at a low stage and possible it is not to forecast the height of the flood crest for several days."



SECRETARY WILSON.

James Wilson of Iowa, secretary of agriculture, enjoys the distinction of having served a longer continuous term in the cabinet than any other man in the history of the United States. He was appointed by President McKinley in 1897 and reappointed by President Roosevelt in 1901.

MORE DAMAGE THREATENED

Several Trains on O. R. & N. Stalled

Portland, Jan. 15—The severe sleet storm has blocked the O. R. & N. in many places and trains are completely tied up. A snowslide near Oneonta last night buried four coachs of train No. 6, and ditched the engine. Several trains are stalled at Hood River and The Dalles. The danger of railroads now lies in washtouts and snow slides, which may follow the rapidly melting snow. The O. R. & N., the Southern Pacific and Northern Pacific have crews along the right of way doing every thing possible to faciliate the expeditious moving of trains. Probably traffic to and from California points will be interrupted on account of floods in California and probably washouts along the Southern Pacific tracks.

KILLED WHILE READING BIBLE

Insane Man Murders Woman Without Cause

Salt Lake, Jan. 15 While reading the bible Matilda Ecklund, 47 years old living outside the city limits of Sandy, was shot and killed last night by Axel Carlson who fired through the window. He then went to a saloon and after taking a few drinks told of the deed. In a rambling statement he said he was wronged by the railroad "Hounded by union men" until some one had to die. He is believed to be insane.

CENTRAL PACIFIC TRAINS CUT OFF

On Account of Bridges Being Washed out

San Francisco, Jan. 15—Owing to the bridges of the Southern Pacific along the American River being washed out by floods there will be no train to or from the east for several days over the Central Pacific.

Trains to Oregon points and the roads in Nevada blocked by bad washouts.

HAT MAKERS START STRIKE

Refusal to Use Union Label th Cause

Newark, N. J., Jan. 15 Four thousand workers in hat factories in Orange struck this morning, when they were notified by their employers that no more union labels will be permitted in hats produced in the Orange factories. The entire hat manufacturing industry of the country may be affected.

WILL BUILD TWO RAILROADS

Contracts are to be Let this Spring

Seattle, Jan. 15—Contracts for the construction of two [illegible] lines of railroad in Eastern Washington will be let during the late spring or early summer involving an expenditure of approximately $6,000,000; At least this is the belief of many of the best informed railroad contractors in the Pacific northwest who have made Seattle their headquarters during the past thirty days.

There appears to be every evidence that the North Cost Railroad will let contracts for construction of a large part of its line from Kennewick north and east towards Spokane, while at the same time forging westward towards Cowlitz Pass, along the route which the North Coast officials publicly declared two years ago to be the line of that road into Western Washington.

Robert E. Strahorn, of Spokane, president of the North Coast Railway Company, has, it is asid, requested of Pacific Coast railroad contractors infrmation as to the number of men that may be obtained for grading work during the coming summer and the information is given out that the North Coast will spend a big sum of money during the coming summer.

The Kennewick & Northern Railroad owned by Hill interests, it is stated on reliable authority will be constructed during the present year. Northern Pacific officials have been supplied with full data to the route of the road, its maximum grade, and, in a general way, the territory to be tapped.

It is stated that the surveys of the Kennewick & Northern, which have been practically completed show a maximum grade of 6 per cent from the Columbia River basis to the grain fields of the Big Bend country.

Railroad traffic men assert positively that if the Kennewick Northern is built into the Big Bend, as is now believed, the Hill interests will be able to handle at a minimum of cost an annual traffic of between 7,000,000 and 10,000,000 bushels of wheat to the coast. It is well understood that the Kennewick & Northern is simply to be an extension of the Spokane, Portland Seattle Railroad otherwise known as the North Bank road.

The surveys of the Kennewick Northern have been extended up the west bank of the Columbia River from Kennewick through Richland and the Hanford district and thence north and east into the Big Bend country, including Lincoln and Douglas counties.

The annual wheat crop of the Big Bend district is ordinarily not less than 7,000,000 bushels, much of which is now hauled to Spokane and there delivered to the O.R.N., Harriman road, or the Great Northern,and taken thence to the Columbia River or to Puget Sound. Well informed railroad men believe that James J. Hill has determined to annex for all time the rich wheat traffic of the Big Bend district and that this is the compelling motive in his desire to complete the Kennewick & Northern during the present year.

No award of the contract for the Grays Harbor line of the Oregon & Washington Railroad Co. a Harriman corporation has yet been made althou the firm of Caughren Smith Winter & Co. was the low bidder.

MANUALS FOR THE MARINERS

Large Number Received at Hydrographic Office

John McNulty, nautical expert in charge of the hydrographic office, received from the department yesterday a large number of pocket manuals telling all about the location of the life-saving stations in the United States and other data which will be of interest to mariners. A long as they last these will be distributed among the deep-water shippers in port. The manuals also tell what as long as they last these will be distributed among he deep-water shippers in port. The manuals also tell what should be done in case of a wreck near any of the stations in order to attract attention and obtain assistance. The books are nicely bound in imitation leather. He has also received a consignment of the tables from the Canadian government which will be distributed among those who apply for them. A big assortment of bottle-papers came from Washington in the last mail, supplying mariners who are desirous of testing the velocity of ocean currents or of making new discoveries along this line.

BRINGS SUIT FOR DAMAGES

Seattle Man Asks for Large Sum

Seattle, Jan 15 Jewell E. Williams today filed suit against Fred H. and Eli Peterson for $50,000 for alienating the affections of his wife Williams married the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peterson, according to the complaint, May 5, 1907 and on May 21, her parents offered her $50,000 two automobiles and a trip to Europe if she would leave him. He says he was criticised because he had been brought upon a farm and was compelled to work for a living. Williams says he and his wife went to Indianapolis, Ind., to live and the Petersons sent her transportation to California to meet her mother. She made the trip and he alleges that her parents persuaded her to leave him.

Pure Iron at Last.

Chemically pure iron has never been obtained until very recently. It has been found almost impossible to remove the last traces of impurities, especially of sulphur. But a German chemist Dr. H. Kreusler, has finally by a long series of ingenious processes, partly chemical and partly electrical, succeeded in isolating the pure metal, the properties of which he reports to differ greatly from those of the impure iron that we know. Iron prepared by Kreusler's process resembles platinum.—New York Herald.

SCHOOL FOR CONSULS

George Washington University's New Move Deemed Big Boon.

TRAINS MEN FOR SERVICE.

National Business League of America Indorses College For Education of Young Diplomats—Plans on Foot For Their Benefit—Pension System For Old Age.

Unusual efforts are to be made during the next few weeks to place before the public the great need of the extension of American commerce abroad in foreign lands by means of more uniformly well trained consuls. The National Business League of America has written a strong indorsement of the effort of the George Washington university of Washington to develop a great consular training school in connection with its new College of Political Sciences and will send this indorsement out broadcast.

It is the intention to create in the public mind the great necessity for a new law which will give the permanency of statute to reform regulations inaugurated by President Roosevelt and Secretary Root which aim at the divorcing of consular appointments and politics and placing the appointments on the same basis as in the army and navy.

With this idea in view representative business men of the country have approved of the establishment of the consular training school, where any ambitious young man may fit himself for the important duties of a consular office and where he may look forward to a career of service without fear that the next change in political administration will cause his recall.

In connection with the indorsement of the National Business League of America there will also be issued two pamphlets written by men familiar with the needs of a consular training, says a Washington special dispatch to the Chicago Herald. One is from the pen of Richard D. Harlan, D. D., LL. D., special representative of the George Washington university movement, and the other by John Ball Osborne, chief of the bureau of trade relations, which is reprinted from the North American Review with additional notes.

In its letter of indorsement the National Business league says that the extension of American commerce abroad and the increase of the nation's influence in foreign lands are matters which must interest every public spirited citizen. It points out that more uniformly trained consuls would secure this boon and that the proposed new law and the establishment of a special consular training school would supplement each other. The National Business league's letter reads as follows:

> The league desires most impartially to commend all of these educational projects to the generous financial support of the business men of the country. Only in this way can we develop that class of trained men mentioned by Secretary Root from which the state department can draw for its appointments to the foreign service in order that it may maintain the high standards that have at last been created for the consular service.
> But in order to co-operate with the universities in their efforts to provide a special education for the new consular service career opened up by the reform regulations the great commercial organizations and influential business men throughout the land must now stir themselves to united action in favor of the immediate [illegible] by congress of a proper law, which, as Dr. Harlan well puts it, "will give the permanency of the statute to the regulations which now merely rest upon an executive order."

Dr. Harlan in his pamphlet reprints letters of commendation from Secretary Elihu Root in answer to a pointed inquiry from a special group of New York importers, who ask, "What guarantee would the business interests of the country have that the best graduates of such schools would actually get the new appointments in the consular service?" Mr. Root's reply was so eminently satisfactory that they have since all subscribed to the sustentation fund of the university.

Secretary Root declared he would raise the standards of admission to the consular service 100 per cent if the means were at hand for preparing enough men to attain those standards. Among the new plans on foot are higher salaries for the upper ranks of consulates, a pension system to care for old age after the best years of the consul officers have been given over to the service.

Making Tramps Work.

A state farm for tramps is proposed by Joseph C. Baldwin, Jr., of the New York state board of charities, and he intends to place the matter before the [illegible]. His plan is to have tramps [illegible] work [illegible] self supporting. Baldwin believes tramps will eventually leave the state rather than work. The basic idea is sound, whatever is to be said for the state farm detail of the plan, says the Boston Advertiser. The only way to meet the tramp evil is by making the tramp work even if he is detained but twelve hours. It is a problem in Massachusetts quite as much as in New York.

Coloring Whole Trees.

There has been invented by a Norwegian [illegible] a process of [illegible] colored wood. [illegible] of green trees are colored [illegible] pressed out of the [illegible] and the dye [illegible]. It is claimed that wood treated by this process is much more durable than ordinary wood and will not warp.

HOW SHE WON SUCCESS ON THE STAGE.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

Heloise Garnier was playing with a Parisian dramatic company at Geneva. Mlle. Garnier was by no means the leading woman. Indeed, her part was lady's maid, and all she had to say during the performance was, "I think the count very handsome." Nor was Mlle. Garnier pretty nor distinguished looking. Indeed, she was a very ordinary girl of twenty, though it must be confessed a very good one.

On the last night that the company performed at Geneva Mlle. Garnier was surprised at receiving a card on which was engraved the name "Caspar Pearson." There was also written in pencil, "I shall esteem it a favor if Mlle. Garnier will permit me to thank her in person for the pleasure she has given me."

Not only was mademoiselle, but the rest of the company, astonished. None of the principal actresses had received such a compliment. Mlle. Garnier at once became an important personage in their eyes. Caspar Pearson was admitted behind the scenes. He appeared to be a young man of respectability. He was deferential to the lady, to whom he had taken a fancy, and after the play his father, who was in the theater, sent mademoiselle an invitation to sup at the family home.

The father, the mother and the son united in praising the young actress' bearing on the stage, the well modulated tone in which she had spoken the few lines assigned her and agreed that she should have a better part, predicting a final triumph for her in her art. Pearson pere offered to give her an introduction to his brother in Paris, who, he said, had great influence with the press and theatrical managers. When she left the house for her hotel young Pearson accompanied her in the family carriage. He asked permission to call in the morning and see her to the train.

The next morning when Caspar Pearson drove up to the hotel the eyes of every member of the company were leveled at him. He brought a large bouquet of flowers, which he begged mademoiselle to accept, informing her at the same time that his father had telegraphed to "Uncle Gaston," in Paris, who would meet her at the station, take her home to dinner and consult as to a plan for her advancement in her profession.

When they reached Paris a gentleman advanced and asked which was Mlle. Garnier, and when she was pointed out to him took her to his carriage, and they were driven to his home. During the ride he talked much about the family estate in Geneva.

"And those flowers," he said. "I would know at once they came from the gardens of our old homestead. Do you know, I laid out those gardens myself years ago."

"Please accept them," said mademoiselle, "since they are so precious to you."

Uncle Gaston formed many plans for Mlle. Garnier's pursuit of her profession. None of them ever seemed to come to a head, but the attention she had received bore fruit. The manager of the company advanced her rapidly, and it was not long before she had every opportunity. Her talents as an actress were mediocre, but she found a part that she could play admirably, and this gained her great success.

Soon after her experience in Geneva young Caspar Pearson went to Paris and called upon her. She was very grateful to him for having been the motive power in starting her upward in her profession, and after a time he began to show a great partiality for her. Uncle Gaston heard of his nephew's attentions and wrote his brother of them. The consequence was a visit to Paris of the youngster's father and a violent scene between father and son in presence of the actress, the father threatening to disinherit the son unless he gave up his love. The son then threatened to denounce his father and his uncle for some offense he did not state, and consent was finally reluctantly given.

Mlle. Garnier, now Mme. Pearson, continued to act under her former name. It was not till some time after her marriage that she reaped the full benefit of the start she had received and which she considered entirely due to the admiration her husband had conceived for her at first sight. But whenever she would give demonstrative evidence of her gratitude her husband would turn away with displeasure and beg her not to mention the subject again. One day she asked him:

"Caspar, what did you mean by threatening to denounce your father and uncle when they opposed our marriage?"

Pearson thought awhile, then said:

"I have a confession to make. Do you remember the immense bouquet I gave you the morning of your departure from Geneva?"

"Yes. It was beautiful."

"It contained $10,000 worth of watch springs."

"Watch springs?"

"Yes. The whole scheme was to make a smuggler of you. It succeeded admirably. My admiration and love for you came afterward."

"Oh, Caspar!"

"Do not condemn me till I have told you all. The duty on Geneva watch springs was very large. When at my father's death I inherited his share of the business I hunted up the entry of the profit on those you took in duty free and placed an equal sum at interest. The total I have put in a solitaire diamond for you. Here it is."

"Caspar, I forgive you."

HARRIMAN'S VICTORY

Refutes Republican Claim That Party Is Constructive.

FUTILITY OF ANTI-TRUST LAW.

Court Decisions Nullify G. O. P. Enactments to Prevent Combinations In Restraint of Trade—Commerce Commission Shorn of Power—That Peace Pact on the Tariff—Reformers Likely to Seek Tall Timbers—Plans of the Reactionaries.

By WILLIS J. ABBOT.

A favorite allegation by Republicans is that the Democratic party has not been constructive; that it has been negative, merely an opposition party, objecting always and suggesting [illegible]

Apropos the supreme court a [illegible] ago handed down an opinion that E. H. Harriman, president of the Union Pacific Railway company, need not answer certain questions propounded to him by attorneys of the Interstate commerce commission. The decision essentially narrows the scope of the commission and thus puts farther away the day when real regulation of common carriers shall have been achieved.

This case was begun by the initiative of the commission to determine whether or not the Harriman financial forces in Wall street had violated the anti-trust law by consolidating the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific roads. It was believed the consolidation had accomplished a combination in restraint of trade, a thing theoretically repugnant to the spirit of the anti-trust statute.

Republican Made Laws Inadequate.

That the consolidation did actually eliminate competition in what is commonly known as "Harriman territory" every sleeping car porter, every brakeman, every office boy west of the Missouri river and south of the Yellowstone knew, yet so inadequate is the system of federal statutes "constructed" by the "constructive" Republican party that there exists no known agency in the United States which has power to place upon the records of the courts that universally known fact.

Every one who knows anything about the matter knows that the combination is restraint of trade, and yet the mighty judicial arm of the law, co-ordinating with the commission as of the mighty executive arm of the law, cannot officially reiterate to the country what already the country knows.

It would be absurd to create or "construct" a system of enactments which would inhibit the government from making record of the fact that the sun shines, yet approaching that tremendous truth is the truth that the Harriman system of common carriers has absolutely destroyed competition between the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Oregon Short Line and Utah Northern, Central Pacific, Oregon Railroad and Navigation and several lesser roads and handed over to Mr. Harriman control of all freight and passenger carrying in approximately one-third of the continent.

The government official may affirm that the sun shines, but may not write into the court records that that equally patent thing exists—the Harriman restraint of trade.

And yet the laws under which these inhibitions have been judicially indorsed by the supreme court were "constructed" by the Republican party, were sought to be avoided by a Republican commission and have now been construed by a court of last resort of which the major number of the members were appointed by that same party.

It is not sought here to debate the wisdom of the decision. Let learned lawyers discourse anent that. But, in the light of the often repeated charge of nonconstructiveness of the Democratic party, the present helplessness of the government to accomplish something substantial in regulation of carriers, to say the least, is interesting.

Opiate For Commerce Commission.

I may go further and assert that there is a well defined fear in the interstate commerce commission's offices here that other court decisions will be forthcoming which will place the commission exactly where it was after the celebrated "maximum rate case," in which in 1894 the court put the commission to sleep by affirming that it had no power to make rates or determine as to relationship between rates.

Of course some may believe that it is rather vapid to interject vague prediction into what should be comment upon events actually become history, but nevertheless it is one of the facts that the fear of additional soporifics administered by the judiciary agitates commission circles in Washington.

If, as claimed, the Republican party is so magnificently constructive, why, may we ask, should the eighteen years or more which have gone since the Sherman law was enacted not have sufficed that party to devise some means to accomplish the desired end?

It is as though some architect boasted of his art and then produced a sod shanty when his client desired a marble palace. Of course any one who spoke ironically of the sod shanty would be dubbed "nonconstructive," negative, mere opposition. However, the clients—about 90,000,000 long suffering citizens of the republic—insist on being ironical this time.

The Barrier.

First Tramp—I won't get nothing decent there; them people is vegetarians. Second Tramp—Is that right? First Tramp—Yes, and they've got a dog wot ain't.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

DO YOU KNOW
The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?
A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or in a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.
We will gladly assist you in the preparation of an advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

It is very true that a freeze up on the Columbia and Willamette rivers does not occur every year, but it occurs often enough for the transportation companies to begin to take notice, if they desire to have the Columbia river hold its own with other shipping ports on the Pacific coast. Delays to vessels occasioned by these freeze ups and by the large freshets which occur in the upper river nearly every spring are expensive. Every one knows they can easily be avoided by doing the shipping from Astoria, where neither the ice nor freshets interfere with ocean going craft. The heads of the big transportation lines are aware of these things and that is one of the reasons, why we believe, they are making preparation to establish the big terminals of their lines at this point.

One of the most important matters for the city council to decide upon in the very near future is the list of streets, which it proposes to improve during the coming summer. Under the present charter considerable time is required in enacting the preliminary legislation necessary before an improvement can be undertaken and in order to secure the best results arrangements should be perfected so that contracts for the improvement can be let early in the spring, and the work be done during the pleasant weather of summer. Again, if the list of streets is announced early in the year, interested property owners will be given an opportunity to protest against improvement of any thorofare which they do not want opened up or they can petition to have any street that may have been overlooked included in the list.

The Indian Athlete.

Uneasy lies the head that wears a wreath won on the athletic field. There is no feat possible for any man that some other man will not risk his life to excel. Hayes won the Olympic Marathon by a narrow margin, and the next best man that day, Dorando, outran him on another trial. But Dorando had to yield a few days later to Longboat, an Indian runner who owes the very best that is in him to the game. The Indian went into the international Marathon last summer with a record that called for better fortune than his pitiful collapse in the twentieth mile.

Longboat comes of a race noted for swift and hardy footmen. To "run like an Indian" was enough to make a white athlete famous in the early American settlements. The trick was not altogether a matter of high speed, but of covering long distances across [illegible] and coming out as fresh as Longboat showed himself to be from his [illegible] race at Madison Square Garden, when his competitor [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] things which, after all, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Are Our "Good Roads" Bad?

In calling our "good roads" poor roads the Engineering News is careful to distinguish between the well built and the well maintained. A recent issue of this paper discusses the subject editorially and, citing the roads of England for example, says that good roads cared for are always good. But too often we construct costly macadam highways and then let them go to ruin. Says the News:

"Repair" does not mean the restoration of ruined p[illegible] of the road but current maintenance. England not only has regular road [illegible] paid but even the refinement of sweeping. The macadam roads that are most often pointed to with pride, 'the best that we can show in New Jersey or New York or Massachusetts,' receive no greater [illegible] than our worst [illegible] are built well but th[illegible] ed well. With the [illegible] exception perhaps of the roads of one [illegible] they are not maintained at all in fact. And this, no doubt, is responsible for some of the difference between American and English roads.

Pertinent to this question are the views of Mr. Samuel Hill, a Washington delegate to the International Roads association, which met in Paris in October. Mr. Hill says that "any country in Europe" maintains better roads than the United States and that the root of the trouble with this country is lack of competent engineers. To quote further:

> The only way is to establish a good thorough course of highway engineering in the universities. Our engineers are surely as good as any Europeans, but you cannot ask the farmer to run a bank, and you cannot ask a man lacking the necessary knowledge to build a good road. Of course the department of agriculture is largely to blame. The officials there seem to think that as long as a road is open and traversable, no matter how it is built, it is all right, and that's the end of it. They don't appreciate that the farmer can haul his freight over a clean cut path in half the time that is taken over a crooked, rocky road such as those of which we boast.

In the article quoted above the Engineering News says that there is money enough spent in road maintenance in this country, but the work is without competent direction. Until the system is changed the public will continue "to consign its investments of $5,000 to $8,000 per mile to rot and neglect."

Never Knew Her Husband's Name.

In declaring that she never knew her husband's first name Mrs. Esther Nieman of Monroe street created laughter at the central police court.

"I have always called him 'Pop' from the first day I married him, and as he did not object I never worried myself about his first name," said Mrs. Nieman, who had her husband arrested on the charge of failing to support her.

The accused husband by direction of the magistrate was induced to tell his wife his full name.

"Certainly. I'm glad to do it," remarked the defendant, "but I think my wife has known right along that I am Jacob Nieman."

After telling his name Nieman was held in $300 bail for trial.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Inducements to Drink.

In Catania an enterprising wine dealer has initiated a novel scheme of drinking by the hour ad libitum. For 15 cents one may drink for sixty minutes, and the current price of wine is 5 cents a liter. The chances are, however, in favor of the merchant, for it requires a strong stomach to drink three liters of Etna wine in one hour. At a neighboring town the charge is 10 cents for the first hour and 15 cents for two. The fashion seems to have "caught on," and at Bologna, where the wines are better, the charge is 41 cents for the first hour, 31 cents for the second and 20 cents for the third. The result of these inducements to drink is said not to be enchanting.

Profits In Cocaine.

It is stated that cocaine is sold at $2.65 an ounce and that it is sold at retail to fiends at 20 cents for about six grains. There being 480 grains to an ounce, the venders at this rate would realize $16 on an ounce of the drug, a clear profit of $13.35. In view of the enormous profit in this trade it can be readily realized that the temptation to violate the city and state ordinances is a very great one and that many of the unscrupulous dealers will resort to almost any trick in order to evade the law. — Charleston News and Courier.

VICE ADMIRAL ROJESTVENSKY, COMMANDING RUSSIA'S SECOND PACIFIC SQUADRON WHO DIED YESTERDAY

AN ANCIENT YOKEL.

Not Quite Sure of His Age, but Knew It Was Something Fearful.

During a Saturday stroll in the country a pedestrian came upon an ancient rustic engaged in breaking stones. Drawing him into conversation, the pedestrian eventually asked the old fellow how old he was.

"Oh, I dunno," was the reply, "but I know I be a fearful age!"

"But you must have some general idea how old you are."

"No, I dunno, but I know I be a fearful age," was the only estimate that could be drawn from him.

"All right; we'll try to get at it in another way," said the pedestrian, bringing out his pencil and notebook. "Now, how old were you when you left school?"

"I be nine, sur, when I finished schulin'."

"And what did you do then?"

"Well, I was boy fur Farmer Giles fur fifteen year."

"And after that?"

"After that I worked fur Squire Noakes fur seven and thirty year."

"And what next?"

"Well, I was wagoner fur Cruker, the carrier, fur four and forty year."

And so on, and so forth, until the final fact was elicited that he had been engaged on breaking stones for a quarter of a century. Then the inquirer observed, with withering sarcasm:

"So you do not know how old you are? Well, I'll tell you. You're 378 years old on your own showing."

"I dessay," murmured the ancient yokel, with undisturbed serenity. "I know I be a fearful age."—Liverpool Mercury.

"Katherine," gasped the young husband as he rubbed his aching teeth, "what kind of cake do you call this?"

"Why, Henry, that is 'pyramid cake,'" responded his wife proudly.

"Pyramid cake, eh? By jinks, I might have known it!"

"Ah, you notice its resemblance to a pyramid?"

"I should say I do. It is heavy enough to be made of stone."—Detroit Tribune.

RISE OF DIALECT.

Source of the Expressions "Stig 'Im!" and "Sick 'Em!"

When a boy in some parts of New England has occasion to set his dog upon any one or anything he exclaims, as a rule: "Stig 'im! Stig 'im!" The New York boy or the boy of the west generally says: "Sick 'em! Sick 'em!" To the western boy the command "Stig 'im!" sounds absurd; it provokes his laughter. But his own command is equally amusing to the New England boy.

This little difference illustrates the beginning of local dialect. Probably neither boy thinks of the exact meaning of what he says. He is merely repeating words he has heard others use, which he is sure, from their frequent repetition, that the dog will understand.

The boy who says "Sick 'em!" is repeating a corruption only one degree removed of the words "Seek him!" which are a very old command.

"Stig 'im!" is a corruption one degree further removed from its original than "Sick 'em!" It began with "Take him!" which was varied by the use of "so" before it—"So take him!" From this to "S' take him!" was an easy step, and the more easily pronounced "Stig 'im!" was the next corruption.—Boston Transcript.

Christmas Pies.

In England, Yorkshire is still the stronghold of vast Christmas pies that trace their lineage far beyond the Nor- [illegible] into the dim feasts of [illegible] and Danish freebooters. [illegible] note, written in 1833, [illegible] mention of the "wains" for wagons groaning about Christmas time under a load of these pies and adds, "At such times the hostess of a well frequented inn of the old school will construct a pie of the circumference rivaling her own, and the county newspaper will record its dimensions."

One such "hostess of the old school" is immortalized by a famous though slightly profane epitaph in a Yorkshire churchyard running as follows:

Here lies the body of Mary Ann Shoven

Thos. Ryrie, who now represents the largest wholesale drygoods house in this country, H. B. Claflin & Co. of New York, is in the city on a business trip.

An order was made in the probate court today authorizing the guardian of the estate of Andrew Hannula, an insane person, to pay certain claims against the estate.

Yesterday afternoon, City Treasurer Dealey paid out the sum of $1500 in redeeming city warrants that were included in calls which he made some days ago.

Tillamook county has made a special levy of eight mills, that will raise the sum of $90,000, to be used on road improvement work during the present year.

Dr. Estes reports the birth of a daughter to the wife of Edward Wahl of 1828 Franklin avenue last evening. Both the mother and the young lady are in the best of health.

"Charlie," the vegetable Chinaman who was arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of cruelty to anmials, was arraigned in the justice court last evening and placed under bonds to appear for trial, probably late this afternoon.

The State Federation of Labor will hold a convention in Salem during the coming week and a number of delegates from this city will attend. The covention is expected to endorse certain measures of legislation which it will request the legislature to enact.

Dr. Forstrom, who is attending Agnes Burns, the little girl who was so severely burned during the fire at the family home on Thursday morning, stated today that the child is resting easily and the indications are favorable for her complete recovery.

At about half past six o'clock last evening an alarm was recorded from box 17 and the department responded promptly but no fire could be found and as the box had not been disturbed it is believed that crossed wires sent the alarm in.

During the blow this morning the boat house of Knight & Hartwig that has been in the bay at the foot of Tenth street broke adrift and came near wrecking a half a dozen launches but was captured before much damage had resulted.

Charles G. Palmberg, wife and child arrived home last evening from Duluth, Minn. Mrs. Palmberg was returning from an extended visit with relatives in Sweden and stopped for a time at Duluth, where Mr. Palmberg was summoned to meet her on account of the death of their little son, George.

Capt. Chris Ahues, arrived from Seattle last evening, on a visit with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Evenson of Rosburg, Washington are in the city for the day, they will return to their home tomorrow.

Attendants Harrington and Reed of the state insane asylum at Salem arrived down at noon today after Andrew Anderson, who was adjudged insane a few days ago.

First citizenship papers were issued at the county clerk's office today to Tako Lassila Matt Kokko, George Abraham Matikka and Fredrik Albert Turvo, all natives of Finland.

The O. R. & N has filed its annual report with the state railroad commission. It shows that 348,528 shares of stock are in the name of E. H. Harriman, but are owned "by the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company.' The O. R. & N. operates 1264 miles of railroad, of which 671 are in Oregon. Its gross corporate income for 1908 was $7,356,107.83.

The police department is taking steps to prevent the practice of cruelty to animals, especially horses. In addition to the arrest of a Chinaman made last evening on that charge, Patrolman Wilson today compelled another Chinaman to unhitch his horse from a wagon, place it in a stable and feed it. The horse was badly crippled and unfit for service.

At the chamber of commerce rooms this evening there will be another meeting of the members of the Astoria Motor Boat Club for the purpose of prefecting its organization. The committee, appointed to prepare a constitution and by laws, will make is report and after these are adopted the election of officers will be held. All of the owners of motor boats or those interested in them are invited to be present.

The change in the weather conditions was a great relief to the local lumbering trade, as some of the mills would have been compelled to close down, had the cold snap continued a few days longer, on account of a shortage of logs. The Hammond Lumber Company has two large rafts tied up at Brookfield and Cathlamet on account of the ice in the river and now that the break has come they can be brought down.

Some two weeks ago the steamer Senator ran into the wharf of the Kievenhausen cold storage plant at Altoona and practically wrecked it. Bids for its repair were asked for by the O. R. & N. and those received were considered too high by the engineers of that company but after consulting other Portland contractors the contract was awarded to Ferguson & Houston of this city for $2,300, which was the lowest bid submitted.

As a couple of hunters were passing thru the woods in the Nehalem valley a few days ago, they ran across a spot where a cougar had crawled upon a large log and made a spring for a deer, which was in a clump of bushes. The deer was, however, too quick for him and fled down the hillside with the cougar in hot pursuit, finally escaping. Altho the trails were followed for some distance neither of the animals was seen. Measurements showed that the deer took several leaps of 45 feet each.

All arrangements have been completed for the entertainment to be given this evening in Logan hall by Astor lodge, Knights of Pythias. Besides the numerous invited guests, Grand Chancellor Commander G. C. Moser, will be present. After the public installation of officers a musical and literary program will be given that will include a number of well known local artists. The committee in charge has also arranged for a car to leave the foot of Sixteenth street at 12 o'clock for both the east and west end of the city for the accommodation of those who attend the entertainment.

Gus C. Moser, head of the Knights of Pythias in Oregon, arrived in the city on the noon train to pay a fraternal visit to Astor lodge this evening during which there will be a public installation of officers and an interesting program. He was met at the train by a local delegation who dined with him at the Palace Cafe. During the afternoon Mr. Moser spent most of his time meeting the members of the order. Mr. Moser stated that owing to sickness other grand officers of the order were detained from visiting the city at this time. Thruout the state Mr. Moser said, all the Knights of Pythias lodges are in a flourishing condition while new ones are constantly being organized. The next grand lodge of the state will be held at Pendleton where elaborate preparations are already being made for the occasion.

The report of the lumber output for the year 1907 has just been completed, and estimates for 1908 are being received at the office of the Oregon and Washington Lumber Manufacturers Association. During that year Oregon produced nearly $18,000,000 worth. In this state there were 190 mills in operation. The unusual weather conditions in this state for the last few days are referred to in the report, and estimate given of the effect of the snows on the output.

The work of extending the taxes on the 1908 roll is progressing in excellent shape and the indications are that it will be open for collection much earlier than heretofore, probably not later than February 10. The land book has already been finished and the deputies in the sheriff's office are engaged in preparing lists of property assessed to the various owners, especially of extenive tracts, so that they may be checked over by the owners and payments made in time to take advantage of the three per cent rebate, allowed on all taxes paid before March 15.

W. J. Eastabrook auditor and police judge of Warrenton was in the city today on official business. Judge Eastabrook reports that the members of the Warrenton volunteer fire department will give a masquerade ball at Warrenton on the evening of February 12 and arrangements are being perfected for the same. A large number of invitations have been sent to Astorians. In speaking of the advancement of Warrenton, Judge Eastabrook stated that extensive improvements to streets are contemplated, a new city hall to be erected, dredging and deepening Skipanon creek for shipping purposes and securing a greater and better water supply for the town and vicinity.

That the present state law governing the basis of collecting state taxes should be approved by the people thru the initiative and referendum was the sentiment expressed yesterday at the convention of county assessors held in Portland. The collection is now on a basis of state expenditures, but Yamhill county is opposing the law on the grounds of unconstitutionality, contending the county pays more than its proportion of state taxes. The system is satisfactory to the assessors, who desire to retain it. It was also considered desirable by the members of the convention that changes in the boundaries of school and road districts be made in January and reported to the assessors in March, to avoid confusion in the collection of taxes. The assessors want authority to levy and collect taxes on sheep, cattle and stocks of merchandise owned by transient, stockmen. This is considered advisable, they say, as such owners frequently enter and leave the various counties before taxes are collected.

Twelve inches of snow disappeared in this city and vicinity between six o'clock last evening and six o'clock this morning, which is the quickest removal of that amount of snow in this vicinity of which there is any record. Early Thursday evening the southerly wind got the better of the easterly wind and with a light rain falling the deluge began and while it did do considerable damage it was not as great as might have been expected under the circumstances. Several water mains were broken and many pipes broken in residence and the estimated damage in the city will reach several thousand dollars. On account of the breakage of the water mains the plant of the Astoria Electric Company was put out of business but it is again in full operation and Manager McGee expects that his troubles on this score are over. Considerable fear is anticipated over slides on the hills that will follow the thaw out but it will take a couple of days at least to determine how serious these will be.

MARINE INTELLIGENCE

The steamer Roanoke arrived down the river this morning and left out for Eureka and San Francisco with freight and passengers. In coming down she was in charge of Captain Joseph Allyn, the bar pilot, and he stated that she ran through considerable ice but he kept her going at full speed and broke her way through, the only damage being the loss of paint along her water line.

The steamer Miler made an attempt to go over to Chinook and Ilwaco this morning but was compelled to turn back yet expects to make another trial late this afternoon.

The new water commission held its first regular business meeting last evening with all the members present, but only a small amount of business was transacted The bill of the Portland Wire & Iron Works in the sum of $775.70, was referred to a special committee to make an investigation and ascertain if the fence had been erected according to contract. The request of John F. Christians for permission to connect a sewer from a residence which he is to erect near the big reservoir, with the overflow from the reservoir, was denied. The resignations of S. Elmore and J. Q. A. Bowlby as members of the commission were read and accepted. The matter of appointing a clerk and inspector was laid over until the next meeting, a committee of three being appointed to recommend to the commission what the exact duties of an inspector shall be and to also inquire into the qualifications of those who have applied for the position. Standing committees to serve during the ensuing year are as follows: Rates -Welch and Kankkonen; auditing, Brix and Holmes.

Captain Bridgett has again assumed command of the oil tank steamer Asuncion. His license was suspended recently for 60 days on account of the Asuncion colliding with the steam schooner Norwood off the California coast a short time ago.

That there is coniderable activity in timber land is made evident by the number of large transaction just closed in different parts of the state. Some of them involve large amounts, the consideration in one case being not less than $1,000,000. The big deal was consummated a few days ago after long negotiations. The land is in Tillamook county and the tract contains 14,000 acres, heavily timbered. It was sold by the Danaher & Blodgett interests to W. C. Slatery of Wisconsin and will be held by him as an investment. The purchaser is said to consider the price paid small compared with what timber will be worth in a few years. W. C. Slattery bought another tract of timber of 4,000 acres in the Siletz river country for $250,000. L. B. Menefee a prominent timber man of Portland is interested with Mr. Slattery in this deal. The land is estimated to contain 250,000,000 feet. It was bought mostly from small holders. R. B. Jones, W C. Slattery and R. F. Foxhave bought a tract in the Mackenzie river district containing 300,000,000 feet. The consideration in this case has not been announced. The land was bought from samll holders. The [illegible] Logging company has bought a tract of timber from W. C. Slattery in Tillamook county, paying $300,000 for it. A deal involving $300,000 is on in the Siuslaw country, it being stated that $10,000 has been paid down for the option. Timbermen are of the opinion that Oregon timber will change hands with more activity the coming summer than ever before and at steadily advancing values.

VOL. XXVIII ASTORIA DAILY BUDGET, SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1909 Evening Edition Five Cents

GREATEST WRECK IN RAILROADING

Seventy Killed and Thirty More Will Die

Denver, Colo., Jan. 16—Seventy one dead, fifty injured at least thirty of whom will die is the result of a wreck on the Denver and Rio Grande passenger train near Dotsero last night, according to along distance message from Glenwood Springs. To add to the horror a wreck of the second relief train, loaded with injured on its way to Glenwood was tied up by the derailment of some freight cars. The first relief train reached Glenwood bringing the news of the wreck which appears to be one of the worst in the history of railroading.

Glenwood, Colo., Jan. 16 Fifty reported killed and 30 injured, some fatally, in a head on collision between the Denver & Rio Grande train and a double header freight at Dotsero, 20 miles east of here at 10:30 last night. It was from the chair car that most of the dead were taken and 20 bodies have been recovered so far. All the sleeping cars remained on the track and no one in them was injured. The passenger train crashed into the head engine of the freight, going across a switch at Dotsero which is a blind siding. The chair car was telescoped and the first passenger coach wrecked. A relief train which was sent to the scene is expected to return here this morning.

The passenger is said to have been going at a good speed when it reached the siding at Dotsero. It is supposed the engineer of the passenger thought the freight had passed the siding and was going to rapidly to stop his train when he realized the danger. The great locomotive, attached to the passenger was demolished and the chair car and passenger coach were turned on their sides and shattered. The work of taking out the bodies commenced as soon as the relief train arrived. The injured were pinned in the wreckage and heroic work of the passenger's in the rear cars saved many lives. The dead in many instances are so horribly mangled that identification will be difficult.

The injured number 20 and most of them were taken to a hospital but only a few are seriously hurt.

MAKES TREATY WITH HONDURAS

Washington, Jan. 16—A treaty providing for extradition was signed with Honduras by Secretary Root. The state department has declined to say whether or not the treaty is retroactive, but if it is, the last haven of refuge for fugitive prisoners in the western hemisphere has disappeared.

Among the criminals liable to be brought back under the new treaty is John Riplinger, ex-controller of Seattle, who absconded with some $60,000 of that city's funds. He is now living in security in Honduras.

AMERICAN TAR IS ATTACKED

Nice, Jan. 16—Burt H. Linsday, a sailor of the United States battleship Minnesota, while in a wineshop today was stabbed. He was taking a drink in the place, when a band of toughs pestered him to buy them liquid refreshment. Exhausting his patience, he hit the most persistent of the men, and the others fell upon him and cut him in the back. His wound was not serious.

REGISTRY WANTED FOR ANDROMEDA

Washington, Jan. 16—Strong opposition is expected against the enactment of a bill granting an American register for the Pacific Coastwise trade to the barkentine Andromeda, which is before the houes committee on merchant marine. Representative of the Cramps and the New York Shipbuilding Company and the Atlanta Carriers' Association appeared before the committee to argue against the bill. The Andromeda was built in Norway and was wrecked near Honolulu.

The wreck was bought at public auction at San Francisco by an American and repaired at an American shipyard. The bill provides that the coastwise trade of the Pacific should be open to this vessel and an American register provided if it is shown that the repairs were made at an expense exceeding three times the amount of the price paid for the wreck. If the bill is reported favorably and passed it is contended that a precedent will have been established and that numerous similar requests will be made. Those opposing the bill contend that American registers should be granted only to American built vessels.

Albany, Jan. 16—Married, divorced and remarried to his former wife at the age of 21 years is the experience of A. Vincent Holagte, formerly of Corvallis, now of Halsey. In June, 1906, he married Lena J. Allen, of Halsey. While living at Astoria, in 1907, they had trouble and separated and Mrs. holgate secured a divorce here last March, resuming her maiden name. Today Holgate secured a license to wed his former wife. He is now 21 and his second time bride is 20.

WOMAN GIVES HALF REWARD

[illegible], Wash., Jan. [illegible]—Mrs. [illegible], who furnished the information which led to the arrest of James Keely, convicted of the murder of Motorman Brown, a hand who claimed the $2000 reward offered by the county commissioner for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer, was today allowed half of the amount offered. The tip as to the whereabouts of Keely, who was in Portland, came from Mrs Fowles through her husband, a detective.

LIBELOUS PUBLICATION

New York World will be Investigated

Washington, Jan. 16—It was learned today on investigation of the alleged libelous publication charging a scandal in connection with the Panama canal purchase will be made next week by the grand jury of the District of Columbia. The entire staff of the New York World has been summoned to appear on Monday to testify in connection with the matter.

MURDERER IS GIVEN REPRIEVE

Portland, Jan. 16 Harry Daley, the convicted murderer, will not be executed January 20. Judge Gantenbein, in the circuit court yesterday, granted a stay of execution pending anappeal of the case to the supreme court. A bill of executions was filed yesterday, in which it is contended that the court improperly refused to give the jury certain instruction desired by the defendant The court instructed the jury that if it should find Daley insane, it should so state in its verdict. Daley's attorney desired the court to say to the jury that Daley would, in the event they found him insane, be committed by the court to the insane asylum until he became sane, or until he was otherwise discharged therefor by authority of law.

RAIN STORM HAS CEASED

Conditions in California Are Much Improved

San Francisco, Jan. 16 The rain storm which caused the rivers in California to rise in many places beyond their banks, flooded the lowlands and interfered greatly with railroad traffic, has spent its force, according to the weather bureau and clearing weather is predicted.

RIVERS FALL

Sacramento, Jan. 16 There is considerable improvement in storm conditions. The Sacramento river continues to rise but the American is falling rapidly. Reports from down the Sacramento river are reassuring and unless the waters rise six or eight feet more the levies will not give way. Railroad conditions are greatly improved.

Miss Jessie Jewett, an Astoria girl who has spent the past seven years in New York City, has been spending the past few weeks with her mother in this city and incidentally renewing old acquaintences, as well as talking over incidents of early school days. Miss Jewett has devoted her energies to music while in the great metropolis and has already gained fame as a contralto singer, her rich, powerful voice having been heard in several excellent companies numbering among them the opera "Bob White," "The Message of Mars" and the "Toast to the Town," Clyde Fitche's famous musical success. Last season Miss Jewett appeared in the "Golden Butterfly" an opera of excellent range and merit in which she was understudy to the leading lady. Next season Miss Jewett will go to Europe with an entirely new opera company that will tour all the principal cities. Returning from this trip she intends to come to the Pacific coast. Miss Jewett whose stage name is "Marion Coburn" has many friends in the west who wish her success in her chosen field. She always did possess a wonderful contralto voice and its recognition by the New York theatrical managers promises to develop another prima donna from the great west and better still from Astoria. While speaking of her work Miss Jewett said: "New York is a great big place and offers many opportunities for both men and women, but to succeed on the operatic stage one must just simply work and be able physicially to do lots of it. Its one thing to posess a voice, another thing to be able to use it and probably the most important is the ambition to develop it. I love the work and have much confidence in the future. Since returning home for a brief visit I have been so delighted to greet my old friends that some times I wish they could all live in New York with me. It gives me much pleasure to see Astoria develop and I hope some day to return and see it a great big city."

A CASE OF CONSCIENCE

The Motive that Moved the Commercial Traveler

"No, I'm not whistling and singing because business is good," replied the hardware drummer. "What ails me is because I have a clear conscience for the first time in three years."

"Have you confessed to murder?" was asked.

"Gentlemen, don't try to be funny. This is a sacred thing. I was in Boston three years ago, and I picked up a package on the street. On opening it I found seventy-five $1,000 bills. The name of the loser was there, but I took that money and got out of town by the first train. My conscience told me that I was as bad as a thief, but I tried to stifle it."

"A drummer with a conscience!" sneered three of the listeners in chorus.

"I went to Chicago with the money," continued the drummer, "and invested it in real estate. I knew it was wrong, but I did it. Six months ago I found myself worth $200,000. Conscience would not down. It got so bad that I couldn't look even a confidence man in the face. At length I started for Boston and hunted up the loser of the wealth. I found him in his office and told my story. When it was finished I laid my all before him and asked his forgiveness."

"And what did he do?"

"I will tell you what he did, and I shall never forget it. He looked at me and saw how I was suffering, and he took me by the hand and said in a fatherly way:

"'My friend, suffer no more. I was going to a poker game when I lost that money, and it would have gone anyhow.'"

"But what in thunder are you doing on the road if you are worth $200,000?" shouted a voice.

"Conscience again, gentlemen—conscience. It won't let me retire and leave you fellows to do all the lying!"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Earth's Changes.

The surface of the earth is undergoing steady transformation, largely through the agency of man, but perhaps nowhere is the plant and animal life of the region being more rapidly superseded than in New Zealand. The native Polynesian race, crowded by Europeans, is becoming extinct. Many of the imported animals run wild and multiply rapidly at the expense of the native species, even the streams being filled with European and American trout, which grow to great size.

The Fleur-de-lis.

The origin and therefore the full heraldic meaning of the fleur-de-lis is disputed. By some the emblem is supposed to represent a lily, by others the iron head of some weapon, presumably a lance. From the claims put forth by English sovereigns to certain principalities in France, gained by inheritance or marriage, the French royal coat appeared as a quartering in the English royal arms, but it was abolished by George IV.

Taking Him Down.

"Yes, sir," said the pompous individual, "I always pay cash for everything I get." "Dear me!" exclaimed the matter of fact person. "What's the matter with your credit?"—Chicago News.

Consoling.

Mrs. X.—I must apologize, Mrs. Y., for failing to come to your party Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Y.—Oh, my dear, don't speak of it! You were not missed.—Pathfinder.

We acquire the strength we have overcome.—Emerson.

Historical Reason.

"They called Bismarck the Iron Chancellor."

"Why was that?"

"I don't know unless it was to distinguish him from a large variety of steal chancellors that history tells about."

A Vain Boast.

"I'll make a name for myself," said he
When she his hand refused
He held his head up haughtily,
Although his heart was bruised

How vain are youth's impulsive claims!
He made a noble vow.
But carelessly he forged some names
And wears a number now

Snapshots at Figures In Politics

C. A. Culberson.

J. B. PERKINS.

QUITE a strong ray of lime light was thrown on Representative James B. Perkins of Rochester when he rose in the house and offered the resolution for the appointment of a committee to determine what if any action should be [illegible] as to the references to the secret service in the president's annual message. These references, in which Mr. Roosevelt is deemed by some to have cast uncalled for reflections on the house of representatives as a body, have caused quite a stir in the nation's legislature.

Mr. Perkins is a Republican and a strong supporter of the administration. But he is also a sticker for the rights and privileges of congress as a co-ordinate branch of the government. He is a lawyer and a thorough student of constitutional history and law. He is an Episcopalian of the broad church type and was in the eye not long since because of his defense of the Rev. Algernon C. Crapsey, D. D., in the now famous heresy trial resulting in the suspension of the Rochester clergyman of advanced views. Mr. Perkins is one of the scholars of congress. He is a graduate of Rochester university, has studied in universities abroad, is author of several volumes pertaining to the history of France and is a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters of France. He is sixty-two years of age and served in the New York assembly before his first election to congress, eight years ago. He has quite a reputation as an orator.

The discussion over the president's references to the secret service has brought into special notice the work of the members of this corps. One of the best known of the secret service men at the present time is William J. Burns, who has been aiding Prosecutor Heney in San Francisco in the gigantic task of putting grafters in high place behind the bars. The success of this work on the Pacific coast and the fight put up by the Heney-Burns combination have made the members of this remarkable team national characters. Sensational interest was added to the subject when Heney was shot and nearly killed a short time ago by one of the criminals whose enmity he had incurred. Burns' methods as a detective are very different from those of Sherlock Holmes. He is so open in his work as to deceive those whom he wishes to involve in the toils of the law and is so agreeable that a man is willing to risk arrest for the sake of enjoying his society. Burns was formerly a tailor and was twenty-six years old before he took up detective work.

JOHN E. WILKIE.

The head of the United States secret service is John E. Wilkie, who started his career as a reporter on the old Chicago Times. He was assigned to report police doings and in that way got his first ideas as to detective work. Chief Wilkie was born in Elgin, Ill., in 1860, his father being Franc B. Wilkie, the famous "Poliuto" of the old Times. Young Wilkie while in reportorial work made a specialty of criminal investigation, and during the Spanish war he checkmated Spanish spies and drove them from the country. He is master of the art "now you see it; now you don't." He can [illegible] quarters—in fact, any kind of coin—disappear and appear in any desired place, even if it be the ear or eye of his interested spectator. Besides this accomplishment, the chief is handy with a deck of cards, knows how the tricks are performed and is no mean disciple of the illustrious Herrmann.

Congressman Nicholas Longworth has been quite in the eye recently as a legislator as well as son-in-law of the president. It was at his residence that the Republican members of the ways and means committee met to talk over tariff revision with President Elect Taft. Mr. Longworth is a member of the committee and has not been altogether a silent one during the hearings on the tariff schedules. It was rather an embarrassing episode for him when Representative Perkins introduced the resolution respecting the secret service references of Mr. Roosevelt's message, a resolution implying in some degree censure of the president's act. Mr. Longworth sat silent while the house voted unanimously in support of the resolution, but he blushed way up to the top of his bald spot.

NICHOLAS LONGWORTH IN REALITY AND IN CARICATURE

Senator Eugene Hale of Maine and Senator Charles A. Culberson of Texas are now the leaders of the Republicans and Democrats respectively in the upper branch of congress. Senator Hale was chosen chairman of the Republican caucus as successor to the late Senator Allison of Iowa. The position carries with it the chairmanship of the Republican steering committee, as it is called, which guides the majority in the course it takes on legislation. The Maine senator is a veteran legislator and is recognized as a man of exceptional ability and knowledge of affairs. He is seventy-two years of age and his first [illegible] in congress dates back to the year 1869. Several times cabinet portfolios have been offered him, but he always declined them. On naval affairs he is an authority, and he might have been secretary of the navy under President [illegible] had he desired the post.

Senator Culberson, to whom the Democrats of the senate now look for leadership, has a presidential boom. He has had one before, but while Mr. Bryan was in the field he would not encourage it. Since Mr. Bryan's recent defeat there has been considerable talk among Democrats of taking the candidate from the south in 1912 and selecting Mr. Culberson as the standard bearer. The Texas member is very popular among his fellow legislators of both parties. He is fifty-three years old and succeeded the late Roger Q. Mills in the senate in 1899. His father, the late David B. Culberson, was prominent as a member of congress from Texas for many years.

Congressman Champ Clark, new leader of the Democratic minority in congress, loves the Democratic party most of anything and next to that he loves Missouri. A few years ago he was on the lecture platform in Kansas when he became ill and was told he had only an even chance to live.

"What more does a man want?" he demanded. "Just put me in a car and start me back to Missouri. Going back home is enough to make any man well."

Before the train reached Kansas City he was on the road to recovery.

DO YOU KNOW
✣ ✣ ✣ ✣ ✣ ✣
The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?
✣ ✣ ✣ ✣ ✣ ✣

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of an advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

The list of standing committees which Mayor Smith has appointed for the ensuing year appears to give general satisfaction. The members who have served in the council and are thus familiar with the work have been given places on each committee, the business of the city can be taken up and acted upon without unnecessary delays.

A record of lynchings has been kept by the New York Times. This shows that from 1882 to 1901, the annual lynchings in the United States have been considerbly over 100 a year, ranging from as low as 107 in 1899 to 235 in 1892. Since 1901, with two exceptions, to wit, 1903 and last year, the lynchings have been considerably below 100. In 1907 there were only fifty-one, but last year they jumped to 100. Of these, ninety-seven were committed in the South and ninety-three of the persons lynched were negroes. Lynch law is not so great a reproach to the United States as it has been in the past, but is still disgraceful enough to call for further education in good morals as a means of representing this wholly American crime in those states where it still disgraces the fair name of these United States.

The year just closed has been one of unsettled business conditions owing to the panic of the fall of 1907, but conditions are rapidy improving throughout the country. In the west the panic was not seriously felt, except in a sympathic way, due to conditions in the eastern money centers, and almost every trace of the flurry seems to have disappeared here. Astoria has grown in spite of the drawbacks of the past year, and should have a great increase of prosperity during 1909, since there is every assurance of big railroad developments in Oregon in which this city seems likely to have a large share.

The salary of the czar of Russia is exactly $23,000,000 a year, and the fact that he doesn't earn that amount or anywhere near it is probably the least of his worries. What perplexes his mind more than anything else is the fact that some of his loving subjects may take it into their heads to place a stick of dynamite under his pillow some night and blow him into the next world. So he really needs the $23,000,000 to pay out for detective hire in order to prevent just such an occurrence.

The sidetracking of Yuan Shi Kai indicates that the cause of reform has not made as much progress in China as some people imagine. The deposition of this influential official shows that, in high circles at least, the disposition to go slow is as pronounced as ever. The next thing we shall hear in all probability will be an extension of the time in which to think over the proposed governmental changes. The chances are that the people will be given decades instead of years in which to make up their minds whether they want a change and to fit themselves for it.

THE GENTEEL BEGGAR

Recently a man who lived like a prince on the money of tender hearted people was brought within the toils of the law after he had begged and squandered $100,000 or more. His was an easier task than might be supposed. Nearly everybody is charitable when brought face to face with suffering believed to be genuine. Persons who aim to live by their wits discover this and choose means to the end. This man wrote begging letters.

Many people do not find it difficult to turn away from a touching hard luck story if the teller of it looks dissipated. But it is different where the story comes from one who is decent in appearance. Self respect seems to be a badge of worthiness, and one will often give a dollar to a well dressed liar more cheerfully that a nickel to a brazen faced tramp. Thus the genteel beggar thrives, and his example is far more pernicious than that of his down at the heel comrade, who is shunned rather than pitied and ekes out but a miserable living.

That sending of invitations to bridge parties through the mails can be stopped without the parties chiefly interested discovering that anything has happened.

Speaker Cannon is doubtless sincere in declaring for honest tariff revision, but the nicest honesty can be differential when it comes to placing benefits.

Test a boy's brightness by asking him to point out the good skating or tell where his dad keeps the "hickory" or when the next school holiday is due.

The way of the transgressor is hard, principally because the authorities won't let him have his own.

That "Order of the Eagle" badge which the kaiser pinned on the breast of Count Zeppelin is in the right place.

"Good-house keepers don't buy ground coffee," says Mrs. Brown. "It loses it's strength—is not near as good as Folger's Golden Gate whole roast, ground just before using."

RCHIE BOYD IN SHORE ACRES.

The revival of James A. Heene's eat play, "Shore Acres" promises be one of the more important drama- occasions of this season. The fam-s Archie Boyd, of "Old Home-ead" fame is playing the part of Na-aniel Berry – the part that Mr. Herne ote for himself and in which he ap-ared for several seasons. Mr. Boyd ayed this part several years before r. Herne's death and was selected by r. Herne himself. "Shore Acres" ill be seen here at the Astoria theatre iturday Jan. 23, which will undoubt-lly prove to be an occasion of unusual terest. One of Mr. Herne's ughters, Dorothy, is in the cast. anager Hanlin announces that the irtain will not rise until 9 o'clock give business men a chance to see ie whole preformance.

BARK SAILS TO EARN BOUNTY

Joinville Receives Orders to Cross the Pacific

The owners of the French bark Joinville yesterday instructed the local agents of the French bark Jionville to dispatch her from this port to Sydney Heads in ballast. She has been here a few weeks, having come out in cargo from Europe.

The owners of the Joinville wish, like many other French shipowners, to take advantage of the generous French bounty paid for every mile covered and so will keep the vessel going from one port to another just to roll up mileage. From Sydney Heads the Joinville will probably be ordered back to the Columbia river, the intervening space offering a fine stretch of water for smooth sailing.

MURDERER LOSES NERVE

Sheriff Fears He Will Attempt Suicide

Salem, Or., Jan. 16—Since the verdict was found against him Wednesday, C. Y. Timmons, the wife-murderer, has lost this nerve and has lapsed into a whimpering and cowering coward and for fear he will make another attempt at Suicide, Sheriff Minto has placed a guard over him until sentence is passed next Monday and he is delivered over the penitentiary authorities.

The Billionaire's Resolution.

"If to be rich is a disgrace,"
He murmured, with a frown,
"I'll stick to my financial pace
And try to live it down!"

CARNEY NAMED AS POSTMASTER

Nomination Made by President Roosevelt

A dispatch was received last evening from Washington announcing that the president has nominated Frank J. Carney for postmaster at Astoria to succeed John Hahn and that the appointment was made solely on the recommendation of Senator Fulton. Mr. Hahn's term will expire about the first of the coming month and recently a largely signed petition rebuesting the appoinment of Mr. Carney was forwarded to Washington.

WAR ON RATS IN CALIFORNIA

Anti-Plague Bill to Force a Cleanup

Sacramento, Cal., Jan., 16—State legislation against the bubonic plague is proposed in a bill introduced by Senator Benjamin F. Rush at the instance of Dr. N. K. Foster, secretary of the state board of health. The new bill makes rat infested places nuisances and it provides that buildings, ships or docks must be premply rid of the vermin or else condemned. If the owners fail to eradicate the rodents the bill provides that the state board of health shall do the work and charge the same to the property owners.

Nearly a hundred suffragests are "on the job" at the capital today in behalf of the cause of equal suffrage for women. A delegation of 600 from Los Angeles is scheduled to arrive as soon as the inclement weather ceases. Volunteers will come from other part of the state and even from Oregon and Washington to lend their sisters support by their presence.

Not a bill in their behalf has been placed before the legislature. Several members have shown indications of a desire to win the smiles and thanks of suffragests by presenting a measure giving women the elective franchise, but none has had the temerity to "come through."

The members of both houses remain aloof an although the women claim they could have a majority it a bill was presented they mention numbers and not names.

A Warning

A negro was passing under a scaffolding where some repairs were going on when a brick fell from above on his head and was broken by the fall. Sam he very coolly raised his head and exclaimed:

"Hello, you white man up dar! If you don't want your bricks broke just keep 'em off my head!"—Tit-Bits.

Wm. Olson will leave for Salem tomorrow morning to attend the session of the State Federation of Labor as a delegate from the carpenters union.

A marriage license was issued at the county clerk's office today to Henry Hendrickson and Greeta Sophia Reini, both of this city.

An order was made in the probate court this morning, approving the final account of the administrator of the estate of George Sieverson, deceased.

Reports from Seaside are to the effect that there was over two feet of snow in the upper Necanicum river district and this melting so rapidly yesterday has raised the water in that stream until it is overflowing the banks.

At the annual meeting of the Memorial Lutheran church held last Wednesday evening the following trustees were elected. Asmus Brix, John Hahn, Gustaf A. Hemple, Mat. Nyland, Herman F. Kempe; J; Johnson; Paul Kreatsch; Charles Verchueren; Friz Voss; Christ Gramms; and P. Johnson.

Pilots of the river who came down on the oil tank steamers, report that the ice in the river is gradually breaking away and while it is hardly safe at present for wooden vessels it gives promise of being open in a couple of days on account of the warm weather in the upper rivers.

The recent performance of the opera Pinnafore under the auspices of the high school for the benefit of the athletic and debating funds, netted $90.75 and the "Months and Seasons" entertainment for the picture fund of the grammar grade rooms, resulted in securing $20.82.

Persons returning from the north side of the river report that while much of the snow was melted yesterday, the ground in the vicinity of Deep and Gray's rivers is still covered to a depth of about three inches. The snowfall there during the recent storm was fully 14 inches.

During the past 24 hours the effects of the recent freeze up is beginning to be felt in new quarters. Many pipes, incased in the walls of residences have broken and practically flooded the buildings and doing an immense amount of damage, ruining property in many cases that cannot be replaced.

James Aldrich, a young man who came to Svensen from Pacso, Wash. a few days ago, was arrested today on a charge of insanity. He was called before the county board, consisting of Dr. Estes and Judge Trenchard, this afternoon and an order made directing that he held by the sheriff until Monday, when his mental condition will be examined. Aldrich says this "conscience troubles him" and he imagines he sees all sorts of objects.

The adjourned session of the state board of pilot commissioners will be held on next Tuesday and among the other matters to come will be the adoption of resolutions in memory of the late Sylvester Farrell, who died in Portland last Monday. Mr. Farrell had been a member of the pilot board for several years.

Several of the logging camps in the lower Columbia river district which were compelled to close down [illegible] count of the snow are preparing to resume operations during the early part of the week. Quite a number of the loggers have been in the city during the past week and the majority of them will leave for the respective camps tomorrow and Monday.

Agnes Burns, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Burns, who was so severely burned when the family home was destroyed by fire on Thursday morning died last evening as a result of her injuries. During the afternoon the child appeared to be improving, but suddenly took a turn for the worse. It is supposed that she inhaled some of the flames, a contingency that was feared from the first. The funeral of both the little victims of the disaster will be held tomorrow.

The trial of Charlie Leung Chung, a Chinaman, who is commonly known as "Vegetable Charlie," on a charge of cruelty to animals was concluded in the justice court this morning and the defendant was fined $10 and costs, amounting in all to about $18, which he paid. The defendant was accused of starving his horse and of leaving it out of doors during the recent cold snap. In addition to imposing the fine, the court scored the defendant severely, and directed him to care for the animal properly in the future or he will be prosecuted again and a heavier penalty imposed.

Edward M. Cherry, Lloyds agent, will go over to Long Beach on Sunday and take charge of the wrecked bark Alice and her crew at Ocean Park. After investigating the matter he will make a final decision but it is his present intention, after lightening the vessel as much as possible and bringing her farther up on the beach to attempt to save the 14,000 barrels of cement which is in her. This will be done by running a cable from one of the tops to the beach and swing the barrels directly from the hold to the top of the bluff and quite near the railraod. All preparations for this have been made if it proves feasible.

At a meeting held by Temple lodge of Masons last evening B. Van Dusen was presented with a handsome emblem significant of the order as a token of the high esteem in which the members hold him. The gift is a work of the jeweler's art and besides containing a proper inscription is set with a large diamond in the center. Mr. Van Dusen fully appreciates the present more than words can tell. Mr. Van Dusen is one of the prominent Masons of the state, having served as master of the local lodge in 1881 and was past grand master in 1892. He has the distinction of having passed thru all the chairs in the grand lodge as well as the local organization.

Harry T. Campion, traveling auditor of the O. R. & N. Co., has been appionted superintendent of the Port of Portland towboat service. Mr. Campion will enter upon his new duties February 1. The position was created under the new law which places the tugboat service on the bar and on the Columbia river in the hands of the Port of Portland. Mr. Campion has been connected with the water lines department of the O. R. & N. Co. for many years. He was agent on the Ash-street dock from the time of the Union Pacific control until two years ago, when he was made traveling auditor for the company. Mr. Campion has had much experience in the towboat business and is personally acquainted with many of the shippers entering the port.

That consumers are still wasting water by leaving their service pipes open at night in spite of the fact that there is no danger of freezing, is shown by the condition of the big reservoir where the water during last night was lowered seven feet. This waste with the natural waste incident to the breaking of pipes in various parts of the city will, unless stopped, compel the deparment to again shut off the water at night. The department has a force of men at work repairing breaks in the mains and this will probably be completed within a few days, but until consumers stop leaving their service pipes open it will be impossible to supply water to residences on the higher elevations. At the present time the main conduit from Bear creek is running full but even at that the waste [illegible] rater than the supply, especially [illegible]

When the county court meets in adjourned session on next Wednesday, it will probably hear the report of the district attorney on certain matters relative to the laying out of new roads and it may also decide just what road improvement work will be undertaken during the coming summer. There is every reason to believe that the placing of rock on the graded portion of the main road to the Nehalem valley will be continued and that an effort will be made to complete this thorofare as far as the [illegible] junction before next fall. It is also more than probably that the [illegible] of the road to Elk creek will be completed this summer.

The records at the local custom house show that during the year 1908 there were 122 vessels, aggregating 261,605 tons which, entered from foreign ports direct. They were segregated among the several flags as follows: Eight American, sail 21 British, steam; 23 British, sail; [illegible] French, sail; 10 German, steam; 12 German, sail; one Italian, sail; one Japanese, steam; seven Norwegian, steam; five Norwegian sail, one Russian, sail. There were 57 foreign vessels which came via domestic ports, segregated as follows: Three British, sail; 24 British, steam; 13 French, sail; eight German, steam; one German, sail; seven, Norwegian, steam; one Dutch, steam. There were 1574 vessels, with a total tonnage of 2,466,674 tons, which entered in the coastwise [illegible] and clearances in the same trade were 1502 vessels, with a total tonnage of 2,249,362 tons.

Edward M. Cherry received official notification last evening that his appointment as British vice-consul at this port, which was made by the British foreign office on December 3, has been endorsed by the state department in Washington. Mr. Cherry, who is one of the best known and most popular young men in Astoria, thus succeeds to the position held for a number of years by his father, the late P. L. Cherry, and since the latter's death, he has been acting vice-consul, under an appointment made by Consul Laidlaw of Portland. The young man has had considerable experience in conducting the business of the office, as an assistant to his father, and the appointment comes not only as a well deserved promotion but is as well a popular one among shipping circles and with the general public. In addition to his appointment as vice-consul, Mr. Cherry has been appointed agent in the Astoria district for the Verin Hamburger Assecuradeure Havarie-Bureau of Hamburg, Germany, of the Badische Assecuranz-Gesellschaft Akt. Ges of Mannheim, Germany, two marine underwriters associations, and of the San Francisco Board of Marine Underwriters. He was also appointed recently as agent for Lloyds, the leading British underwriting board.

ARCHIE BOYD IN SHORE ACRES.

The revival of James A. Heene's great play, "Shore Acres" promises to be one of the more important dramatic occasions of this season. The famous Archie Boyd, of "Old Homestead" fame is playing the part of Nathaniel Berry —the part that Mr. Herne wrote for himself and in which he appeared for several seasons. Mr. Boyd played this part several years before Mr. Herne's death and was selected by Mr. Herne himself. "Shore Acres" will be seen here at the Astoria theatre Saturday Jan. 23, which will undoubtedly prove to be an occasion of unusual interest. One of Mr. Herne's daughters, Dorothy, is in the cast. Manager Hanlin announces that the curtain will not rise until 9 o'clock to give business men a chance to see the whole preformance.

ASTORIA DAILY BUDGET

VOL. XXVIII ASTORIA DAILY BUDGET, MONDAY, JANUARY 18, 1909 Evening Edition Five Cents

BITTER ATTACK ON ROOSEVELT

Made by Congressman Willett of New York

Washington, Jan. 18—Characterizing Roosevelt as Gargoyle and this pygmy descendent of Dutch tradespeople'' and charging him with having "established a court in the white house which would have delighted the heart of his admirer Alexander Hamilton'' Mr. Willet, of New York in the house today made one of the most bitter attacks on the chief executive ever heard in that body. Willet took for his subject "The passing of Roosevelt'' and in a speech of great length dealt with numerous of the president's acts since he came into office and scathingly denounced him.

. Wilett said among other things.

"He plays the tyrant, to be sure, but he is a tryant who fears the carnival tickler. He sees things that have a bad smell, but the fresh breeze of the capital hill he does not let its odor linger. He tries our patience but he is always good to laugh at.''

Willett gave brief biographical history of Roosevelts, beginning with his experience as a cowboy down to the present time and accused him in his early manhood of having had preposterous notions and having 'Knifed' Secretary Long, of being a warrior alone in Cuba, of having won the governorship of New York by a mere fluke when the false halo of San Juan Hill was above his head, the beneficiary of assassins and the last crowning piece of luck his nominee for president when all the aggressive elements of passion wanted to see their own candidate defeated the gargoyle has been funny from the hour it left its native quarry.

Willett unsparingly criticized the various acst of Roosevelt, his treatment of Mrs. Morris, alleged attacks on Washington, Jefferson, Monroe, Pierce, Jackson, Tyler and others and called the roll of the so-called Ananias Club and took up the defamation of Admiral Schley, the insults to General Miles. The president, Willett declared, "Showed his teeth to all heroes because real heroes are gall and wormwood to bogus ones.''

He accused the president of bulldozing Castro, brutally treating the Filipinos, marooning Colonel Stewart and had allowed scandalous conditions to exist in the army and navy and having given a Scotch verdict in connection with the alleged Panama canal scandal.

SUITS AGAINST NEWSPAPERS

Result from Criticism of Panama Canal Purchase

New York, Jan. 18—The nature of the proceedings instituted against the New York World and Indianapolis News because of their criticism of the methods by which the purchase of the Panama canal was made was not disclosed at the brief hearing in court today. William McLaughlin, sporting editor of the World and J. Angus Shaw, secretary of the Press Publishing Company, were subpoenead to testify before the federal grand jury in an action not described in the subpoenas. It is believed this is the outcome of Roosevelt's message to congress, in which he protested against the linking of the names of Charles P. Taft, brother of the president-elect and J. Douglass Robinson, the president's brother in-law, in the criticisms of the canal purchase. Attorneys for the newspapers objected to the form of the subpoena and that they be quashed. Brief arguments were heard and an adjournment was taken until this afternoon, when further arguments will be heard by Judge C. H. Ward.

ROOSEVELT WILL NOT ATTEND

Declines Invitation of National Tariff Commission

Washington, Jan. 18— President Roosevelt has declined an inviation to attend the National Tariff Commission convention at Indianapolis on February 16. He does not desire to interfere in the question, which will be settled by his successor.

JOHN WOODBURY KILLS HIMSELF

Fired Bullet Into Head and One in Abdomen

New York, Jan. 18—A man believed to be John H. Woodbury, the dermatologist, committed suicide at Seacliffs Inn, Coney Island today. He fired a bullet into his head and one in his abdomen.

HIGH WATER IN PALOUSE RIVER

Many People Forced to Abandon their Homes

Colfax, Jan. 18—The high water in the Palouse river drove 25 families from their homes in north Colfax last night. The lower portions of the town are flooded, but no serious damage is expected, if the ice in the river can be dynamited today.

POLITICS GETTING WARM AT SALEM

Active to Prevent Chamberlain's Defeat

Salem, Jan. 18 In anticipation of a active movement on the part of certain Republicans to undermine the forces of Statement No 1, and thus bring about the defeat of Governor George E. Chamberlain for United States senator tomorrow a large number of people are arriving at the capitol today with badges "Statement No 1., the People's Choice'' and this crowd of people in the boby is watching every move of the opposition. The Republicans will hold a caucus tonight with Ormsby McHarg of Chicago and Ralph E. Williams, national Republican committeeman for Oregon, in attendance. It is reported that five statement No 1. men are expected to break their pledge to the people on the first ballot tomorrow and go over to the opposition, but the members themselves indignatly deny action on their part is remotely contemplated.

The senate met this morning and after twenty-one bills were introduced it adjourned until the afternoon.

House met this afternoon and Speaker McArthur named his committees.

FAMOUS COLLEGE DESTROYED

Nine Buildings Burned Early This Morning

Mobile, Ga., Jan. 18--The famous Springs Hill College, one of the oldest Jesuit colleges in the Southern states and well known in the United States and Europe was destroyed by fire today. There was no loss of life. The fire started in the chapel where 325 students were at morning service. The students immediately commenced a battle with the flames but could not stay their spread. Nine college buildings were destroyed. The cause of the fire has not been ascertained.

SEVERAL BILLS INTRODUCED

At Today's Session of the Washington Legislature

Olympia, Jan. 18—An effort to put a joint resolution through the senate this morning to adjourn at the end of forty days met with scant encouragement, only six of the 38 members present voting for the resolution. Among the bills in the senate this morning was one to increase the state road tax one-half of one mill; a bill appropriating $200,000 for a state home for aged blind and infirm and a bill to permit hotels to sell liquor on Sundays to bona fide guests. A response to the joint resolution requesting congress [illegible] pass a general rivers and harbors appropriation bill was received by the legislature from Congressman Jones, in which he says the insistence on the passage of the bill [illegible] likely to result in no appropriation at all. The house held a brief session this morning but no business was transacted.

INFORMATION ABOUT SUITS

Asked in Resolution Introduced by Foraker

Washington, Jan. 18—A resolution has been introduced by Senator Rayner of Maryland, calling on the attorney-general for information concerning the bringing of a suit for libel against certain newspapers. Rayner asked for immediate consideration, saying the only purpose was to get information whether this suit has been ordered, whether it was brought at the instigation of the president, under what statute and by whom ordered and by what power and authority the courts are being used to further this suit. The resolution went over until tomorrow under the senate rules, objections to its immediate adoption, having been made by Senator Lodge.

QUALITIES OF MILCH COWS

Test Made at the Wisconsin Experiment Station

A Holstein and Jersey milch cow were pitted against each other last season in a year's milking contest at the Wisconsin experiment station.

The Holstein cow, Johanna, ranked first in net profit yielded over and above the cost of her feed. She gave milk 337 days during the year and produced 13,186.2 pounds of milk and 477.96 pounds of butter fat, the average fat content of her milk for the year being 3.72 per cent. The total value of her production was $140.59 and the cost of her feed for the year $45.28, making a net profit of $95.31. The Jersey cow, Macella, ranked second in net profit during the year, receiving credit for a production of 7,782.1 pounds of milk, 442.36 pounds of fat with an average fat content of 5.68 per cent; value of products $1,23.40, cost of feed $43.03, net profit $80.01.

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.

I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

"SHORE ACRES"

Next Saturday night Manager Hanlin will present the great play entitled "Shore Acres" to his patrons of the Astoria theatre. It is doubtful if there is another play upon the stage today, or has been in the last quarter of a century, which contains so much to interest all classes of theatre goers, as does "Shore Acres," the late James A. Herne's famous play of country life on New England—yet country life in New England is not very different from country life elswhere, as the customs and method of life of country people are very much the same in every section of the Republic. Archie Boyd is playing the part of "Uncle Nat" which was created by the author himself. Mr. Boyd has for many years been identified with plays of this character, such as "The Old Homestead," "The Village Postmaster" "The Country Squire. "Way Down East and so on.

FORESTER FILES ANNUAL REPORT

Showing Receipts and Expenses of Department

Washington Jan. 18—Listing receipts and expenditures and explaining them in plain English much as a rail road president reports to his board of directors, Clifford Pinchot, forester, has just made a retrospect of the work of the United States forest service for the fiscal year 1908.

For the administration and protection of the 182 national forest in seventeen states and territories and Alaska, the government spent $2,526,098.02, or about one and one-half cents an acre.

Permanent improvements, including the construction of 3,400 miles of trails, 100 miles of wagon roads, 3,200 miles of telephone lines, 550 cabins and barns, 600 miles of pasture and drift fences, 250 bridges, and 40 miles of fire lines cost $592,169.19. Telephone wire to build approximately 400 miles of additional lines was shipped to the forester, but with the funds available before the close of the year the work of construction could not be completed. Some of this work was done on each of the forests in the United States.

Although many needed improvements could not be undertaken, the benefits of what has been accomplished are seen in the more convenient and economical manner in which the forest officers are enabled to carry on their work and in the opening up to forest users of territory hitherto inaccessible. The remaining $297,840.40 of the total of $3,416,107.61, disbursed on account of work of the forest service was used in forest investigations costing $235,855.14, and in diffusion of forest information and federal cooperation.

The forest service is one of the branches of the government where everything is not outgo. Last year the receipts from sales of timber, grazing fees, and permits for special uses of forest resources amounted to $1,842,281.87, an increase of $271,222.43 over the 1907 figures. The per acre receipts from the national forests were a little more than one cent, less than five mills under the per acre cost of administration and protection of the forests.

The amounts paid the states and territories, to be expended for roads and public schools from the year's receipts, amounted to $447,063.79. Chiefly because of increasing the revenue to the states from 10 per cent in 1907 to 25 per cent last year, there was a total ncrease of $294,031.62 in the amounts payable to the states.

DEFEAT GREAT BLOW TO NATION

Country Interested in Rivers and Harbors

Washington, Jan. 18—Commenting on the decision reached by the house committee on rivers and harbors today that there be no general rivers and harbors bill at the present session of congress, J. R. Ellison of Cincinnati, secretary of the National Rivers and Harbors committee, said:

"The decision brings out one potent fact, that the Republican party, of which I am a member, is to call a special session of congress in March next, to carry out the pledges of the platform upon which Mr. Taft was elected, namely, the revision of the tariff. The same platform which pedged my party to such revision also pledged the party in positive and unequivocal words to a systematic and comprehensive plan to improve the waterways of the country.

There is in certain sections of the country a demand for revision of the tariff, but from all sections of the country there is united demand from the manufacturer, the producer, the merchant and the consumer for the nation's highways and gateways, (rivers and harbors.)

"If this public interest is indicative of public conviction should not the extra session devote as much of the attention in carriyng out party pledges, looking to a permanent policy of waterways, as to the revision of the tariff?"

BIDS ASKED.

Bids are asked for the renewing of the foundation under the Masonic Hall building, corner Ninth and Commercial streets; specifications may be seen at the office of Dr. Jay Tuttle, 17?, Commercial Street until Wednesday noon January 20th 1909.

MUST FIGHT TO GET REGISTER

Request of Barkentine Andromeda Is Opposed

Washington, Jan 18 Opposition is expected against the enactment of a bill granting an American register for the Pacific Coastwise trade to the barkentine Andromeda, which is berfoe the house committee on merchant marine. Representatives of the Cramps' and the New York Shipbuilding Company and the Atlanta Carriers' Association appeared before the committee to argue against the bill. The Andromeda was built in Norway and was wrecked near Honolulu.

The wreck was bought at public auction at San Francisco by an American and repaired at an American shipyard. The bill provides that the coastwise trade of the Pacific should be open to this vessel and an American register provided if it is shown that the repairs were made at an expense exceeding three times the amount of the price paid for the wreck. If the bill is reported favorably and passed it is contended that a precedent will have been established and that numerous similar requests will be made. Those opposing the bill contend that American registers should be granted only to American built vessels. The representatives of the shipbuilding interests declare that the tariff on steel hardly affects the cost of building boats in this country in contrast with foreign prices.

STOP FISHING IN CLACKAMAS

Warden McAllister Conferred With Fishermen

Oregon City, Jan. 18—Fish Warden McAllister has just had a conference with the Clackamas county fishermen relative to proposed changes in the state laws. Mr. McAllister wants the Clackamas river closed entirely and fishing abolished in the Willamette river with both nets and hook and line one-half mile north and south of the entrance to the Clackamas and south of the suspension bridge. After a protracted discussion Mr. McAllister consented to amend his recommendations, as to restrictions on the Willamette river north and south of the entrance to the Clackamas, and he consented to make the dead line below the falls at a point in front of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company's dock. The Clackamas river is now open to fishermen, who are not permitted to fish south of the island below the falls.

The Clackamas county fishermen will petition the legislatures to make no changes in the laws relating to the protection of salmon in this locality.

MILL SALE IS CONFIRMED

Large Plant at Aberdeen Has Changed Hands

Aberdeen, Jan. 18—Sale of the United States mill plant to Edward R. Hurlbert, former manager and part owner of the Aberdeen Lumber & Shingle Mill interests, is confirmed in a telegram from San Francisco where Mr. Hurlbert is at present. The United States mill was built in West Aberdeen several years ago by the Morleys and named the Michigan Mill, after the state in which the Morleys have large property holdings. Its sale about two years ago by the Morleys to the Beadle Bros., of San Francisco, for a figure said to have been near the $100,000 mark, created a considerable stir in mill and financial circles. Soon after the sale, the panic came on and the plant has remained idle since that time.

NEW COURT OF RECORD PLANNED

Tribunal to Have Jurisdiction Over Entire State

Olympia Jan 18—Senator Ralph D. Nichols, of King county, will introduce a bill providing for a new court of record, to have state-wide jurisdiction and to sit in the counties of King, Spokane and Pierce, in all cases involving any amount up to $500 The court will be so constituted that justice of the peace may be appointed as the judges. The plan of the proposed court contemplates fixing the fees at one-half those of the superior court, and the time for the return of service to be ten days instead of twenty days. The time within which the summons may be published will be cut in half. The jurisdiction of the court will be the same as that of the superior court, except that it will not handle criminal and probate matters.

The county clerk will be the clerk of the proposed court. An appeal will lie from this court of the superior court but the appellant will be required to give a supersedeas bond before appealing. In case of an appeal to the superior court, the case will be tried by that tribunal as if for the first time.

Senator Nichols in explaining his bill said today:

"I believe that a large part of the litigation in the superior court at present consists of cases involving less than $500 each. I have writen to the clerk of King county to get data on this. My purpose is to provide a court wherein judgments may be obtained expeditiously and at a low cost.

"The requirement of a supersedeas bond before an appeal is taken to the superior court will make it unlikely that a litigant would appeal unless he believed that he could obtain a reversal of judgment. In the event of his failure to win in the superior court, the prevailing party could recover the full amount of the judgment, with costs from the bond. The effect will be to reduce the number of appeals."

COMMONWEALTH DAY FIXED

Oregon Will Observe February 14 Each Year

University of Oregon, Jan. 18—Hereafter on February 14, the anniversary of the admission of Oregon into the union, an annual conference will be held at the University of Oregon to discuss ways of enhancing the service of this institution to the people of the state. The appropriate role of a state university in the life of a progressive commonweal this rapidly expanding. The need of Oregon for expert aid from the university in toning up its institutional life is particularly urgent. The radically democratic organization that the people of this state the assumed and the magnificent prospects it has in all lines make suggestion from scientific sources especially desirable.

The subjects for discussion at the first of these annual conferences will be "Oregon's Heritage—Conservation of it for the People as a whole and the coordination of the activities of all the educational agencies in the state. Prominent men from all parts of Oregon will participate.

PLAY D SHARP, YOU WRETCHES

Mozart's Outbreak at an Opera Performance

Mozart, being once on a visit at Marseilles, went incognito to hear the performance of his "Villanella Rapita." He had reason to be tolerably well satisfied till in the midst of the principal aria the orchestra, through some error in the copying of the score, sounded a D natural where the composer had written D sharp. This substitution did not injure the harmony, but gave a commonplace character to the phrase and obscured the sentiment of the composer.

Mozart no sooner heard it than he started up vehemently and from the middle of the pit cried out in a voice of thunder, "Will you play D sharp, you wretches?"

The sensation produced in the theater may be imagined. The actors were astounded, the lady who was singing stopped short, the orchestra followed her example, and the audience, with loud exclamations, demanded the expulsion of the offender. He was accordingly seized and required to name himself. He did so, and at the name of Mozart the clamor subsided and was succeeded by shouts of applause from all sides.

It was insisted that the opera should be recommenced. Mozart was installed in the orchestra and directed the whole performance. This time the D sharp was played in its proper place, and the musicians themselves were surprised at the superior effect produced. After the opera Mozart was conducted in triumph to his hotel.

A PSYCHOLOGICAL INTRUSION.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

No one, excepting the sick restored to health, has reason to feel more thankful for that wonderful advance science has made within the last ten or twenty years than I. But right here in the beginning I must break away from my subject to tell a story.

Margaret May charmed me by what I consider the higher traits. She was a sober girl of an intellectual type, with excellent principles and elevated ideals. I am not a man to be pleased with a gay, frolicsome girl, however kind hearted, however winning. It was, therefore, natural that I should yield to the characteristics of Margaret. We became engaged, and everything looked well for our future happiness when my fiancee began to show a succession of singular changes. One evening when I went to see her she bounded into the room like a hoiden, threw her arms about my neck, kissed me several times in rapid succession and, beginning with "You bad boy," upbraided me for not having come earlier. When I asked her for what she had wished me, she said that a circus had come to town, and she was "dying" to attend that evening's performance. Astonished, I asked her if the next night would not do as well. She said it would not, and when I pressed her for a reason the only one she could give was that she couldn't wait.

It was altogether too late to go to the circus that evening, so I spent the rest of it with her in the cozy library where we had passed so many happy hours, often taking book after book from the shelves, rambling in them together and calling each other's attention to favorite passages. But, alas, there was no such enjoyment for us tonight. Margaret spoke of the books as "musty, dusty things," in which she had no interest, and insisted in talking only upon the most frivolous topics.

It is needless to say that I was not only disappointed, but shocked. Could this be my steady, well balanced, intellectual Margaret? I was inclined to doubt it. Could it be her twin sister? I knew that she had no twin sister. I endured her prattle as long as I was able; then, telling her that I had some work to do before going to bed, I rose to go.

"And you will take me to the circus tomorrow night?" she asked, with a pout.

"Certainly if you wish it," I replied and when I could escape from an exuberance of caresses left her.

That night and the next day my brain was in a turmoil. I was like a man who had lost his love. I brooded instead of working till after office hours and in the evening called to take Margaret to the circus. The maid who received me at the door went upstairs to announce me and, returning, told me that Miss May was not feeling well and had gone to bed. There was no message of disappointment at missing the performance nor at not seeing me. Indeed, the maid told me that she thought her mistress had not expected me that evening. This would have been natural had it not been for the engagement, since it was an evening I seldom called.

The next of my usual weekly visits was Sunday, and I called, dreading to again find the hoiden. I was agreeably disappointed. Margaret was her usual self except that she showed signs of overstrained nerves. Something told me to refrain from mentioning her singular personality when I had last seen her, to wait and observe. During the visit and the next two visits she was her own sweet self, barring her altered health. Finally I referred to her desire to visit the circus. She seemed surprised, mystified, and when I told her the whole story said, with a nervous tremor, "Oh, she'll ruin me!"

"Was some one else than you with me that evening?" I asked.

"Yes—no. I was with you, but she dominated me." And she hurried out of the room.

I was not admitted to see Margaret—indeed, I did not care to see her; I was dissatisfied—for a month. Then I called on her. What was my surprise to find her a different person from either of the two I had known. From the moment we met she talked of women's rights, women's voting, women's superiority to men and finally told me that if I interfered with her in any of these objects to which she proposed to devote her life we must proceed by separate paths.

I left her maddened. Had I not been puzzled as well I would have broken my engagement then and there, but curiosity prevented. Several months passed in which I continued to visit her, hoping that she would settle down into her old personality resolutely. When she was another I would turn away from her; when she was my own Margaret I loved her still the same. As the hoiden I found it possible to be amused with her; as the "strong minded" woman I could not endure her. I was not able to get the real Margaret to talk of the other two, but from hints she dropped I inferred that she knew of their existence, and she hated them.

One day I received a call from a psychical specialist. He informed me that Margaret was under his care; that two other personalities besides her own appeared to inhabit her body and at times dominated her. By psychic methods of his own invention he was trying to enable her to dominate them and thus return to a normal condition.

He succeeded, the intruders were driven out, and Margaret is my wife.

BIG SCHOOL BUILDING

Chicago to have the Largest in the United States

School Architect Dwight H. Perkins of Chicago recently completed his first drawings of the proposed $2,000,000 commercial high school and school building to be erected at Harrison street and Plymouth court, Chicago. The structure as planned is unlike any other school building in the United States, having seventeen stories above ground and four basements. The basement stories will have the school supply department and the heating and ventilating apparatus. Above these there will be in succession a great assembly hall for teachers' meetings and [illegible] exercises, the commercial high school and the offices of the board of education and of its various departments. A unique feature of the plans is a truck elevator, which will lower the largest coal wagon bodily to the last of the four basements.

Tassel Earrings a New Freak.

This is a freak season for jewels. Quaint, old fashioned rings have been as popular as the old fashioned pendent earrings, which have been generally worn, though they seem to add years to the most youthful face. Now the craze for fancy jewelry has taken the form of tassel earrings. These are seen usually as seed pearls in tassels that drop an inch or two from the ears. They are even more barbaric in effect than the pendent pearls and diamonds and also tend to rob the wearer of the appearance of youth.

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

✱ ✱ ✱ ✱ ✱ ✱

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the former subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent in his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

The first vote on the election of United States senator will take place in the legislature at noon tomorrow, each house voting separately. At noon on the following day, the two houses will meet in joint session and ratify the election. Just what the vote will be is impossible to tell, but judging from reports received from Salem Governor Chamberlain will be elected on the first ballot.

The city council will met in regular session ths evening and as the standing committees have now been appointed, there will be considerable business that has been pending taken up and acted upon.

The house committee on rivers and harbors has voted against a general appropriation bill for river and harbor improvements. The committee will report a bill providing for carrying on important work already begun, for surveys of urgent projects proposed and for any emergencies which may arise. This bill probably will carry not to exceed $10,000,000. Undoubtedly an appropriation for continuing the improvements at the mouth of the river is included in the above, but whether or not the measure will provide for repairing and operating the dredge Chinook is not known. It is to be hope, tho, that it will, as dredging is the one way in which to secure ample water on the bar in a short time.

In an editorial touching on the need of laws governing the building of public highways, the Capital Journal says: "But one feature of good roads legislation that is needed is to give idle men a chance to work on the roads. By idle men we include those in the city and county jails and the idle men in the legislature we mean in the penitentiary. Tramps in jail and out of jail, and men who are not tramps, who are stranded and cannot get work, ought to have a chance to work on the roads. This kind of an act should be drawn on humane lines, and whenever such persons can make wages at anything else they ought to be let do it. But there are hundreds of men the state over who, if they were systematically set to work on the highways could accomplish much. Their labor would be cheap labor and it would be better for them to be breaking rock than to be mere burdens on society. There ought to be some way to get work out of the idle rich, as well as the idle poor, and they will have to be taxed. There are enough unemployed men lying in the city and county and state prisons to build ten miles of road a week if their labor could be utilized. A road bill that would get these elements into the harness and make them contribute to the building of better highways and at the same time give them a chance to earn an honest living, ought to interest the members of the legislature. A good road bill merely to make some fat offices is not wanted."

The London Globe predicts that the ideal city of the future will be horseless. It says that motor vehicles are now driving horse drawn vehicles out of London. While that city has grown in size immensely within the past few years, the number of horses in use there has become smaller. Cleaner and less crowded streets have followed this substitution of motor cabs trucks and omnibuses for the old style.

If the horse must be cut out of city traffic in this country, it is evident that he will go in glory. Exhibitions of horses used for commerce in large American cities show that this nation now recognizes the merits of the draft horse better perhaps than ever before. The streets of every large city give proof daily that fine horses are the pride of horse owners and of the employees who have care of the animals. Horse owners have always liked the best. The sensitiveness about taking another man's dust operates in the city. The fine horses of the fire departments, the express companies and the breweries stimulate the attention of all horse owners and drivers in their choice of stock and the treatment of it when at work. In a few years the American draft horse will be at his best, and it will be a pity to cast him aside.

Lyman Abbott asks if anybody can explain the mystery of life and death. Some people explain life and death as nature's ordinary way of doing things with no mystery involved.

If the men who were behind the original "shooting up" of Brownsville had worked in the open, they would have spared the nation a lot of shooting up on the side.

With a white Christmas to cap the glorious autumn season, this country is still in the "finest climate on earth" class.

As to Kissing

"Did a man ever kiss you against your will?"

"No, but some have thought they did."—Harper's Weekly.

As Modified.

The usual crowd of loafers were seated around the stove in the village grocery.

"I never lied to my wife in my life"—began one of the bunch, when he was interrupted by a unanimous laugh that was loud and long.

—"that I didn't get caught at it," ended the speaker after the laugh had subsided.

Whereupon silence reigned supreme for nearly twenty-three seconds.—Chicago News.

ABOUT ASTORIA

W. J. White, representing the Pacific Paper Company of Portland, was in the city today looking after the interests of his company.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Carlstad, of Deep river, Saturday afternoon. Both mother and child are getting along finely.

Navigation on the Columbia and Willamette rivers is gradually being resumed since the tie up on account of the ice and word is received the steamer Lurline will come down on her regular run tomorrow.

James Aldredge of Svensen who was taken into custody on Saturday on a charge of insanity, was examined by the county board today and ordered discharged, as his mental condition has shown a decided improvement.

The ladies intending to join Mrs. Tyra Kolander's gymnastic class are requsted to meet at the Astoria Amateur Athletic Association hall, instead of at Foard & Stokes, hall, at 7:30, sharp, this, Monday, evening.

Late Saturday evening, L. Mansur was stricken with a partial stroke of paralysis. As this was the third attack, considerable alarm was occasioned, but today he is much improved and Dr. Finch reports the indications are favorable for his recovery.

Robert A. Brodie and Edward E. Brodie, formerly of this city, have purchased the plant of the Boyer Printing Company in Portland, assuming charge today and will conduct the business in the future under the name of the Brodie Printing Company.

A petition was filed in the city auditor's office this morning by Van. Dusen & Co asking that Cedar street between Fifty-first and Fifty-fourth streets, be improved by grading to the full width and that Fify-second and Fifth-third streets be improved in a similar manner. The grade on these streets was recently re-established.

Several dump cars were taken over to Deep river this morning to be used in theconstruction of the 400 foot tunnel that Olson Bros. will dig this spring to facilitate the operation of their logging road. The tunnel will not only shorten the road considerably but will cut out the most dangerous part of the present road.

A number of Astorians will be in Salem on Tuesday to watch the vote for the U. S. senatorship by the two branches of the legislature. While they all announce that they are going simply out of curiosity yet it is known that all are personal friends of Senator Fulton and hope that something may happen to permit his election.

The French bark Asnieres which began loading lumber a few days ago at the Hammond Lumber Company's mill for Melbourne, is employing her own crew to handle cargo and as a result only about 2000 feet an hour or 18000, feet a day is being placed in the vessel's hold. As the bark is to load 1,500,000 feet of lumber at this mill, the indications are that she will be ready for sea in about four months unless the rate of loading is increased.

It is understood that within the next few weeks the Astoria Columbia River Railroad Company will put three or four construction trains into service hauling gravel with which to ballast the road its entire length in anticipation of the heavy traffic that is expected in the near future.

The condition of the local water situation is gradually improving altho it is evident that some of the consumers are still leaving their service pipes open at night. This mornig the water in the big reservoir was about three feet below normal, a gain of four feet since Saturday. In addition to the waste by leaving service pipes open there is also considerable waste from breaks in pipes which have not yet been repaired.

Samuel Bartlett, an employe of the Finck cooperage plant at Brookfield, had one of his hands badly lacerated on Saturday by having it caught in one of the machines. He was brought to this city for attention and it was found necessary to put in 41 stitches. With the exception of losing one finger his attending physician, Dr. Pilkington, believes that the full use of the hand can be restored.

Sam Nass arrived this morning on the steamer Breakwater from Prosper, Oregon, where he attended the stockholders meeting of the Prosper Canning Company. The reports of the officers showed that the company was in a prosperous financial condition from the result of the operations of the past year. The following board of directors was elected: R. W. Bullard, Sam Nass and C. L. Herman. Later this board met and elected the following officers: R. W. Bullard, president; E. H. Fish, secretary; Sam Nass, general manager.

A surprise party was given Mr. and Mrs. Atnone Enberg on Saturday evening in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding day. About 150 of their personal friends gathered at the McGregor mess house, where Mr. and Mrs. Enberg were summoned to meet them and the evening was most enjoyably spent with a musical and literary program, after which refreshments were served. A handsome solid silver set was presented to the guests of honor, the presentation speech being made by Hon. W. F. McGregor.

The city council will meet in regular session this evening and among the business to come up will be ordinance providing for the appointment of a committee on judiciary, to grant a 30-year franchise to the Oregon Coast Railway Company over certain streets in the city, to equal the assessments, accept the construction and pay the contractors for building a sewer on Irving avenue and Eleventh streets and a sewer on Fifty-first street. There will be a resolution authorizing the ways and means committee to employ experts to examine the books of the various city offices as is done at least once each year.

The storm of the past week put an effectual stop to operations on the construction of the Lytle road from Buxton toward the Nehalem valley althou it is probable work will be resumed as soon as the snow is off the ground. The severe cold and snow storms put an end even to the winter work outlined by contractors. They were forced to call off their forces and suspend all activity while the strom continued. The principal work to be done on the east end of the road through the winter is some tunnel-boring, clearing right-of-way and rock work. But little grading can be accomplished during the winter months. On the Tillamook end of the road, however, the snow has not fallen sufficiently deep to interfere with work, nor has the cold been severe. Construction forces have not been interrupted to any extent by the storm.

That the Freenh ship Alice is a total loss with her cargo of cement is now an established fact and there is no chance of saving any part of her except what may be washed ashore as wreckage. At low water the seas broke over her on Sunday, being twisted and bent and fast settling in the sand. Edward M. Cherry, Lloyds agent and French vice Consul Labbe visited the scene on Sunday and took in the situation. The consul decided to have the Captain and crew remain in comfortable quarters there until arrangements are perfected through the French consul general at San Francisco is consuled with as to their disposition and the ordering of a court of inquiry as to the circumstances that led up to the wreck. Mr. Cherry has requested Captain Veysey, Lloyds surveyor, to make a survey of the vessel officially and if his report suggests that she cannot be saved bids will be asked for, probably for the sale of the ship, as she is as well as her cargo.

First citizenship papers were granted at the county clerk's office today to John Thomas Simon, a native of England.

C. R. Higgins and family who have been visiting for sometime at Los Angeles, are now stopping at Pasadena for a few weeks.

The convention of the State Federation of Labor is being held [illegible] beginning today [illegible] delegates from here left last evening to attend the session. They are I. H. Lowery, representing the teamsters, R. [illegible] Hayner, representing the local labor council, Wm. Olson and Wm. Bell, representing the carpenters, August Nelson and Albert Johnson, representing the bartenders and H. M. Lorntson, representing the fishermen.

Manager Whyte of the chamber of commerce, who spent Saturday and Sunday in Portland with Tom Richardson of the Commercial Club of that city, says that Portland business men are on the alert because of the promise in most tangible form that Harriman will build a Central Oregon railroad and begin construction at once. Mr. Richardson thinks that this railroad constrfction down through eastern and Central Oregon will cause Oregon to grow more rapidly during the next few years than ever before and more rapidly than any other state in the union. There is no doubt in the minds of all the members of the Portland Commercial Club that eastern and central Oregon has long been at a great disadvantage because of the lack of railroad facilities. It seems to be a well settled opinion in the minds of Portland business men that the Harriman road will be built from the Nehalem into Astoria in the very near future, perhaps by the end of the present year. At the Commercial club banquet, given Saturday night, in an address Mr. Whyte called attention to the fact that the Port of Astoria did not have any ice during the recent cold spell while the Port of Portland was fozen up. As there were 100 good substantial Walla Walla business men present the remark seemed to make a hit which may develop more or less practically. Somebody told the story about the Astoria salmon. This story was to the effect that a salmon in Astoria never knew whether it was swimming in the water or in the air unless it struck its head against an anchor chain. Mr. Whyte told the story about a friend who one time wrote him a letter from Walla Walla saying that they had a thousand feet of dust there, one foot of dust on the ground and 999 feet in the air.

MARINE INTELLIGENCE

The four masted schooner Virginia was towed over to Knappton this morning to load lumber at the Columbia mill for San Francisco.

The oil tank steamer Rosecrans left out for California on Sunday.

The steamer Rose City, that was delayed in the upper river by fog, left out on Sunday morning for San Francisco with freight and passengers.

The four masted schooner Robert R. Hind arrived in this morning from San Francisco to load lumber.

The steamer Alliance, which is now installed with wireless telegraph, left out this morning for Coos bay with freight and passengers.

The steam schooner Rainier arrived in this morning from San Francisco to load lumber.

The oil tank steamer Argyll arrived in on Sunday from California with a cargo of fuel oil.

The steamer Senator arrived in today from San Francisco with freight and passengers.

The steamer Breakwater arrived in this morning, a day late, from Coos bay with freight and passengers.

The motor sloop Condor, which has been barbound down the coast during the recent bad weather, arrived in port this morning with a cargo of dairy products.

After an uneventful voyage of 118 days the fleet of light vessels and light house tenders which left New York last September reached San Diego Sunday. The fleet consists of the lightships Columbia River, Swiftsure and Relief and the tenders Sequoia, Kukui and Manzanilla. Captain Mertz is in command. The fleet has made a voyage of 14,000 miles without a mishap. The vessels will remain there until Wednesday and then proceed San Francisco and latter be distributed. One lighship will probably be stationed at Astoria, and the third will be placed somewhere along the middle coast.

Nick Stanovich of Clifton has paid $560 for a $300 piano, he having the piano and the other man the money and how he can get the difference back is a question with him and with the officials whom he has consulted. It happened in this way that the conditions arose. A couple of months or more ago a man by the name of Parks represented a Portland piano house in Astoria and sold his wares to the people of the surrounding country. Stanovich agreed to buya piano for $300 from him and after it was delivered Parks called for his money. The purchaser only had a check for the Columbia River Packers Association for $560 and indorsed this in favor of Parks, the later giving him his personal check on an Astoria bank for the difference. Parks had sufficient funds in the bank at the time to meet it but after a few weeks wihdrew it and left for parts unknown. A few days ago Stanovich presented the check for payment and found that there were no funds to meet it but learned that if he had presented it within a reasonable time it would have been good.

Some ten years ago a young man by the name of Mark Thiede was employed as a blacksmith by the Bremner shop on Twelfth street and had many friends in this city. He was almost perfectly built physically and took a pronounced interest in all athletic sports, being especially good at football. All the young men and boys of that time will remember him well and will regret to read the following account of his accidental death: "A Seattle dispatch says that Mark Thiede, blacksmith was asphyxiated by illuminating gas in his room, at 2304 Seventh avenue. Saturday morning. From the position of the body, the coroner believes the man after the fumes awakened him, started to get to the window and fell unconscious before he reached it. Thiede had a small gas heating stove in his room. It was from that stove that the gas escaped. The gas had been but partially turned off, but the flame was extinguished. The room was filled with gas when Thiede was found."

The vote was Jones, 128; Cottrill, Democrat 6; Goodyear Democrat 1; absent 2. Jones was elected on the first ballot. The vote in the house was taken shortly afternoon and the vote in the senate at one o'clock. Jones was nominated in the house by L. O. Meigs and in the senate by S. J. Cameron. The vote will be canvassed in joint session tomorrow at noon.

ANTI-JAPANESE LEGISLATION

Roosevelt Making Effort to Prevent It.

Washington, Jan. 19—Senator Flint in commenting on the report published at Sacramento that Roosevelt, has taken a hand in efforts to stop anti-Japanese legislation by the California legislature, stated that the president is determined this legislation shall not be enacted until after the Californians have had pointed out to them the injustice of their attitude toward the Japanese.

The president is proceeding on the theory that Japan has stopped the emigration of coolies and is doing everything possible to remove the cause of friction between the two countries, says Flint. The California senators will aid the president in holding up legislation pending a full explanation of the federal government's position in the matter.

HARRY THAW HAS OBJECTION

To Being Tried in a New York Court

White Plains, Jan. 19—The counsel for Thaw today asked Justice Tompkins to rescind the order granting Thaw a trial in New York county to determine whether or not he is now sane. It was upon application of Mrs. Mary C. Thaw, Harry's mother, that on Saturday last Justice Tompkins issued the order for trial. The justice did not allow a jury trial. Thaw wanted a hearing before a jury in Duchess county.

FLAMES SWEEP OVER MESSINA

Serious Conflagration Among Ruins of City

Messina, Jan. 19—There is a serious fire today among the ruins of this earthquake wrecked city. The flames are spreading in spite of the efforts of the soldiers to control them and the situation is serious. The odor of burning flesh is mingled with the smoke and it is feared persons who are still alive are being consumed. The flames had their center at the Pennesi palace, but quickly spread over the ruins of the city.

GOVERNOR CHOSEN ON FIRST BALLOT

Wins Contest by Majority of Seven on Total Vote—Many Members Explain Vote as Fulfilling Pledges to the People

Salem, Jan. 19—Governor George E. Chamberlain, Democrat, was elected on the first ballot today by the Republican legislature to the United States senate to succeed Senator Charles W. Fulton, Republican on March 4, 1909, by both houses. Governor Chamberlain's election comes as a climax of a long and more or less bitter contest between the supporters of statement No. 1, and its opponents. The effort to break the support of Chamberlain, however, collapsed last night, at the Republican caucus when it became apparent that nothing could stop the governor's election on the first ballot. The candidates for the legislature had the choice of three platforms. They could subscribe to statement No. 1., statement No. 2, or run unpledged. Statement No. 1 is a promise to vote in the legislature for the candidate receiving the highest number votes, irrespective of his political affiliation. Statement No. 2 was a promise to vote only for the candidate of the party and not the people's choice.

The popularity of Statement No. 1 is apparent from the complexion of the legislature for of its 90 members 52, mostly Republicans, subscribed to Statement number one, thus binding themselves to vote for the popular choice, in this case Chamberlain, a Democrat. This gave Chamberlain on joint ballot six more votes than was needful to elect him.

The vote in the house was: Chamberlain Dem. 34; Fulton Rep 12; Cake, Rep. 14. Senate, Chamberlain Dem. 19; Fulton Rep. 7; Cake, Rep. 3; Bean Rep. 1. Necessary to choice on joint ballot, 46.

In both houses he voting for Chamberlain was accompanied by many instances of written and spoken explanations, expressing regret that the votes cast in favor of Chamberlain were under pledge made to the people at the June election. In the house Money, of Coos and Curry counties, explained he was unpledged but desired to carry out the will of his constituents who by a large majority selected Gov. Chamberlain as their choice for United States senator.

COAL MINERS MAY STRIKE

Trouble Anticipated at British Columbia Mines

Winnipeg, Jan. 19—There is great unrest among the coal miners engaged at the Southern Alberta and British Columbia mines and before the renewal of the two years agreement on April first, five thousand men may strike. This means a great shortage in the supply at the Montana and Washington camps, also at the Spokane, Helena, and Butte smelters, besides tying up the coal supply of the Great Northern, Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern Railways. The men demand increased pay.

BLACK HAND USES DYNAMITE

Factory of Wealthy Italian Blown Up

Scranton Pa., Jan. 19—The macaroni factory belonging to Nicholas Fazio was badly damaged by a dynamite explosion presumably the work of the Black Hand society, early today. Fazio, his family and four employes who occupied rooms over the factory were buried in the wreckage and sustained injuries. Windows were blown out of the Arlington Hotel and other buildings within 200 feet of the explosion. The failure of two sticks to explode saved that section of the city from serious damage. Seven Italians are under arrest. Fazio is quite wealthy. He had a similar experience three years ago because he ignored the Black Hand demands.

HUMPHREY MAKES REPORT

Returns From Trip to Panama Canal

Washington, Jan. 19—Representative and Mrs. William E. Humphery and Representative Francis W. Cushman have returned to Washington from their trip to the Panama Canal with members of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce. Discussing conditions along the canal, Mr. Humphrey said:

"There is absolutely no ground for criticising or condemning the work being done on the Panama Canal. Good progress is being made and the work is being done in a substantial manner. There was never any occasion for sensational stories about the slide in Gatun dam. It was just such a slide as might occur on any new railroad fill. I have seen twenty more serious slides along the Great Northern Railroad between Seattle and Everett.

"Nor is there ground for fear that the slopes of the canal are going to slide into the canal and choke it. There are slight slides along the right-of-way, but they are being overcome by practical engineering and will not be a menace to the canal when completed.

"From a sanitary standpoint, the canal zone would rank with any section of the United States, and living there is not only endúrable, but it is enjoyable. I find that the only kickers are discharged employes."

... FRANCHISE FOR STREET CAR ...

Ordinance Submitted to Council Last Evening

The city council met in regular session last evening with every member present and Mayor Smith occupied the chair. At the opening of the session the auditor announced that Chris Schmidt, whom the recount had declared elected as councilman from the Second ward over George Kaboth, had received his certificate of election and had taken the oath of office. Mr. Schmidt was then seated as a member of the council and was received with hearty appalause. He responded by thanking the councilmen for the square deal given him in making the recount.

Petition for retail liquor licenses form John O. Tyberg, Durham & Dibble and Carlson Bros, and one from the American Importing Company for a wholesale license were referred to the committe on health and police and upon the recommendation of that committee licenses were granted to Sund & Carlson and S. E. Harris. A petition from Wm. Bell tendering $36.25 in payment of the assessment against his property for the improvement of Franklin avenue was referred to the ways and means committee and city attorney. Petitions to improve Thirty-ninth street and to improve Cedar, Fifty-second and Fifty-third streets were referred to the street committee. A petition to construct a system of drains to replace the Adair drain was referred to the street committee, and surveyor. A communication from the mayor appointing the standing committees was filed. The mayor announced that in selecting the committees he had attempted to be fair in every way. He said that each member of a committee has as much to do with the work of the committee as the chairman. It is the duty of the latter to call the committee together, but the committee should act as a whole.

A communication from the Astoria Savings Bank asking that steps be taken to protect its property at the corner of Second and Bond from the dirt which is being dumped on it in the improving of Commercial street was referred to the street committee. Street Superintendent Kearney submitted a list of streets which are badly in need of repair or improvement and the report was referred to the street committee, which will meet on next Wednesday morning to investigate the various streets. A report from the police commission asking that $200 be set aside for use of the department in emergencies, that lincoleum be placed on floor of department office and that cots be provided for the big cell, was referred to the health and police committee. The annual report of the chief of the fire department was read and referred to the fire and water committee. The annual report of the city surveyor showing that the street and sewer improvements last year amount to $135,402.26 and showing the expense of his office to have been $3408 was referred to the street committee. The report recommended that bids on streets be asked for the various classes of work and contractors be not required to bid on the entire work unless they desire, as much expense can be saved in that way. The street superintendent reported that an inspector is required to have charge of the improvement of the alleyway in Uppertown. He also stated that Jens Nelson has been suggested by the property owners and he recommended the apiontment be made. The matter was referred to the street committee with power to act. The report of the surveyor on the grades at Irving avenue and Seventh street was referred to the street committee. The reports of the auditor, treasurer and city attorney, were referred to the ways and means committee.

An ordinance granting a 30-year franchise to the Oregon Coast Railway Company was read the first and second times and referred to the ways and means committee and city attorney. An ordinance to vacate the east 40 feet of First street in the Hinman tract the first and second times and referred to the street committee, and attorney. Ordinances were read the first and second times as follows! Accepting the construction of the street sewer; making appropriations for the various departments of the city government, defining the duties of the various departments of the city government, defining the duties of the various standing committees and providing for the appointment of a judiciary committee, appropriating $348.50 to pay Chas. Johnson for Irving avenue sewer, appropriating $484 to pay Chas Johnson for Fifty-first street sewer, appropriating $576.10 to pay Astoria Crushed Rock Co, adopting the report of the surveyor on laying out street thru block 69, McClures.

Resolutions were adopted providing for a meeting of the board of equalization on January 30 to hear objections to the assessments for Irving avenue, east of the Shively line, for constructing the Seventeenth street sewer, for improvement of Jerome avenue and for constructing Fifty-first street sewer; authorizing the ways and means committtee to expend not to exceed $100 in employing two experts to examine books of various city officers.

WIRELESS TRAIN IDEA

Brings Dispatcher in Direct Touch with Engineer

The actual control of running trains by wireless telegraphy took a step forward when the Union Pacific railroad recently equipped one of its locomotives with a wireless device by which a train dispatcher may sit at his desk and send an order right into the cab of any locomotive on the line of the road within "talking distance" of his machine, says the Washington Star. And, since "talking distance" is governed only by the strength of the current and can be lengthened at will, it will be seen that the new discoveries of the railroad's wireless expert, Dr. Frederick Millenet will forever put an end to those accidents that have often resulted when some telegraph operator failed to deliver a train order which had been sent him.

In an emergency of this kind the train dispatcher will now simply touch a telegraph key, and far out on the railroad line, in the cab of the locomotive which is in danger, a gong will begin clinging, and before the eyes of the engineer a red light will flash, while a miniature semaphore, painted red, will rise to the "danger" position, and both the engineer and fireman will know there is deadly peril ahead for themselves and their train.

As yet only the one locomotive has been equipped with the wireless apparatus, but so well does this operate and so satisfactory is its work that it is only a question of a short time until every locomotive on the system is fitted with the safety device.

With wireless sending stations every hundred miles along the main line, Dr. Millener says the dispatchers will be in absolute touch with every engineer on the road at every minute and will be able to communicate with either should it become necessary to do so.

The instruments are simple and compact. The sending apparatus which is placed in the shops of the Union Pacific in Omaha occupies less space than any wireless sending apparatus ever built.

The current, generated by a dynamo, goes into an interrupter at 220 volts and there is transformed and transferred into between 700,000 and 800,000 volts. Franklin plates are used as conductors. A Massey cooling device is used to keep the disrupture discharge points cool. In the tuning coil the alternating current is changed into a high voltage oscillating alternating current, from which it is conducted to ground and anchor cap and thence to the antenna, where it is discharged into the air.

The antenna on the cab of the locomotive picks up the current, carries it down into the cab and into the receiving instruments within a brass box not unlike a fire alarm box. On the front of this box is the big gong, whose ringing can be heard above any noise that can be made by the locomotive. Just above this gong and on the face of the box are the little red semaphore and the red danger signal, and when the gong sounds the semaphore goes to "danger" and the red light flashes.

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.

I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

PLAN TO HELP BOYS

Philanthropist Will Give Cent a Day to Iowa Teetotalers

To every boy in Iowa who will take a pledge to use neither tobacco or liquor Samuel Saucerman, a wealthy Des Moines resident, will give a dollar, a cent a day for three years and another dollar at the end of the three years, says a Des Moines dispatch. At the same time he urges the boys who accept his proposition to save the nickels and dimes they would otherwise have spent for tobacco and alcoholic drink and put them with their account. He has figured out that if the boys will do this none will arrive at the age of twenty-one years without having enough to take them through college or give them a good start in life.

Mr. Saucerman is reputed to be worth $1,500,000. The new organization he is perfecting to help boys is to be known as "the trimmer band." To demonstrate his earnestness he has deposited in the name of "the trimmer band" $5,000, which is drawing interest.

The plan as outlined by Mr. Saucerman is to take boys from the age of nine to sixteen and organize them into plants or companies of fifty or a hundred. He would have these boys hold monthly meetings, at which time they would discuss and be taught economy, finance and how to earn money, clean living and everything in line with industry and morals. Each boy on joining the club will receive $1. The boy must deposit with his dollar 50 cents to show good faith. Starting his bank account with $1.50, each boy will receive a penny per day for three years, and at the end of that period he will receive an additional $1. This will give him $12 if he has not saved a cent himself. He urges all boys to save their nickels and dimes so as to be prepared to start life right.

The pledge each boy takes on joining "the trimmer band" is to abstain from "tobacco in any form, intoxicating liquors, gambling of any kind and profane and slang language."

Mr. Saucerman has already organized one club in Des Moines. He is not going to be content with accepting the boys who will come to him. On the contrary, he has hired out of his own pocket a state organizer, who is to travel all over Iowa inducing boys to do away with their bad habits and start bank accounts at the Des Moines philanthropist's expense. J. B. Hammond has been secured as an organizer.

The Only Safe Way.

"No, I can't stay any longer," he said, with determination.

"What difference does an hour or so make now?" asked a member of the party. "Your wife will be in bed and asleep, and if she wakes up she won't know what time it is."

"Quite right, quite right," he returned. "I can fool my wife almost any time as long as I get home before breakfast. Why, I've gone home when the sun was up, kept the blinds shut, lit the gas and made her think that it was a little after 12. But, gentlemen, I can't fool the baby. I can make the room as dark as I please, but it won't make the baby sleep a minute later than usual, and when she wakes up hungry it comes pretty close to being morning, and my wife knows it. Gentlemen," he added as he bowed himself out, "I make it a rule to get home before the baby wakes. It's the only safe way."

A Dog Story.

At a farmhouse at which we have been staying a terrier, Rough, shares always his master's first breakfast, the bread and cream accompanying a cup of tea. Three corners he breaks off and gives to Rough, who eats the first two. Off the third he licks the cream, then carries the crust to a hen who each morning comes across the field where the fowls are kept and at the gate awaits her friend's arrival. Should others of the hens appear, Rough "barks them off" while his favorite devours her portion.—London Spectator.

A Tremendous Task.

The Disaster In Italy

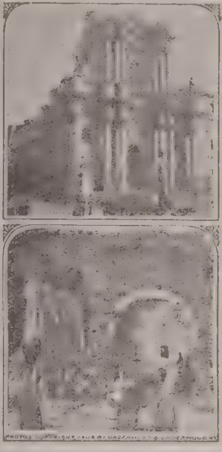
The Historic Places In Sicily and In Southern Italy Which Have Suffered Recently From Earthquake Shock.

The Calamities of the Past In the Same Districts — Efforts of the King and Queen to Succor the Distressed.

THE recent earthquake shocks in the island of Sicily and in Calabria, which is in the southern portion of Italy, created much suffering, in addition to widespread loss of life. In many portions of the districts affected the people have been afraid to dwell within the walls of their homes, [illegible] if the latter were not destroyed. The uncertainty of the situation for many thousands has filled all Italians with the deepest distress, for they fear the day when that part of the country which seems to have been most blessed by nature will be destroyed by the blind forces which nearly nineteen centuries ago overwhelmed Pompeii and Herculaneum. All reports show that the present catastrophe constitutes one of the greatest calamities recorded in history.

Calabria and Sicily form the center of the earthquake district in this part of the world. The last serious earthquake in Calabria occurred on Sept. 8, 1905, when about 3,000 persons lost their lives, while over thirty towns were destroyed. Two thousand two hundred alone were reported as being buried at Martirano.

Calabria forms the southern part of the former kingdom of Naples. The full force of the present earthquake seems to have centered on Sicily. The two principal cities affected there are Messina and Catania. The former is almost at the extreme northeast point of the island and is divided from Calabria by the strait of Messina. It is in close proximity to Mount Etna.



THE SPLENDID CATHEDRAL IN SYRACUSE, SICILY, AND A TYPICAL SCENE IN MESSINA.

Messina, next to Palermo the chief commercial town of Sicily, with upward of 90,000 inhabitants, is situated on the strait of Messina and is overshadowed by a range of rugged, rocky peaks. It has experienced many vicissitudes. It was founded by Cumaean pirates and Chalcidians about 730 B. C.

It was an important place in the time of the Romans and bore a part in the naval wars of Caesar and Pompey. In A. D. 843 Messina was taken by the Saracens, who in turn were dispossessed by the Normans in 1062.

During the eighteenth century Messina was overtaken by two overwhelming calamities—a fearful plague in 1740, from which 40,000 persons died, and an earthquake in 1873 which destroyed almost the entire town.

The calamities that have visited Italy and Sicily have endeared the Italian king and queen to their subjects, for they have been untiring in their efforts to succor the distressed and protect those in distress. King Victor Emmanuel had no sooner learned of the earthquake shocks which created such terrible havoc in Sicily and southern Italy than he at once made ready to proceed to the scene of the disaster. He was hunting near Naples at the time. He first proceeded to Reggio, in the department of Calabria and at the center of the upheaval which destroyed so many towns and sacrificed so many lives in this part of Italy. The queen was with him. When their majesties left the train at the station one of the deputies who addressed the king observed:

KING VICTOR EMMANUEL III.

"The presence of your majesty will suffice to console the stricken population."

The king turned sharply upon the speaker and said abruptly, "Don't talk nonsense."

The incident indicated the depth of his emotion. When the violence of Vesuvius created so much terror in the spring of 1906 and when the ashes and lava from the burning mountain buried populous communities, overwhelming hundreds of people and driving thousands from their homes, both king and queen exerted themselves to the utmost in the work of relief. The king himself went often into danger in his anxiety to see that everything possible was done. Since the recent disaster occurred he has been still more active. He gave $40,000 from his private purse to the relief fund, and the queen, too, contributed a large sum from her personal fortune. The king also directed the ministers of war and marine to hurry supplies to Messina and other places along the Sicilian and Italian coast where the shock of the earthquake, the tidal waves of the sea and the rumblings of the volcano, Mount Etna, had combined to create a reign of horror and desolation.

REX E. BEACH.

The Young Author of "The Barrier" and Other Popular Stories.

One of the books of fiction now most in demand at the libraries is "The Barrier," by Rex E. Beach, a comparatively young author who after having passed through many exciting experiences in a little known quarter of the globe where life flows at full tide, now shows an ability to write stories of unusual vigor and freshness. His first novel, "The Spoilers," took everybody by surprise. He is one of those authors who write in that apparently easy, offhand way which is only possible to the most original. Not long ago at a dinner given by Colonel Harvey of Harper's to Mark Twain on the occasion of his seventieth birthday Mr. Beach made a speech which appealed to all his hearers as something altogether new in the way of after dinner addresses and proved him to be a humorist of a very high order. Indeed, Richard Watson Gilder when asked in an interview a short time afterward whether there was a successor to Mark Twain in sight replied, "I noticed at Colonel Harvey's dinner the other night that there was a successor to Mark Twain standing plainly 'in sight' of his distinguished master, and I noticed that his distinguished master was immensely amused by the art of his successor."

FINE WHITE STRAWBERRIES

Can Be Grown in Winter Says Their Creator

A white strawberry which will grow throughout the year and is superior to the common red strawberry, which survives but a few months, is the latest plant creation of Hugo Lilienthal, landscape gardener and horticulturist of Berkeley, Cal., who is the chief organizer of juvenile horticultural societies in the bay cities.

According to Lilienthal the new berry is capable of propagation in the depth of winter and is of perfect form and flavor and much more delectable than the red strawberry of the markets.

He declared that the berry may be planted in close rows, which interferes not at all with its productiveness. A small patch of the new strawberry, he said, will keep a small family supplied throughout the year.

Dangerous.

"If I exposed my throat and lungs the way you do," complained the father of the beautiful maiden, "I'd be a dead man inside of three days."

"Of course you would," she sweetly replied, "although really I don't believe lynching ought ever to be resorted to for anything."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Cruel Precaution.

"I have an idea that those new neighbors of ours are great gossips, but I can't find out."

"Why not?"

"You see, their cook is deaf and dumb, and none of the girls in the block understand the sign language."—Baltimore American.

Envy.

"Julius Caesar's literary attainments were truly wonderful," said the student.

"Oh, I don't know," answered the discontented youth with inky fingers. "Anybody could get his stuff published with a pull like Julius Caesar."—Washington Star.

The Main Task.

Mrs. Stubb—A regiment of woman soldiers would look wonderfully imposing, John. You wouldn't have any trouble telling them to fall in.

A new kind of country road, a combination of asphalt and macadam, is suggested in an address made by Amzi L. Barber, who has spent most of his life in the asphalt business. A macadam highway, with a strip of asphalt in the middle, he said, was the hope of the future, the only highway to stand the heavier loads and the ever-increasing automobile traffic. In the course of his address Mr. Barber quoted government statistics to show how large a proprotion of the country's wealth was produced by farmers, and what a small share of the government appropriations, comparatively, was devoted to their interests. Largely on account of the unimproved state of the roads, he said, the mere hauling to markets and to shipping points costs the farmers of the country $662,000,000 every year. The speaker reviewed the progress of the good roads movement in recent years, and advocated extensive government aid. "It is only a question of time," he said, "until such appropriations will be made. They are as necessary for good roads as for rivers and harbors, or for post offices. The farmrer has the same right to demand quick delivery, which is possible only a good road, that the city man has to demand fast mail trains and frequent delivery by city carriers."

No news that has been received by the people of Oregon during the last twenty-four months is so important as the announcement that the trans-continental railroads will make a rate, beginning March 1 and continuing until April 30, from Kansas City, Omaha, St., Paul, and Minneapolis, Winnipeg and other similarly situated towns, to all railroad points in Oregon, for $25. The people of no state in the union have profited more by these one-way tickets than have those of Oregon during the last four years. The rate from Chicago is $33, from St. Louis $30.50, with a proportionate low fare from all points in the United States. This should add many thousands of actual settlers to the population of Oregon. These are one-way tickets, and if travelers desire to return to their former homes homes in the older eastern states they would have to pay full fare. Every commercial club and advertising bureau in the state, as well as every real estate firm, should begin immediately to advertise these rates. Every citizen of Oregon should write personal letters to all old friends and acquaintances reminding them that the rate is good to their town. But the ticket must be bought to the point of destination. It's just as cheap to the most distant region point as to one just over the border of the state.

Secretary Garfield asks for a reservation of some 2,000 acres of "tufa" land in Arizona for the benefit of the San Carlos Indians. "Tufa" is a kind of stone, known as white ash, which can be easily carved when quarried but hardens in the air. The idea of the secretary of the interior is to get the Indians busy at some useful employment- for which he is to be praised, however problematical his experiment may be.

As a rule, the eulogists of the late Donald G. Mitchell try to prove too much. Not the generation that produced Ik Marvel nor the one following that has alone had the good taste and spiritual insight to read and appreciate "Reveries of a Bachelor." Young people of the present have not only discovered for themselves the treasure house opened by the genial Ik Marvel's pen, but often have made its riches known for the first to their seniors. The philosopher of the simple life found his audience early, yet no period has neglected him.

Even the embarrassment of literary riches poured out the last few years could not make the "Reveries" a back number. Readers who have their Kipling and Jerome K. Jerome by heart will turn to Ik Marvel for an antidote to weariness. One can be surfeited with flippancy as well as with sentiment. Ik Marvel's sentiment was of the wholesome sort. He wrote for the sound hearted, not the soft headed. His ideals appeal to the twentieth century, and possibly it will be more loyal to him than was the century which revealed him. To the past he was an entertainer; to the present he is mentor and confidant.

The new woman on the stage was evidently shipped "from somewhere east of Suez, where the best is like the worst," but what particular land is responsible for her can never be guessed from her taste in the matter of clothes.

It is a relief to learn from the manager of the Pullman company that the tipping of porters is purely a voluntary matter. Most travelers find it a case of "down with the dust" or no dusting.

Doubtless Standard Oil folk don't care a bit whether the newspapers call it "that $29,000,000 fine" or $29,240,000, but to the common people $240,000 is not a trifle to be lost sight of.

If ever hostilities between congress and the president go too far the kaiser's fellow feeling will be likely to see the "psychological moment" before the czar's gratitude gets awake.

England also has its somebody who says things about other folks. Recently Premier Asquith called the house of lords "a set of irresponsibles."

Mrs. Potter told the convention of ladies that her doctor said that good coffee properly made would not hurt any one. She said to buy Folger's Golden Gate whole roast, have the grocer grind it, or grind it at home.

EXTENSION OF STREET CAR LINE

Company Urged to Make Improvements This Summer

Astoria, Oregon, Jan. 18, 1909.

Editor Budget: While the people of Astoria are considering different projects calculated to improve the city, I would like the opportunity in your valuable paper to call attention to the importance of extending the trolley line of the Astoria Electric Company to Hammond's mill.

About a year ago most of the property owners of Alderbrook petitioned the Astoria Electric Company to extend its line from the present terminus at 46 St. to the mill, but at that time, after consideration, the petition was not granted by the electric company on account of the financial stringency then existing. There are a great many benefits to result immediately from the extension of the electric car system to Alderbrook and the Hammond mill, which I think are of sufficient importance to justify the business men of Astoria in making a special effort to secure the extension. Alderbrook is one of the best residence districts of the city, and there is a large amount of level and sitely land for home building in that vicinity, where laboring men and mechanics could secure lots on which to build houses at moderate prices. On account of the location of the large Hammond mill, Alderbrook presents the only suitabe location for any new mills to be built in Astoria for the reason that in filling cargoes to be shipped foreign, it is necessary for two or three different mills to act together in furnishing a cargo, and it is essential that they be in the near neighborhood of each other, and while one mill cannot well undertake to load a large vessel, two or three together can do so, and at the same time supply their regular customers. Two or three mills together can also dispose of their waste to such better advant age, either for power purposes or other wise, than one mill alone. And if said electric line were extended, it would be a great advantage in inducing new mills to build at Alderbrook. There are new mills being erected continuously along the Columbia river, and there will be new mills erected each year for the next ten years at least, and Astoria should use every effort to secure their erection here for the reason that two more large mills here would make this a first-class lumber port, and would add at least four thousand to the population of Astoria.

If the line were extended, in addition to helping the city, it would undoubtedly be a benefit to the electric company itself, because in addition to building up that portion of the city which would result in greatly increasing travel between the upper and lower portions of the city, it would give the electric company an opportunity to secure fuel for power at a greatly reduced rate from what they are now paying so that the saving in this line would soon more than pay for the extra cost of extending the line. Moreover, I believe there are fully one hundred and fifty passengers on an average per day that patronize the company from beyond the eastern terminus of its line, and should the line be extended, I feel certain that within two years the number of passengers would be increased at least threefold.

The streets have been mostly improved from the terminus of the line to the Hammond mill by property owners at heavy expense and the street car company has received a great deal of benefit from these improvements, and I think that the management of the street car company is liberal enough to understand the importance of being progressive and keeping their line up to the public requirements if the matter were properly brought to their attention by the commercial organization of the city. While Cedar street along which the line of extension would necessarily run was graded and planked about seven years ago, the street will soon require repairing by replanking or macadamizing, and it is very important that the extension of the street car line be made contemporaneous with the repair of the street.

Hoping that this matter will be taken up by the commercial organizations of the city and proper efforts made to secure this important improvement I, remain,

Very respectfully yours,

R. M. WOODEN.

CAPT. R. E. HOWES DIED LAST NIGHT

Rounded Out Successfully Seafaring Career

Captain Richard E. Howes died at his residence on Exchange street on Monday evening of heart failure after an illness of a couple of weeks with liver trouble, with which he had been affected for some time. The arrangements for his funeral have not been definitely decided but it will be held on Thursday from the First Presbyterian church, the services being conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. S. Gilbert, and the interment will be in Greenwood cemetery. The funeral will be under the auspices of Astoria lodge B. P. O. Elks, of which he was an honored member, and the active pallbearers will be from the members of that lodge while the honorary pallbearers will be from the bar and river pilots. Captain Howes was a man of interesting and popular personality as every one who had the pleasure of meeting him immediatedly became his friend and he was never known to say but a pleasant and kindly word for everyone. If he had lived until today he would have been 63 years of age but until his recent illness was as active and energetic as a man of forty. His birth place was in Cape Cod, Mass., and started to sea when he was twelve years old and continued it until his illness. Early becoming a Captain he sailed to every part of the globe in different vessels but his most interesting was several trips to Iceland. At that time there were few charts of value and he had to search for the ports by his own suggestions but never made a mistake. His successful history as tug boat captain on the San Francisco and Columbia river bars are well known as well as he rounded out his life as a Columbia river bar pilot. Locally there is universal regret over his death and his widow and son receive profound sympathy in their loss.

MOTOR BOAT CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

Prospects Bright For The New Organization

The members of the Astoria Motor Boat Club met in the rooms of the chamber of commerce on Monday evening for the purpose of adopting a constitution and by laws and the election of officers and the business was carried with dispatch and with the most harmonious spirit. It was decided that the meetings shall be held on the first Friday of each month until May and from then until November on the first and third Friday of each month. The election of officers resulted as follwos: Dr. Frank Vaughn, commodore; James Keating, vice commodore; E. O. Judd, rear commodore; F. C. Fox, secretary; R. L. Knight, treasurer; R. E. Carruthers, Arthur E. Peterson, A. R. Johnson and N. Troyer, trustees The club begins its existence under the most favorable auspices and the members are enthusastic over the prospects of deriving much pleasure and enjoyment through it. Though the thought has not been worked out it is more than probable that the club will in the future assume the management of the annual regattas.

"SHORE ACRES"

Next Saturday night Manager Hanlin will present the great play entitled "Shore Acres" to his patrons of the Astoria theatre. It is doubtful if there is another play upon the stage today, or has been in the last quarter of a century, which contains so much to interest all classes of theatre goers, as does "Shore Acres," the late James A. Herne's famous play of country life on New England yet country life in New England is not very different from country life elswhere, as the customs and method of life of country people are very much the same in every section of the Republic. Archie Boyd is playing the part of "Uncle Nat" which was created by the author himself. Mr. Boyd has for many years been identified with plays of this character, such as "The Old Homestead," "The Village Postmaster" "The Country Squire. "Way Down East and so on.

WANT BRIDGE OVER NEHALEM

Petition Being Circulated At Jewell and Elsie

Jewell, Jan. 18,—1909.

Editor Budget:—The people residing in road districts 13 and 15 are circulating a petition to have a wagon bridge constructed across the Nehalem river at a point near David Tweedle's place, between Elsie and Jewell. There are some fifteen or twenty farmers living on the south bank of the river who are shut off from using the road to Astoria about seven months out of the twelve on account of not being able to ford the river. It is to the interest of Astorians in general that this bridge be constructed, there by gaining a large percentage of trade which now goes up the river to Mist and Clatskanie. It is hoped here that the county commissioners will take favorable action looking towards the construction of this bridge in the near future.

Your correspondent is reliably informed that the creamery recently conducted by John C. Lange at Mist, and which failed, is to be re-organized and a stock company formed among the farmers. A meeting looking to that end will shortly be held at Jewell.

There is a general feeling of satisfaction among the farmers in our neighbrohood over the action of the county court in raising the bounty on cougars, wild cats, etc. The depredations of these animals among the sheep, goats, and hogs, have been of frequent occurrence this fall and winter and have been a growing menace to the stock growers. Chas Gronnell residing near Elsie killed a cougar recently which measured nine feet, seven inches. One was also killed near Jewell last week which measured five feet eight inches in length.

Wm. Medley and family who left here last fall to locate in Washington state, have returned to Jewell, and have moved onto the old Wage place for the winter. Billy says there's no place like Nehalem after all.

Claude Phair and family recently of Jewell, are now located in Centralia, Wn., where it is understood, Claude is conducting a cigar and confectionnery store.

What might have been a serious accident occurred during the recent cold snap the other morning at the home of Jas. Jamieson. It appears, Mrs. Jamieson was preparing breakfast, when a terrific explosion in the range took place, blowing lids and pancake griddle thru ceiling and roof, and completely wrecking their fine range. As good luck would have it, no one was hurt. The explosion was caused by the water pipes freezing up.

The scalp hunters are getting busy, Willie Wage and Frank Medley brought in two big wildcats Saturday, which they shot in the woods near Jewell. It is to be hoped that the good work will be continued until the cougars and wildcats are exterminated, or at last thinned out, then perhaps there may be venison on the tables occasionally.

C. D. Smith has taken a place up the river, near Mist, and is busy with team and sled moving his household goods before the snow disappears. The road leading up the river is in pretty bad shape for wagon traffic just at present, with small prospects of it improving any until next summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reevel, Nee Wage, recently from Alberta, Canada, are spending a few days, visiting with old friends in the valley.

The heavy rains of the last two days, accompanied with a warm Chinook wind have taken off what remained of the seventeen inches of snow which covered the ground during the late cold snap, thereby causing the river and smaller streams which empty into it, to rise very rapidly, tho no danger of a flood occurring is anticipated. Farmers generally are thankful that the snow came, otherwise, the fall grain would have been destroyed by the hard freeze.

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

✻✻✻✻✻✻

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

ABOUT ASTORIA

A. V. Pendleton arrived down from Portland last evening to attend the meeting of the state board of pilot commissioners.

Martin Franciscovich has awarded a contract to L. Lebeck to place a new foundation under his residence on Thirty-third street.

Joe D. Strauss and Mrs. Strauss who have been visiting their mother in Boise Idaho, have left for a trip to Chicago and other eastern cities.

Ed. Reed, arrived down from Linnton at noon today, to do some mechanical work at the Hammond Lumber Company's mill.

The county court will meet in adjourned session tomorrow morning and quite a number of matters in connection with proposed road improvements will be taken up.

Superintendent Johnson of the water department has a force of men at work repairing the six-inch main on Taylor avenue. The main is broken in several places and will have to be practically replaced.

The state board of pilot commissions is in session this afternoon with Chairman Pendleton, Commissioner Taylor and Clerk Ross present. The only business to come up is routine matters such as paying current bills.

Terry McKear lately manager of Richard J.Jose company is now living in San Jose, Cal. at liberty looking for chance to manage a house or go on the road as an advance agent. Terry is a good honest young man and has had considerable experience.

The steamer Miler has again resumed her regular trips to north river points and will leave her wharf regularly every afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The resumption of her running has been fully appreciated at her several stops and has practically given assurance of increase business in the future.

Blown up by the strong southwesterly wind the tide today reached fully a twelve foot stage and flooded many cellers but as far as could be learned no serious damage resulted from it in the immediate vicinity. The indicated tides was to have been 8 feet 9. inches.

During the recent cold spell the trappers, who have been trying to work in the Cathlamet channel for silversides, have had their traps and gear entirely carried away by the ice floods and they are a total loss. Six traps in all went out and the total loss is fully $12,000 with no insurance or chance of recovery.

On the tide flats, opposite Fern Hill in the Columbia, a fish boat has been tied up since Sunday last with sail and oars in it and marked Oregon 956. This morning some of the residents of the vicinity took charge of the boat and are holding it for its owner. It is feared that it had contained a hunting party and that they had left the boat to hunt for ducks and were lost. The owner of the boat will explain the mystery of it if he can be found.

In the appointment of the standing committee of the Oregon house of representatives made by Speaker McArthur yesterday afternoon, Leinenweber was made chairman of the committee on fisheries and was given a place on the committee on salaries of state officers. McCue was given the chairmanship of the committee on revision of the law and was also made a member of the ways and means committee.

City School Superintendent Clark has issued a special invitations for the parents to visit the several schools of the city on next Friday afternoon when the teachers will have copies of the written work of pupils ready for inspection and the visitors will also have an opportunity to listening to the oral work. Mr. Clark plans to establish what shall be known as parents day at least once each term.

The ordinance now pending before the council to grant a franchise over certain streets in the city to the Oregon Coast Railway Company, is practically the same as the measure which was passed by the former council. It provides that the franchise must be accepted and a deposite of $1000 be made with the city treasurer within 90 days, to be forfeited in case of the line is not built. It also provides that work on construction must be commenced within one year and a line around Smith's point to the Young's bay drawbridge must be in operation within two years.

The debate between teams representing the Astoria and Tillamook high schools, which was set for January 20, has been postponed for one week at least and no definite date has been fixed as it is not known positively when the Tillamook pupils can reach here. As there is so much extra work in preparing for the series of debates, the local school authorities are considering the advisability of allowing pupils, who are members of the debating team, credit for one study in their school record for the work incident to participating in the debates.

Proposals for the largest federal lumber order received for some months will be opened at Washington, D. C. on January 26. The bids asked are to be for ties only and will amount to enough to make a cargo direct for Panama. The requisition is for 200,000 standard Oregon fir ties, 258,000 feet of switch ties, 500,000 feet of fir ties of various dimensions, 200,000 cross ties and 8000 of special dimensions. Delivery is for April 1 at Santa Cruz. In connection with this requisition it is stated by the chamber if commerce that the American. Hawaian steamship company will with this week inaugurate a twice a month service between here and Panama, which is the same service enjoyed at San Francisco.

Street Superintendent Kearney has submitted to the council a list of the streets which have once been improved and which must be reimproved or repaired at once or be closed to travel, in order to avoid accidents. The list is as follows: Bond street, between Ninth and Fourteenth, underpinning bad and dangerous for heavy traffic; Commercial street, between Sixth and Ninth, in very bad condition; Duane street, Tenth to Eleventh, underpinning bad; Commercial street, Fourteenth to Seventeenth, needs new decking; Eighteenth, Exchange to Grand, must be improved or closed; Thirty-third, Franklin to Harrison and Harrison, Thirty-third to Thirty-fifth, completely worn out; crossing of Thirty-seventh and Commercial, in bad condition. The report also says the Adair drain is all "shot to pieces," and the property in that section has slid more during the past three months than in seven years before.

Florence Roberts and her company, which appeared at the Astoria theatre recently, were put to flight Thursday night in Medford by a fire that originated under the stage of the theatre. The fire was entirely in the rear of the theatre and the audience of 700 was kept in ignorance of it until every precaution had been taken that there should be no panic. When the flames were discovered, Miss Roberts and her follow-players escaped through the rear exits into the street. As the group fled, Miss Roberts forgot her purse and, against the remonstrance of friends, dashed back to her dressing-room and recovered it. She was forced to make her way through blinding smoke, but was not injured. The fire was extinguished by stage hands, who chopped a hole through the floor and fought the flames with snow and water.

Action in libel was commenced in the United States court at Portland yesterday on the French bark Rochambeau, J. E. Hatton, engineer on a lightering raft, is the libelant. He alleges that on January 5, while the Rochambeau was discharging ballast, he was compelled to cross the upper deck in order to reach his position at the donkey engine on the lightering raft or scow. Owing to the slippery and icy state of a hatch he was tripped and his right kneecap fractured. He asks $5000 damages.

At the meeting of the state board of pilot commissioners this afternoon resolutions in memory of the late Commissioner Farrell were adopted as follows: "Whereas, it is with regret that this board has learned of the death, since its last regular meeting of Mr. S. Farrell, one of its members, Resolved, that we hereby express our sorrow at his sudden and unexpected death that this board fully realizes that, in his death, it has lost a wise and useful member and its members have lost a genial and wholesouled friend and companion, and, Resolved, that we hereby extend to the family of the deceased our sincere sympathy in their bereavment and that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this board and a copy sent to the family of the deceased."

The report of Fire Chief Foster submitted to the council last evening shows that during the year 1908 there were 73 fires with a total loss of $56,988 on which the insurance amounted to $36,716. The expense of maintaining the department the year is given as follows: Salaries, $9430.56; maintenance of horses, $1505.30; repairs to engines, $1906.46; repairs to wagons, $89.30; working supplies, $14,123.70; additional equipment, $1459.68; house expenses, $498.97; repairs to buildings, $1395.33; total, $17,477.68. The value of the property owned by the department is given as $26,500. The report recommends the purchase during the present year of 1000 feet of fire hose, a storage battery for the alarm system, a bell striker and the removal of the bell from its present location to the department headquarters, a smoke helmet, two Eastman deluge sets, a heater to keep two engines warm, a chief's buggy, five fire alarm boxes, 300 feet chemical hose, three sets double harness. The report also recommends that steps be taken to improve the fire protection in Uniontown and Alderbrook and that a salt water main be laid along the principal streets of the city.

The southeast storm of Monday was one of the severest ever experienced in Astoria, with a velocity of wind rarely equalled and continued for eight hours without any interruption. At times it reached a hurricane velocity and the people living on the hill above the city were generally alarmed. The exact velocity in the city cannot be accurately determined but at North Head which is protected from such winds, it blew at the rate of 70 mlies per hour. The damage resulting in this city and vicinity was considerable, many fences being blown down and the fronts of J. T. N. Calloway's office, F. A. Stokes' store and the Oregon Milk Depot were blown out. The railing of the Uppertown roadway was ruined and the railing approach to the lower Lewis and Clark bridge was carried away. The capping of the city hall roof was torn loose and many roofs were more or less damaged.

F. McKercher who was the author of a very helpful letter on the transportation situation of Astoria last spring upon seeing a copy of the annual report of the chamber has addressed another letter to Manager Whyte in addition to what he had already said as follows: "It is simply exasperating to see Portland organizations and press absolutely going out of their way, both as to convenience and veracity in order to deny to Oregon the possession of one of her most valuable assets. We sit here with one shilling three pence against us in favor of the Sound charters, when if we would develop and use that asset we could have one shilling three pence against the sound! I really think Portland would prefer that the Sound, rather than Astoria, have the advantage. Harriman finds it cheaper to absorb this one shilling three pence in charters than to deliver the goods at Astoria, and Portland, willing to profit by any kind of transportation scheme, becomes a party to the combine, and thinks she has eliminated her disadvantage instead of shouldering them upon the railroad. Astoria is robbed in either case."

MANY PERISH FROM FLAMES

Terrible Accident at Chicago Water Crib

Chicago, Ills., Jan. 20—Twenty-three men lost their lives today in a fire, which destroyed the intermediate water supply crib, one and a half miles from shore in Lake Michigan. Forty-five others suffering from burns, cuts or immersion in the icy waters into which they jumped saved their own lives or were rescued. The statement of casualties is made by George W. Jackson, whose company was constructing the in-take tunnel under the Lake and of which the crib served as a base of operations. The dead men are supposed to have been imprisoned in the tunnel under the crib. The men worked in the tunnel under air pressure. Little hope is expressed that any of them escaped, as they might have died from fire, smoke of the exploding dynamite which occurred, or the breakage of the pipes, which supplied them with air.

A telephone message from the crib at one o'clock this afternoon says twenty bodies have been recovered and more are at the bottom of the shaft.

CHAMBERLAIN ELECTION SAFE

Was Ratified by Joint Assembly Today

Salem, Jan. 20—The election of Chamberlain as United States senator to succeed Charles W. Fulton was ratified in joint assembly today. The opponents of Chamberlain declare he will not be seated saying that they have positive assurance that the committee on election will not seat him, for the reason they say that Oregon's method is distasteful and liable to create a general movement in the states for similar laws for election of United States senators.

SALEM SOLONS PRESENT BILLS

Senate Refuees to Act in Polygamy Matter

Salem, Jan. 20—The sterilization of the criminal insane was the object of a bill in the legislature this morning. It is advocated by physicians and others and is likely to arouse considerable debate. A bill was introduced in the house today prohibiting "Frats" in all Oregon schools. It is approved by school superintendents and others as frats tend to create class distinction On account of so many hunting accidents a bill was introduced that anyone shooting another for a deer is guilty of manslaughter.

The senate refused to memorialize congress to adopt measures suppressing polygamy on the grounds the states can take care of the matter without federal interference.

SCENE IN TAORMINA AND ROCK OF SCYLLA.

The famous rock of Scylla, marking the entrance to the strait of Messina, is in the heart of the earthquake zone of southern Italy. It was first reported that this historic promontory, which ancient navigators feared when traversing the whirlpool of Charybdis, had crumbled and fallen into the sea. Taormina, where so many ancient ruins stand, was only slightly shaken by the upheaval.

FRAZIER TALKS OF BROWNSVILLE

Opposes Re-Enlistment of Negro Soldiers

Washington, Jan. 20 Senator Frazier of Tennessee today spoke on the Brownsville affair and opposd the passage of any one of the pending bills for the re-enlistment of the negro soldiers of the Twenty-fifth regiment, who were discharged without honor by President Roosevelt. Frazier's remarks were of special interest as he was a member of the committee on military affairs, which investigated the Brownsville incident, his views being those of a Southerner, who had intimate knowledge to the race. He opposed any treatment of a negro different to that accorded whites under similar circumstances. He said a negro should not be treatd as a ward of the nation, as many people and the negro himself seemed to think should be the policy of the government.

PROFESSOR BELL AND HIS AIDS IN AERIAL EXPERIMENTS.

Alexander Graham Bell the aged inventor, is a most ardent believer in the practicability of aerial navigation and hopes to improve the means of flight already discovered and demonstrated by the Wright brothers. It was with this idea in view that he planned his tetrahedron and provided, with his several youthful aids for a series of elaborate experiments at Baddeck, Nova Scotia. The tetrahedron is an absolute novelty in aerial craft and comprises, in its application to heavier than air flying machines, some absolutely new ideas.

WILL SEE A NEW TURKEY

"Turkey will be like Japan. You will find that from this time out she will make wonderful strides forward and upward. She will become the wealthiest, the happiest and the best country of the world. Her people are bright, her young men are ambitious, and with the good government she is now to have we can expect much from her."

This is what Bshara George Couri, a diamond merchant known all over New England, a resident of Portland, Me., has to say, says the Boston Herald, of the recent government reforms in Turkey.

Mr Couri is well educated and energetic, has been in this country about twenty years and has been very successful. He is a naturalized citizen and is educating his children in the Portland schools.

Mrs. Couri, a handsome woman and finely educated, is a graduate of the American school in Tripoli, Syria. She has been in the United States for about ten years.

"For the women the reforms will mean much more even than they do to the men," said Mrs. Couri. "The women at home now are appearing on the streets without veils. They will soon be treated and regarded as are American women, and the change will mean so much to them and their children. The Turkish women of all religious beliefs are fine women in every way. They are ambitious, and they are anxious to be freed from many of the customs which have prevailed for centuries. No one knows what all of these changes mean to these women, but within a few years the world will recognize the fact that there has been a great change and one which will be greatly to their advantage."

Mr. Couri has had an interesting career. For years he has been one of the Young Turks' associates, a band of ambitious and patriotic young men who have labored at all times for the freedom of their country.

"Until now I have never spoken of it," said Mr. Couri. "I didn't dare to say much about it because of the feeling against the Young Turks at home. But today we rejoice. We have freed our country. I tell you that there never was any country like America. It is a paradise, the real home of freedom, a place where a man is a man and a woman a woman, where human kindness prevails, where all religious beliefs are tolerated, where those of every faith work together for the common good. I don't believe you know, you people who were born here, what it is to be an American citizen. I am proud of this country, and I love it as I do my children and my wife.

"But my own home, my own Turkish country, is my first love. It is a grand country, with great possibilities. For centuries we have been laboring to cast off the yoke which held us down. Today it has been cast aside. We are no longer a country of slaves, but a country of freemen. Ten years from today you will not know Turkey or its people. Japan has been the wonder of the world. I believe that you will recognize that Turkey is the most wonderfully progressive nation the world has known in that time. She will duplicate what Japan has done.

"The Young Turks of the best families in Paris, Berlin, Vienna, New York, everywhere, were working all the time to make the people free. No people on earth ever fought as bravely or suffered as much for freedom as have the Turks. When the whole story, as many of us know it, is written it will make all of the other struggles for liberty pale into insignificance beside it. Eighty thousand men, and good men, too, bright men, brave men, noble men, sacrificed their lives for their country.

"At home everything handicapped the man who tried to succeed. Over here it is different, and it will be different now in Turkey. Today they write me that business men are already beginning to branch out and increase their business. There are coal mines, gold and silver and copper in Syria and other parts of Turkey. These mines will now be opened up and the people at home will make money. The Young Turks want a large navy, a big army and a good system of education.

"The sultan, Abdul Hamid, means right. He is all right now, I think. I like him now that he has granted to our people their liberties.

"You people over here know little of the work it has been to bring about all of these things.

"I remember when my brother came back from America, where he had become a naturalized citizen. He stood on the streets at home and said, 'You people want to be free like the Americans.'

"'Hush; don't talk so loud,' men would say to him; 'the soldiers will kill you or drag you away to prison.'

"'They don't dare to,' said my brother. 'I am free. I am an American citizen, and I can say what I please, anywhere I like. That is what freedom means. You can talk without hiding behind the door or running when you see a soldier.'

"The soldiers heard my brother talk and scowled upon him. The old men trembled for his safety, but he wasn't afraid. Other Young Turks did the same thing. Men got together and talked it all over and read the papers which were sent them and dreamed of freedom. The Young Turks abroad kept up the work. Like yeast it soon began to leaven the whole country, or the most intelligent part of it. Thousands of dollars were sent to help this cause along. I wouldn't dare now to say how much or who sent it, but it was sent. Thousands, yes, millions of dollars, as much as was needed, and finally this magnificent Miazi Bey delivered his ultimatum, and it had its effect, and what seemed to be the impossible was brought about without bloodshed.

"You people don't appreciate what it meant to thousands of homeless wanderers when the sultan opened parliament the other day. It means life to Turkey, an awakening of a giant that has been sleeping. Mark what I tell you, ten years from today Turkey will be making more rapid strides than any nation in the old world."

RAILWAYS SIN IN IGNORANCE

Plea Made Before Chicago Court Today

Chicago Jan. 20 Pleading that railroads are often ignorant of the law when they commit offenses, the Chicago & Alton railroad asked today for a rehearing of the case in which it was fined $60,000 for paying rebates to Schwarzchild & Sulzberger. The petition for a rehearing was filed because the supreme court was equally divided and failed to make a ruling.

The payment of $1 a car for the use of the packing firm's sidetrack was the act upon which the case was based and the railroad holds that unless this is permitted it will force every line in the country to own all side tracks leading into industries.

The following statement made in the petition is considered one of the most remarkable pleas ever taken into court.

"A man may embezzle the funds of a bank or shoot at another to kill. In either event, unless he is insane, he knows in advance that his act is a crime. On the other hand railroad men are surrounded by doubt and perplexity, and of ten can not know in advance that their acts are crimes"

THE KANGAROO GIRL.

Her features are peachy, her eyes are bright.
Her lips are for kisses that clasp and woo.
Her neck is a carving of creamy white,
But
Why
Does
She

Her hair is a midnight of maddening joy,
Her form is a Psyche's, and swains would sue.
And Cupid would capture, the wise young boy,
Except That

ROBIN HOOD NOT A MYTH

Hero of Sherwood Forest Had Place Under Edward II

Many famous men have their names linked with Sherwood—King John, the three Edwards, Richard III., Cardinal Wolsey and Charles I.—but the hero of the place, the "genius loci," is Robin Hood.

Some think that the famous outlaw of the ballads was a myth, a mere poetic conception and a creature of the popular mind, but Mr. Hunter in his research into the person and period of Robin Hood holds that he was born between 1285 and 1295, living through the reign of the second Edward and into the early years of the third. He was of a family of some station seated near Wakefield and supported the Earl of Lancaster in his rebellion against the government. When the earl fell and his followers were proscribed Robin Hood took to the woods and supported himself by slaying the wild animals found in the forest and by levying a species of blackmail on passengers along the great road which united London and Berwick. This continued for about twenty months, from April, 1322, to December, 1323, when he fell into the king's power, who for some unknown reason not only pardoned him, but gave him a place at court. Anyhow, a man of the name of Robyn Hode was a "varlet" of the king in 1324.

Dr. Spencer T. Hall says that Robyn was created Earl of Huntington by a London ballad writer hard up for a word to rhyme to Little John. Be this as it may, Robin Hood will always be the hero of romance, and those who love romance will refuse to believe that he never existed.—London Globe.

Mansfield's Lonely Meals.

There were two meals which Mansfield always ate alone—breakfast and the light repast of broth and oysters late in the afternoon. An empty stomach attacked his nerves and set his temper on edge. In the morning he was in no convenient mood until he had the invariable coffee and bacon. After a somewhat rigid abstinence during the balance of the day and evening the fatigue of a performance edged his nerves till his midnight supper, which, with a troop of friends about him, warmed him into the sunniest humor of the day. A book or play was the companion of his solitary meals.—Paul Wilstach in Scribner's.

The Very First One.

The visitors in the historical museum gazed curiously at a small feather pillow which nestled in a glass case.

"I don't see anything unusual about that pillow," remarked one of the visitors, turning to the guide.

"It's a very valuable pillow," replied the guide. "That is Washington's original headquarters."—Lippincott's.

A Zoological Question.

The director of the zoological gardens was on his vacation. He received a note from his chief assistant, which closed thusly: "The chimpanzee seems to be pining for a companion. What shall we do until you return?"—St. Louis Republic.

Two Words.

"There are two words that I feel sorry for."

"And they are?"

"Blithering and egregious. Nobody ever uses 'em except to call some one an idiot or an ass."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Following a Trail.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Of all the trails I ever followed the longest was in tracing a murderer.

Just before taking it I was employed to look into the loss of a $25,000 diamond ring. It belonged to Louis Bamberger. He missed it one day, and I was sent to his house incog. to investigate. He didn't know when the ring had been taken, since he had not seen it for a fortnight at least before he missed it. It was kept in a bureau drawer in his bedroom.

For ten days I kept my eyes open, followed up every clew, however slight, but made no headway whatever. I told Mr. Bamberger that if any one in the house had taken the ring I couldn't find out who was the criminal. I gave up the job.

A month later I took a murder case. While driving along a country road in the neighborhood of the scene of the murder on a fencepost I noticed something that resembled a Masonic symbol. It was a circle and a triangle roughly cut, the circle overlying the triangle, one of the angles of the latter being acute. I pulled up beside the post to examine it. Any one but a detective would have likely considered it the work of some idle boy. I did not regard it so lightly, but I had not then a knowledge I gained afterward which would have enabled me to decipher it. I drove on much puzzled.

Later I came to a point where another road joined the one I was on. Not a hundred yards before reaching the fork I saw a duplicate of the circle and triangle carved on a tree standing a short distance from the road. It at once occurred to me that these symbols indicated a route. Again I stopped and studied. I noticed that the acute angle of the triangle pointed in the same direction as the one I had seen cut on the post, a direction the reverse of that in which I was driving. Ten miles farther on the murder had been committed the traces of which I was looking for. If these signs continued at intervals to a point near the house of the murder I had made an important discovery. I drove on, watching for the sign, and saw two, each at a road fork or crossing.

On the way I passed the Bamberger house and a mile farther on came to the house of the murder. A mile and a half before reaching the latter the road forked, and I found the circle and angle. This was the last signal in that direction. I turned and drove back past the symbols and two miles beyond the first I had seen came to another, then another and another, driving till it was too dark to see them. Then I put up at a farmhouse and spent the night.

I expected that I might have a chase before me lasting several days, but I never dreamed of what I had really undertaken. Every morning I would start out, drive all day, seldom having to do much hunting for the symbols, and turn in at night, hoping the next day to come to the end of my pilgrimage. I had started from a point near Cleveland, followed the "blazed" route across Illinois to St. Louis, thence to Topeka, thence to Santa Fe, a distance (as the crow flies) of some 1,400 miles. On reaching Santa Fe I examined every route leading in every direction, finding no symbols on any of them.

By this time I had done a good deal of thinking and had come to the conclusion that some one was showing the route to some one else. Had the some one else arrived? I examined the last symbol carefully and saw that it was fresh cut. I had no clew to discover the person who had been showing the route, so I determined to look out for whoever might be following. There was a house near where the last symbol had been cut, and I took a room there, watching all day from my window or while sitting on the porch. I felt confident that I should discover some one who had been engaged in the murder. He would not travel at night, for he could not see in the dark the signals intended for him any better than I could.

One morning six days after I had begun my watch a tramp came down the road. I was in the yard at the time cleaning my revolver. As usual, upon seeing any one approach I kept my head bent down, but my eye on the tramp. The moment he caught sight of the symbol I knew that I had found my man. He made no secret of his interest. Why should he? He was some 1,000 miles by the shortest roads from where the first signal had been cut near the house of the murder. He went up to the circle and angle, looked at it squarely and was proceeding on his way when I covered him with my revolver and ordered him to throw up his hands. He turned white, put his hands over his head, and I ordered him to walk on ahead of me toward Santa Fe, a few miles distant.

Taking him to a police station, the first thing I did after getting there was to search him for evidence connecting him with the murder. What did I find? A ring set with a tremendous diamond.

Well, to close up, it turned out that about a week before the Bamberger diamond was missed a couple of tramps stopped at the house and were fed there. Being left alone by a careless servant, one of them found opportunity to go upstairs and took the diamond. After leaving the house he left his pal and went ahead with it, cutting symbols to guide the latter, who followed. At the third signal the advance man buried the diamond, and the follower took it up.

I got $5,000 for the gem's recovery.

CHAUNCEY WARDWELL.

The Power of Song.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Queen Margaret Caroline Frances Josephine Stephanie Lucille Eulalie de Laganza succeeded to the throne at twenty under the title of Margaret III. From her earliest childhood she had shown an independent disposition. In these times she would be a suffragette, for she believed not only in women having a voice in the government, but in their governing. Scarcely had she been proclaimed when she startled her people by calling for the resignation of the cabinet and filling the places made vacant with women.

The queen filled other offices with women, and the men were standing about, holding their hands. Then, a fat political job being given to a woman, the men thought it time to bestir themselves. They sent the most accomplished, handsomest and most seductive men to the queen on one pretext or another, hoping through her heart to attain their ends. But the queen saw through their designs and laughed at them.

One day a knot of politicians hungry for plunder were discussing the situation when a little, half deformed, homely man said to them: "If you will back me up I will go to the queen and accomplish those things you desire. All I want is a suit of fine clothes."

A shout of laughter greeted his offer. Then some one suggested that for a joke it be accepted.

Not long after this the queen received a message that a special ambassador from a neighboring sovereign had arrived with a view to making a treaty.

Margaret expected to see a man of imposing appearance and, being somewhat timorous of such men, steeled herself to meet him. She was surprised to see a man barely five feet three inches high, with long arms and legs and a slight curve in his back. Nevertheless his head was large, and he possessed one feature of remarkable beauty and intelligence—his eye.

Margaret unbent to this insignificant creature at once, assigned him a wing of the palace and as soon as he was ready—he seemed in no hurry—began to talk over the terms of the treaty. Whenever the queen made a demand for a slice of territory, a payment of indemnity or any such matter the ambassador would say in a soft voice: "Your majesty's modesty in your demands is what is to be expected from a woman of such loveliness. I shall advise my sovereign to double the amount you claim."

There was no difficulty in making a treaty on such terms, and the queen closed the negotiations, delighted with the envoy. Then the treaty was sent to the other sovereign interested for confirmation, and the ambassador, obliged to wait for an answer, returned to his apartments.

That night the queen heard a voice singing in the ambassador's wing, accompanied by a guitar. It seemed to her that it was the voice of an angel. She listened till the song had ended and, not hearing more, sent a request for the singer to resume. He did so, and Margaret went to bed filled with the most entrancing thoughts.

The next day on inquiry she learned that the singer was the ambassador. She asked him to sing to her, but he excused himself, saying that the spirit of music came to him only in accordance with its own sweet will. It came, however, on balmy nights from a pleasant distance and sounded especially sweet when the moon cast its soft light over the palace and the grounds in which it stood. Queen Margaret always listened to it sitting at her bedroom window and continued under its spell long after it had ceased. Gradually the singer and the song became one. Of the homely body nothing remained, but from the ambassador's eyes the queen saw a spiritual body of transcendent beauty, a soul that seemed to beckon her to a higher, holier existence.

Meanwhile during the day, there being no treaty to talk about, the queen began to speak to the ambassador about her affairs. Never had she heard such wisdom, such farsighted suggestions. He told her that such a queen as she would be a blessing to every people, but in all kingdoms there was low grade work that only coarse natured men could properly perform.

The treaty never came back, and the ambassador at last confessed that he was no envoy, but one who, having seen his queen from a distance, so worshiped her that he had been impelled to do a dishonorable act for the sake of passing a few weeks in her adorable companionship.

One morning the journals announced that all the ministers had resigned and their places were to be filled with men. Then the people waited for an announcement of the names of the members of the new cabinet. When the name of the prime minister was published no one knew him. At the first meeting of the cabinet a crowd surrounded the palace, every one anxious to get a view of him. One by one the ministers passed out till they had all left the palace except the man they most wished to see. Finally the crowd dispersed and left only a few loiterers on the sidewalk. Then a side door opened, and a man with a body like a pair of tongs stepped out and, like a crab, disappeared down the street.

"That's he!" exclaimed one of the loungers.

"That the prime minister!" exclaimed another. "Why, he sings in a beer saloon."

F. TOWNSEND SMITH.

MOHAMMED AND THE MOUNTAIN

His Vision of Heaven and the Story of the Angel

Halabi, the founder of Islam, was born at Mecca in the year A. D. 570. He died June 8, [illegible] at the age of seventy-two. He assumed the titular name of Mohammed, which means, according to some authorities, the "pre[illegible]."

One of the most extravagant relations which can be found in any language is credited to Mohammed. Speaking of the sights he beheld when [illegible] to heaven," he says: "I saw there an angel the most gigantic of all created things. It had 70,000 heads, each head had 70,000 faces, each face had 70,000 mouths, each mouth had 70,000 tongues and each tongue spoke 70,000 languages. All were employed in singing God's praises."

When Mohammed first announced his divinely inspired and appointed system the Arabs demanded supernatural proofs of his commission. "Moses and Jesus," said the Arabs, "wrought miracles in the testimony of their divine authority. And if thou art indeed a prophet of God do so likewise."

"It would be tempting God to do so," replied Mohammed, "and bring down his anger, as in the case of Pharaoh."

As the story is told in Brewer's "Phrase and Fable," the Arabs were not satisfied with this answer, and Mohammed then commanded one of the numerous eminences near Mecca to come to him. The mountain not stirring at Mohammed's bidding, the prophet exclaimed: "God is merciful. Had the mountain obeyed my words it would have fallen on us to our destruction.

"I will therefore go to the mountain."

Railroads Will Transport Free Car to Spread Medical Education.

Acting on the suggestion of Past Assistant Surgeon Colby Rucker of the marine hospital service, the California state board of health has in preparation a railway car laboratory to illustrate methods of preventing disease, says a San Francisco dispatch. Dr Rucker's idea is to install an exhibit showing how fevers, tuberculosis and the other diseases may be prevented.

The Southern Pacific company has provided a car, and both the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe Railroad companies will transport the car and its managers free over their lines in California.

Still More Up to Date Traveling.

Parlor cars on many railroads have long been equipped with electric curling iron heaters and other devices for the comfort and convenience of women who travel, and at last mere man is to get something in the way of personal attention. This new "kink" is an electrical device for creasing trousers and pressing other garments, and it is being installed on some of the fast trains. Besides having his shoes shined while he sleeps, the fastidious traveling man will in the near future find the wrinkles pressed out of his outer garments when he awakens in the morning.

New Plants.

A foreign journal tells of a plant called Parkid biglobosa, recently discovered in Africa, which produces a fruit containing 20 per cent reducing sugar, which puts it in the first rank of sugar producing plants. By a Japanese florist there has been discovered a marvelous rose. The color is a delicate pink when the plant is in the shade, but becomes crimson when exposed to the sun.

The new members of the city council appear to be taking hold of the work before them in an energetic manner and the indications are the members of that body will labor together harmoniously, so that a large amount of work can be accomplished during the year.

When President Patrick Calhoun, of the United Street Railroads of San Francisco, reads of the conviction of President Charles S. Cameron, of the Pittsburg Tube City Railroad Company, probably he will permit an involuntary shiver. Mr. Camernon was found guilty of attempted bribery of a councilman and Mr. Calhoun is on trial for the same offense. Cameron is out on bail and apparently has no more chance of going to jail than John D. Rockefeller did of paying that $29,240,000 Standard Oil fine.

SENATOR CHAMBERLAIN

George E. Chamberlain, Oregon's newly elected senator, is one of the most able and popular men in the state. As Oregon's chief executive during the past six years he has made an excellent record and we believe he will represent the interests of the people in the highest legislative hall of the nation as fearlessly, honestly and ably as he has in the executive chambers at Salem. Politically, Senator Chamberlain has had a markable career. Altho a Democrat, and residing in a state that has always been considered overwhelmingly Republican, he has met with but one defeat. That was when he was an aspirant for the circuit bench in Multnomah county.

Senator Chamberlain was born in Natchez, Mississippi, January 1, 1854. He graduated in Washington and Lee university in 1876, and came to Oregon in December of the same year.

Settling in Albany, Mr. Chamberlain began the practice of law, and in 1880 was elected to the house of representatives from Linn county. He was elected prosecuting attorney for the Third judicial district in 1884, serving for two years.

At the legislative session of 1891 the office of attorney general for Oregon was created and Senator Chamberlain was appointed to fill the position by Governor Pennoyer. He was re-elected to the office at the general election in June, 1892, defeating L. R. Webster, present county judge of Multnomah county, who was the Republican nominee for the position.

In 1[illegible] Senator Chamberlain moved to Portland, where he began the practice of law, and in 1[illegible] he became a candidate for the circuit bench, being defeated by the late Judge Sears, this being the only defeat of his political career.

At the June election of 1900 Senator Chamberlain was elected prosecuting attorney of the Fourth judicial district, defeating Judge Sewell, the Republican nominee. He was elected governor of Oregon at the June election of 1902, defeating W. J. Furnish of Pendleton, the Republican nominee. He was re-elected to the governorship at the general election of June, 1906, defeating James Whitycombe, the Republican nominee.

At the general election last June, Mr. Chamberlain defeated H. M. Cake, the Republican candidate, as the people's choice for United States senator and now the legislature has carried out the people's instructions by formally electing him to represent the state of Oregon in the highest legislative body in the land. Senator Chamberlain will assume his position as a member of the senate on March 4, succeeding Senator Fulton of this city, whose term expires at that time.

Castro abroad appears to be of as much importance as Castro in Venezuela, dictating and bluffing. While he was at home, stirring up one power after another, curiosity as to the manner of man he was became subordinate to indignation that he should be allowed to play fast and loose with treaty obligations and make a football of diplomatic dignity. He was a power in Venezuela and a maker of trouble for nations having dealings with that country. This was all the world cared to know.

Castro was not easily eliminated from Venezuelan affairs even though out of his country. Even in Caracas he had been a man of mystery. A couple of years ago he resigned his office, but when it suited him to take the helm again he simply returned to the capital and began issuing orders. Those who knew Castro best believe that his trip to Europe is simply another act in the drama he plays with consummate cleverness and almost Napoleonic audacity. Courage he undoubtedly has, for all the attempts of the powers of the world do not seem to scare him any more than one of the petty revolutions at home. A nuisance Castro certainly is, and he may be a mere poser at best, but so far he has proved himself something more than a freak.

The University of Virginia arranged to celebrate the centenary of the birth of Edgar Allan Poe on Jan. 19 in a manner to do justice to the memory of one of the truest poets America has produced. Distinguished representatives of literature in the old world were invited to participate in order to make the occasion something more than a local tribute, for Poe was once a student at the university.

The reading circle that has been delighted by the genius of Poe spreads over two hemispheres. It is most unfortunate that his weaknesses dimmed for half a century the imperishable beauty of the writings left at the tragic close of his short and stormy life. Equally with the statesman and the soldier, the poet, it would seem, is worthy of commemoration and regard because of the influence of his works upon the minds of men. The host of admirers of Poe will be rejoiced to know that at last it is proposed to erect a fitting memorial to their hero of song.

As we approach the Lincoln centenary it is well to recall the marvelous mastery of the English language acquired by one who had but a few months' real school training in his whole life. This country has produced no man of letters whose style is more worthy of study than Lincoln's. Born in a cabin and reared in the backwoods, the great emancipator became one of the greatest masters of English prose in the nineteenth century. Not alone his Gettysburg address, which every schoolboy and schoolgirl should know by heart, but his inaugurals and some of his letters and speeches are worthy of study as masterpieces of American literature.

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.

I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

FISHERIES OF THE JAPANESE

Five Million People Engaged In Industry

Washington, Jan. 20— In a report to the department of commerce and labor, Consular Agent F. J. King, of Hakodate, Japan, furnishes interesting statistics covering the extent, variety and product of the Japanese fisheries.

Among other things the consular agent says:

"Owing to its geographical position, the direction of the ocean currents in its vicinity, and the numerous and well protected harbors along the various coasts of Japan, at is not surprising that a large number of the population, almost 10 per cent, say 5,000,000, are activily engaged in or depending on the ocean for a livelihood and that the value of the fish and other aquatic animals and marine products annually taken from the same amounts to over $50,000,000.

"The Japan stream washes the eastern and western shores, bringing with it immense quantities of tropical sea life and feed, which the fish follow, while the cold streams from the Gulf of Tartary and the Okhotsk Sea flow around the island of Yezo (Hokkaido and Northern Japan, bringing with them inconceivable quanitites of cod, herring, sardines, salmon, etc.

"The Japanese are naturally a race of fishermen, and from early times have been taught to look upon the ocean as a source whence to draw supplies of food.

"After the introduction of steam vessels and the consequent improvements in communication and a constantly growing demand from abroad for Japanese fishery products, it was but natural that the industry should rapidly increase; in fact, the value of the fishery products during the past ten years has nearly doubled. Many Japanese have been sent aboard to study foreign methods of fishing, and during the past ten years many vessels, both steam and sail, built on foreign models, have been introducted, which enable the fishermen to pursue their calling in more distant waters, such as the Okhotsk Sea, the coast of Kamschatka and the South Sea Islands.

"The bulk of the industry, however, is carried on in native-built boats, and the number of these is enormous. According to the latest statistics available, those for 1906, there were actively employed during that year 295,- boats under 18 feet in length, 106,- 3 boats from 18 to 30 feet in length and 24,622 boats over 30 feet in length. Of the boats under 18 feet in length, .363 were newly constructed and cost 0,500 of those from 18 to 30 feet in length, 9,132 were newly constructed and cost $385,400, while 2,015 boats of over 30 feet in length were newly constructed at a cost of $177,040. During the same year there were employed 74 steamers, 10 of which were newly constructed, and 559 foreign-style sailing vessels, of which 83 were newly constructed.

"The statistics give the number of vessels lost, wrecked, missing, etc., during the year at 949 and the number of lives lost at 1,230. These latter figure may cause surprise, but to anyone living in Japan and knowing the frail nature of the fishing boats, and also taking into consideration the number of people engaged in the industry, together with the frequent reports of where whole fleets have been overtaken by sudden storms, is astonishing that the loss of life should be as small as given in the government statistics.

Daring Auto Trip.

From the Klondike to the City of Mexico and return in an automobile is the trip on which Stanley Scearce, a merchant of Dawson, who recently arrived at Seattle, Wash., is bent on making. After crisscrossing California he will go over all the roads passable in Mexico and then by the shortest routes come back to Seattle. He will ship the machine from Seattle to White Horse and on April 10 start on a 375 mile trip over ice to Dawson.

PUGET SOUND FISHERIES

Items of Interest Concerning That Industry

The following items regarding the fishing industry on Puget sound appeared in the current issue of the Pacific Fisherman:

It was announced in last month's issue of this journal that Carl Sutter, of Anacortes, and H. Bell-Irving, of Vancouver, B. C., would erect a new cannery on Cottonwood Island, or Sinclair Island as it is now called. Messrs. Sutter and Irving will locate the plant on Southwest Bay and have purchased waterfront there for that purpose. The site embraces about 15 acres which was years ago owned by the Seaborg interests, who maintaind a webhouse and wharf there. New deck scows have been ordered from R. E. Trafton & Co., of Anacortes and the lumber for the cannery will be on the ground shortly. Mr. Sutter will remain in charge of the cannery at Anacortes, in addition to having supervision of the other plan.t

J. W. V. Cook, the Columbia River operator who owns a cannery at Port Townsend, has been in the Sound city during the past month looking over his plant preparatory to operating the same next year. It is understood that Cook is planning to operate the Port Townsend Packing Company's plant to full capacity and is making his arrangements accordingly. While at Port Townsend he let the contract for 6 twenty-six ton fishscows to be used as salmon carriers next summer.

Coast Fish Company of Anacortes has filed articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state, naming Will A. Lowman of Anacortes, William F. Coulson of Anacortes and Thomas Smith of Mount Vernon as trustees, with $100,000 capital. This corporation owns the stock of the three other corporations of the Lowman enterprises, the White Crest Canning Company, Guemes Fish Company and the W. A. Lowman Company. The Coast Fish Company is not merely a holding corporation, but an active concern with well-defined and ample functions and powers. The codfishing and packing enterprise, plans for which have been under way for several months, will be carried on by the new company. A packing house will be established west of the present cannery at Anacortes and a codfishing schooner will be sent north next March for a cargo of fish.

W. B. Hobart, formerly in charge of the Lake Whatcom trout hatchery, but lately superintendent of the Chelan state hatchery, has been transferred to Twisp, where he will assume charge of the state hatchery located at that place, having been appointed by Fish Commissioner Riseland to succeed the late J. C. Klinklet, who committed suicide recently. Hobart has been connected with the state fish hatcheries for the past eight years, beginning his first work in the Kendall hatchery, near his former home. He is considered a practical fish culturist.

RECEIVE BIDS ON CAR FERRIES

Milwaukee Road Will Have Two Constructed

Tacoma, Jan. 20—Announcement is expected Monday or soon after of the awarding of contracts by the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound railway for the construction of the two car ferries contemplated by the new line in handling traffic between mills on the Tacoma and Seattle waterfronts and its ocean terminals in the two cities.

Plans and specifications for the ferries have been in the hands of ship builders for several weeks and it is stated that tenders are in and will be opened the first of the week. Although no official announcement has been made, it is reported that the Moran company, Philip Sloan and the Hall Brothers Marine Railway company are in competition for the work.

The ferries, it is said, will be exactly alike, each 190 feet long by 42 foot beam, with capacity for ten cars each. They will be fitted with a small pilot house and quarters for the crew. Motive power will probably be furnished by steam tugs, the ferries being designed for quick and easy handling. Contracts, it is reported will call for delivery of the ferries June 15, one of them at Tacoma and the other at Seattle.

The Tacoma ferry will be operated between the Milwaukee's main ocean terminals on the Puyallup river and a large slip to be built just south of the North End Lumber company's mill, connecting with the Front street transfer line which the Milwaukee Terminal company is builing. The Seattle ferry will be operated between the Milwaukee's ocean terminal works in that city and the mills along the Seattle waterfront as far north as Ballard, it is stated. The cost of the ferries is not made public.

Montana Farmer Will Fatten His Porkers on "Alfalfa Tea."

Dr. W. X. Suddeth has decided to establish a hog raising farm on his large ranch in the Musselshell valley, in Yellowstone county, Mont., and he will grow and fatten hogs on "alfalfa tea," a brew which he has been experimenting with.

The doctor returned to Billings, Mont., recently from Omaha, where he disposed of nearly 400 head of cattle for record breaking prices and brought with him L. T. Rankin of Springfield, Ill., who will have charge of the hog ranch in the Musselshell. While in Omaha they purchased a hundred brood sows for the ranch, and the doctor expects to go to Omaha in the near future and purchase 400 more brood sows, it being the aim of the doctor and his associates to raise and fatten in the neighborhood of 5,000 hogs each year.

The swine are to be fed on "alfalfa tea," as the doctor calls it. This tea is a brew with which the doctor has been experimenting. It is made by grinding alfalfa, barley, winter wheat and cereals together and then cooking them. The alfalfa stalks, the doctor says, contain more protein than many grains, and by cooking them this food substance will be secured and fed to the hogs in the slop. He says that experiments which have been conducted with this alfalfa grain diet show it to be a wonderful food on which to grow and fatten hogs.

LANDS OPEN FOR SETTLEMENT

Are Available to Homesteaders for Clearing

Washington, Jan. 20—The report of Harry Thompson on his recent investigations of the logged-off land problem throughout the western part of Washington will shortly be ready for distribution, and is declared by those having this work in charge to be a splendid document.

The report shows that in Western Washington there are 8,700,000, acres of land, 5,000,000, of which are still covered with marketable timber. The area in cultivation is a very small part of the total, being 429,000 acres. The report, however, shows that there are 2,352,000 acres of logged-off land or the sort to which the investigations apply, which would probably be put under cultivation if economical means of clearing could be found.

Exprients already made show that the cost per acre of clearance varies from $35 to $200 per acre, although the average cost is about $100. This first investigation brought to light a number of ingenious methods of clearing these lands, all of which will be thoroughly tried by the government to determine whether or not they are superior to the more popular use of donkey engines and dynamite. It is believed that some of these systems will prove advantageous.

"SHORES ACRES"

Next Saturday evening the Astoria theatre should show the standing room only sign, when the curtain goes up on the great play "Shore Acres."

Archie R. Boyd will again be seen playing the part of Nathaniel Berry. "Shore Acres" a clean play and true to nature. It is pure in moral tone and appeals to the healthy sentiment of people. It is an exquisitely told tale of quaint New England life. It teaches a lasting lesson in charity and patience, from the homely, but sublime character of Nathaniel, while the simple devotion of Helen Berry to the young man of her choice furnishes an object lesson from which older people might well profit. Miss Dorothy Herne, the youngest daughter of the late James A. Herne, following in the footsteps of her two older sisters, has achieved distinction on the stage. She is supporting Mr. Boyd, playing the leading female part. Mr. Boyd is recognized thruout the entire country as the most worthy successor of the late Mr. Herne in interpreting the part of Nahaniel Berry.

Then the Man From Berlin Explained Why He Did It.

A man stood before a shop window with his cane sticking out from under his arm. A stout, blond gentleman in passing struck the cane smartly with his own, restoring it from its obstructive horizontal position to the proper vertical one.

"Say, what's the matter with you? You're the freshest guy I ever saw. Are you looking for trouble?"

Thus said the man whose cane had been tapped. But he who had tapped it, speaking with a German accent, answered gently:

"Why, sir, I did nothing but restore your cane to its right inclination. Absently you were holding it under your arm. It was jabbing people in the breast, the back, even the eye, and yet you meant no harm.

"Well, I stopped that nuisance which you were unconsciously committing. In Berlin it is the custom always to stop it so. And no one takes offense. On the contrary, in Berlin the correction is received with a smile and a word of thanks. Isn't it so here?"

"No, it isn't," said the other, "but it should be. I thank you, sir, myself, and I apologize."—New York Press.

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or in a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

At this afternoon's session of the county court, the resignation of Peter Gullickson as supervisor of road district No 17 at John Day was accepted and H. C. Hilton was appointed to fill the vacancy. The court made an order that in its opinion if any change is to be made by the legislature in the manner of collecting taxes, the treasurer should be the officer named as tax collector. Copies of this order will be sent to the Clatsop county members of the legislature. The court adjourned until next Monday.

Taylor, Young & Co have received a telegram from the New York office of the Hamburg-American line that Captain Waggeman, of the Oriental liner Nicomedia lost his life by being swept overboard from his vessel while she was at Kobe. No other particulars were given, and just how he met his death will probably not be known until the steamer reaches Astoria.

Chinese new years starts his evening and lasts for ten days. It will be celebrated by the local Chinese colony in the same manner a usual but not so enthusiastically as in former years as the new dyansty in the mother country appears not to be popular among the celestials who reside in Astoria. Why this is so no definite explaination could be secured except that the "New emperor--his no good."

Anton England, a fisherman and sailor by occupation and a resident of this city for a number of years, was found by the police this morning in an Astor street lodging house suffering with an acute attack of erysipelis. At the recent session of the council, a resolution was adopted authorizing the ways and means committe to employ two experts to examine the books of the various city officers for the past year, as the books were experted a year ago. The committee has engaged W P O'Brien and John Nordstrom to do this work and the stipulated price is $100.

The young hens are now beginning to do their duty with the result that the price of eggs has fallen five cents per dozen and if unusual weather conditions do not intervene the price will begin to drop gradually. There is no other change this week in the prices paid by the local merchants to the farmers of this vicinity for their live stock and produce.

Manager Hanlin of the Astoria theatre, announces the following bookings. January 31. "Lieut and Cow Boy," Feb. 17. Charles B. Hanford in "Taming the Shrew," and "Old Guard" double bill Feb 21st Authur Cunningham in "Kerry Gow" Feb 24. "A Stubborn Cinderalla" high class musical comedy company.

Monday night's gale and the high tide resuling therefrom did considerable damage to the roadbed of the Megler extension of the Ilwaco Railway & Navigation Company's line on the north shore of the river and both yesterday and today the steamer Nahcotta was compelled to carry passengers and freight to Ilwaco, as no trains could run over the road. There is said to be a wash out at the dirt fill near the end of the big tunnel, another one near McGowans and a third at Point Ellice. A construction crew is now at work repairing the damage.

Considerable attention is being attracted thruout the United States to the National Tariff Commission convention to be held in Indianapolis, February 16-17-18, which has been called by a large number of manufacturing associations including the National Association of Manufacturers and more than twenty associations. The executive committee is Chas. A. Bookwalter, ma yor of Indianapolis: Herny Riesenberg, Albert E. Metzger, Addison C. Harris, John S. Lazarus, Henry W. Lawrence and Hilton U. Brown, all of that city. The delegates that have ben appointed to attend this convention are Frank Patton, W. F. McGregor, W. T. Scholfield, Herman Wise, C. W. Fulton, O. I Peterson, Mayor A. M. Smith, J. H. Whyte, J. E. Higgins, and E. Z. Ferguson. Others whc wish to attend will be given an opportunity of doing so if they will see the president or secretary of the chamber of commerce. This is a good opportunity to drive in a strong spike against the proposition to take the tariff off of Canada lumber.

The ways and means committee of the city council held an extended meeting Tuesday afternoon at which it acted upon several matters of importance that had been referred to it. The members concluded that the recommendation of the auditor that a book typewriter and adding machine be purchased was a wise one, for the reason that the work in this office is increasing so rapidly that unless machines are procured, assistance will have to be employed. The committee also decided not to cancel the old street assessments and taxes that have been standing for years. These amount in all to about $83,000. The street assessments were created between the years 1877 and 1888 and the taxes in question are for the year 1892. The committee thought it would do no harm to carry these amounts on the city's books and as they are a cloud against the title to the property affected, the municipality may realize something from them. Another important matter that came before the committee was the question of allowing rebates on street assessments. It was brought up by a petition from Wm. Bell, making a tender of a small amount in payment of the assessment against his property for the improvement of Franklin avenue, east of Thirty-sixth street. On this petition the committee made a recommendation which if adopted by the council, will establish a precedent for the disposal of all similar requests in the future. The report is as follows: "We, your committee, herewith report that we have carefully examined the within report and deem it a bad precedent to establish by allowing rebates in street assessments; and recommend that hereafter no rebates be allowed, and that this petition be not allowed."

The supreme court has deceded that the present state tax lawis valid. The decision was rendered in the case brought by the officials of Yamhill county to test the law by which the present apportionment of the state tax is made. The suit was brought in 1904, the county contending that the state barod, in disregard of the constitution, made the apportionment in an arbitrary manner, without reference to the value of the property in the several counties of the state.

SCENE DURING SESSION OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

This is one of the few photographs ever taken of the house of representatives in session. It shows Speaker Cannon in the act of calling the house to order and was taken a few days after the opening of the second session of the Sixtieth congress. The picture was taken from the gallery overlooking the Republican side of the house.

ITALY CONFRONTS GREAT PROBLEM

Must Care For Thousands Of People

Rome, Jan. 21—Italy is confronted with a great problem in caring for 200,000 persons, made homeless by the earthquake last month in Sicily and Calabria who have dispersed in great numbers, not only in the interior of their native provinces but have gone in great numbers to Naples and other large cities of the country. It is estimated it is costing $100,000 a day to provide the simplest necessities which neither international charity nor the state can long bear. Furthermore the bestowal of charity is having an ill effect on the lower classes and many disorders are reported as the result.

LABOR DELEGATES HOLD SESSION

Salem, Or., Jan. 21—Delegates to the annual convention of the Oregon State Federation of Labor tonight held an open session in the house of representatives, when subjects of legislation of interest to organized labor were discussed. Many members of the legislature attended the meeting, which was addressed by R. A. Willison, R. A. Harris, C. O. Young and J. F. Cassidy, representing the trades unionists.

Considerable stress was laid on the employers' liability law, for the passing of which organized labor will conduct an especially vigorous fight. The same organization, at its session today adopted a resolution protesting against the favorable considertion of Purdin's anti-trust bill which has been introduced in the house. Practically all of today's session of the federation was consumed in the consideration of resolutions and a visit to the state penitentiary, where the delegates were the guests of Superintendent James.

VICTIMS ARE UNRECOGNIZABLE

Chicago's Crib Accident Presents Awful Details

Chicago, Jan. 21 At Murphy's morgue forty-seven unrecognizable victims of yesterday's crib accident are awaiting claimants with the probability that very few will be identified. The bodies have been placed in sacks temporarily, many of them having no human semblance. The search in the lake continues today. The constructing company has not given up hope that some workmen in the crib may yet be alive. The hope is held out that the smoke and fumes may not have penetrated the innermost recesses and the air pumps are kept in operation to keep alive the possible survivors.

The possibility that the list of dead from yesterday's tragedy may reach 66 is expressed by Coroner Hoffman. There are 47 bodies at the morgue, which corresponds with the number of missing as reported by the construction company but the company's payroll is incomplete and inquiries are received for many, whose names are not on the pay-rolls, but who are said by relatives to have been working on the crib by the day. Of the 39 injured 15 remained in the hospitals today. Five are in a serious condition.

A meeting of the Chicago undertakers was held this morning and decided to hold a single funeral of the victims of the disaster with one big grave, marked with a monument reciting the nature of their death. President D'Andraes of the sewer and tunnel miners association, expressed the fear today that the death list will reach one hundred.

Missoula, Mont., Jan. 21—While attempting to dislodge a quantity of ice which threatened the destruction of a trestle over Hell Gate this morning, Roy Robbins and another man whose name is not known lost their balance and fell into the stream. Robbins was crushed to death between the ice floe and a bridge pier and his companion, buffeted about by huge cakes of ice, which carried him 500 yards down the stream, was only rescued with difficulty and cannot live.

BIG ICE JAM AT THE DALLES

Freshet in River Rising Very Rapidly

The Dalles, Or., Jan. 21—The Columbia is filled with at ice jam here today, the ice in the river having broken during the night. While the ice is broken up, the river is covered with huge cakes of ice, not being open in any place opposite this city. In some places the ice is jammed seven feet high. In the last 18 hours the river has risen 14 feet, and is now 17 feet above zero. The Regulator wharf boat was torn in the jam last night from its moorings at Hungry Harbor, a mile east of the city, and carried to the mouth of Mill Creek, in this city. River men themselves could not have placed it in a more secure place in this vicinity. The Regulator dock piling was demolished by floating ice and the rise of the river. The Open River wharf boat was hoisted in the air by the jam, which turned it up so that it is now resting in cakes of ice on its side. The Columbia is open from the rapids, three miles east, or a point half a mile east of The Dalles. At Seufert's cannery the ice is piled 30 feet, as high as the bluffs. Much ice is floating down stream and is being piled up between this city and Crater Point, two mills down. While a little snow is still on the ground here sleighing is gone. The coldest temperature last night was 34. The mercury is up to 42 today.

MAKE CONTRACT FOR REPAIRS

San Francisco, Jan. 21—The contract for repairs to the Norwegian steamer Henrik Ibse has been awarded to the Moore & Scott Iron works, at their bid of $7,200, the work to be completed in fourteen days. The bid was $1,150 lower than that of the Union works and $3,235 lower than that of the Risdon. The vessel will go in drydock to have several shell plates renewed.

Owing to the delays the vessel's charter to load lumber on Grays Harbor for Australia has been cancelled and she is now on the disengaged list. The British steamer Romford, now at Honolulu, has been chartered by J. J. Moore & Co. to take the place of the Ibsen. She gets a rate of 30 shillings.

WANT SEPERATE LAW FOR BEER

Brewers Seek Local Option Amendment

Salem, Or., Jan. 21—Within the next few days, it is asserted, agents of the brewing interests of the state will come on the capital to work for the passage of a bill soon to be introduced to amend the local option laws in an endeavor to stem the growing tide of prohibition sentiment, according to authentic report, the brewers intend to cut loose from the liquor forces in future and paddle their own canoe. The main feature of the proposed measure, it is understood, will be a clause segregating beer and general liquor licenses and permitting districts and precincts to vote on them separately. By this system, it is believed, many places from which the sale of both spirits and beer is excluded will vote in favor of allowing beer to be sold, which would in no circumstances permit the retailing of stronger intoxicants.

It is expected that the distillers will organize to oppose the proposed amendment. It will also meet with strong resistance from prohibition sources, and in anticipation of its introduction a number of members of various anti-liquor organizations are already on the ground.

BENSON MAKES SOME PROMISES

Says Will Make No Changes in Office Force

Salem, Or Jan. 21—Except in case of emergency or for incompetency Secretary of State F W Benson does not contemplate the change of a single official in the complement of patronage accorded the new governor of the state, by statute and otherwise, following the election of Governor Chamberlain to the United States senate.

This is Secretary Benson's statement. The only probability of a change will be in the private secretaryship and private stenographer to the governor, which will only be made in the event of a vacancy by resignation, and Secretary Benson under an opinion of the supreme court is not obliged to resign his present office in order to qualify to the governor-ship. He will be entitled to the salaries of both offices, and will be empowered to employ his own assistants, regardless of party or politics.

Secretary Benson declares he has no application for appointment as his successor to the secretary's office, and he further states that he has no intention of making such an appointment, should the occasion arise.

Little Mary was really very ill. Mother said she was sure it was an attack of appendicitis, but grandma was equally sure the little one was threatened with convulsions.

The argument waxed warm in Mary's presence, and appropriate remedies were used, and the next day she was better.

Coming into her mother's room during her play, she said:

"Mamma, two of my dollies are very sick this morning."

"Indeed, dear, I am very sorry. What is the matter with them?"

"Well, I don't really know, mamma, but I think Gwendolyn has 'a pint o' spiders' and Marguerite is going to have 'envulsions.'"—New York Herald.

LEGISLATION AS PROPOSED

Many Measures Pending in the Oregon House

Salem, Jan.21 The usual number of measures is being introduced in the house. Principal among them is one by Be[illegible] of Lane, which proposes the creation of a state tax commission, and carries an appropriation of $18,000. It is stipulated that the commission shall consist of five members two to be appointed by the governor, Secretary of state and state treasurer, who shall be ex-officio members without salary. The two commissioner are to receive an annual salary of [illegible] each.

This is the identical bill that was introduced the 1907 session from the [illegible] tax commission. It was vigorously assailed by the large corporations and defeated. The commission is given general supervision of the assessment of the property of the state, the idea being to devise a uniform plan for assessing all classes of property in all of the counties of the state. Corporations are required annually to supply the commission with a sworn statement setting forth their true capitalization, the amount of property they own, Their gross and net earnings. It is on this information that the commission is expected to determine the basis upon which such property shall be assessed by the county assessor.

Brandon, Deocratic member for Linn has presented a bill which fixes 2½ cents a mile as the minimum charge that shall be collected by railroad companies operating in the state for transportation of passengers.

By request, Bryant has introduced a bill providing an annual appropriation of $3000 for the Oregon humane society.

Couch wants a law enacted that will require the Multnomah county court to install and operate a ferry across the Willamette river at St. John.

Farrell would have the sale of firearms regulated. He has introduced a bill which will require all dealers in revolvers and other firearms to obtain a licene from the county clerk before being permitted to sell such article. Such a license provides the bill, can only be attained when two reputable citizen sign their name to the application blank.

Campbell is the author of a bill which would take the control of the Oregon Soldier's Home at Roseburg out of the hands of the Governor and place it with a board, consisting of three honorably discharged soldier, who are to be elected by the legislature, one at each sesion of the states lawmakers for terms of six years each. It is provided that if the bill is enacted the first board of damgers of the home shall conists of B. F. Pike, of Newbrg, who will serve two years; C. A. Williams, of Oregon City, for four years, and T. E. Hills, of Garden Home, for six years. The members of the board are to receive no salary and will be allowed only their actual expenses.

Representative Buchanan, in a bill introduced in the house, proposes to eliminate the whipping post. He proposes an amendment to section 1772 of the code by which all mention of the whipping-post is whiped out. Mr. Buchanan contends that the use of this form of punishment is a barbarous practice. "It is a disgrace to our statute books and should be wiped out," said he.

Buchanan is the author of a bill that would repeal the initiative law, enacted by the people last June, and instructing members of the legislature to support and vote for senator only for that candidate receiving a majority of the peoples votes in the preceding general election. The consideration of this bill is sure to precipitate a lively debate in the House when it comes up for consideration.

If a bill offered in the house by Calkins becomes a law, only tenth grade pupils from the public schools, or those capable of passing an examination for that grade, will be permitted to enter any of the state normal schools, state university or Agricultrual college. The purpose of this bill is to put a stop to the utilization of the states institutions of higher education for high school purposes.

TRYING OUT THE STAG

A "Take" in Englands Oldest Deer Park

Parts of certain great parks in England, such as Eridge park, the oldest deer park in the kingdom, are kept practically wild in their original forest state, while near to the castle is the cultivated home park. Eridge park contains 3,000 acres and [illegible] the only estate in England, with one exception, where deer taking with hounds is still carried on. Eridge park once formed part of the royal chase. It still retains the wild beauty it then had, although there are more than seventy miles of lovely drives in it, not counting those of the home park.

Deer taking is entirely different from deer hunting. The object is to take the animals alive so that they may be transferred to the home park to be fattened and eventually turned into venison.

The sport is by no means as tame as it sounds. A seven to nine year old red deer is an awkward customer to tackle. He is powerful, agile and well armed with antlers and hoofs.

When there is to be a deer taking at Eridge park the meet is planned for 11 o'clock at the park keeper's house. The underkeepers, with fresh hounds, are scattered through the park to head off the stag should he come their way.

The underkeepers having spread themselves over the park, the park keeper, with the "field" (those following mounted and on foot) set off to find a deer which looks ready for fattening purposes. Having selected one, it is the work of the keeper to get him separated from the rest and then to slip his hound and set after him as hard as we can gallop. The pace, of course, is tremendous, and as rabbit holes abound the risk of a fall is even betting or, rather, a trifle of odds on the certainty of our "taking a toss." As our deer bounds away with his wonderfully easy, elastic movements he makes for the wildest part of the park, expecting to escape his pursuers.

In one place after another he is met with hidden keepers and fresh hounds, till with the instinct of his species he turns to what he thinks is his sanctuary—the lakes. With open mouth and tongue outhanging he plunges a good fifteen feet into the water and swims for the opposite bank. Gasping and tiring, he lands on what he hopes is freedom from his pursuers. But, alas, no! Yet another fresh hound is after him. What can he do? He is too pumped with his already hard burst to face the hill before him.

He turns around and tears down through the bracken with a hound on each side of him, ready to pull him down if they get but half a chance. It is a dingdong race, under trees, through bogs and bracken, up and down dells and breaks, smashing headlong through everything, anything, to reach the shelter of the friendly water once again. With a mighty spring he is in again. For a moment there is breathing space, for now the keepers and hounds, yet some way off, are making for the poor beast, which is in the middle of the lake. Away he swims with graceful movement of his noble head, glancing all around at his pursuers, but with his mind fixed on his line of retreat. He reaches the shore, and, with dripping sides, he is out upon the bank.

Again he makes an effort to baffle and leave behind those clinging hounds that would bear him down. And now two great hounds are stretching themselves out to their utmost pace. Side by side they race after their tiring quarry; in another minute they will have him. The stag, however, manages to make a spurt, though he is now stiffening rapidly, and just reaches some park palings surrounding the big lake.

In an instant he has turned on his pursuers, and with head down and upraised fore leg he is prepared to fight to the death. A hound rushes in, but in a twinkling he is on his back, hurled away like a piece of wood. This checks the other hound, which dodges and bays around the stag. Seeing that things are now getting a bit too warm for him, the stag suddenly turns round and, smashing the palings like match wood, finds himself again in the icy water of the big lake. Away and away he swims, up this long stretch, the water seeming to revive him, for he swims the eastern length, three-quarters of a mile, and then lands at the far end while we follow on the shore. He swims till his feet touch the ground and stands facing us.

All we can do now is to end the situation as speedily as possible. A keeper deftly throws a rope with a loose knot over the stag's antlers. In a moment four burly keepers are hauling him out by the ropes. It is now a slow march to his feeding ground in the home park. Slowly the procession moves, never a slackening of the rope or the hold on the antlers. Through the gate dividing the parks he is [illegible] unwilling prisoner, though undaunted. This ends the deer taking.—Town and Country.

For the Honor of a Princess

By F. K. SCRIBNER

The Duke de Biart, a nobleman of ancient ancestry and a young man of great accomplishments, had disappeared from the court and with him the Princess Alice. It was known to the king that the duke had sought to be a churchman, being of gloomy mind and much given to moodiness. But Henry, having small desire to see so great a nobleman turn monk, had played right skillfully the dark eyes of his royal kinswoman against the church.

Strange it was that the duke had not bided his time until the king was ready for a royal wedding. As for me, humble lieutenant of the musketeers that I am, I knew that the princess loved him not, for I had been chosen by his majesty to guard her person and saw her daily. Right well I knew—but that belongs not in this story.

The most important thing was that my king had bidden me in great secrecy to choose but one follower and with him to ride to the duke's chateau at M.

The honor of the princess rested in my hand, of which fact Paris must not know.

It was an hour past midnight when I, with the Chevalier de Rossel at my side, rode forth from Paris. De Rossel was in cheerful mood.

"Zounds!" said he, snapping his fingers briskly. "Methinks this Duke de Biart hath o'ershot the mark. Plotting was bad enough, yet he must need, having ridden with his princess beyond the walls, lay violent hands upon her person. Had he but waited, the king's desire had given her to him."

To my mind also came the thought the man must be truly mad; but, despite the weight of the occasion, something within me rejoiced that it lay within my power to undo the duke and return the princess to the king, her uncle.

The duke's dwelling lay some leagues from Paris, so the first dawn overtook us as we rode from the forest which surrounded the chateau on three sides. The place was of some strength, built in the days of the king's grandfather, so perchance some obstacle might lie between us and an entrance.

But upon our reaching the entrance to the dwelling we found it indeed most poorly guarded in that the guard had unbarred the door, the day being full upon us. Moreover, I perceived he was no other than one who had served the king, an ex-musketeer of mine own company.

Seeing me, he stood open mouthed, saluting with much ceremony, nor showed he any disposition to bar our progress.

"Faith," replied he to my greeting, "thou art come from Paris at a most early hour. The duke [illegible] yet abed, having come hither but yesterday in company with his cousin, who suffers from a malady."

"What now!" cried De Rossel. "Is the lady stricken?"

"That she is," replied the witless fellow, "for the duke bore her before him on the saddle and hath given her in charge of the women, bidding them look to it she commit no injury upon her person."

"Came they alone?" asked I.

"Only the two," replied he. "Art from the king?"

De Rossel plucked my sleeve. "'Twas told in Paris," said he, "the duke's kinswoman had lost her wits, and 'tis the royal pleasure we learn concerning her condition. It is the purpose of his majesty to send his leech to cure her if occasion warrants it."

The fellow nodded. "The duke is much in favor with the king," said he. "Would see the woman who guards the maid?"

De Rossel cast upon me a look of triumph. "'Twere most fitting," replied he, "for, the hour being early, 'twere an ill thing to arouse the duke, thy master."

"'Tis a most strange thing," muttered De Rossel as we followed the servant through the long and dimly lighted corridor, "beyond comprehension, and methinks there comes a queer twist to our errand whether this duke be drunk or truly mad; therefore look to it, M. de Marc, that no trap be set for us."

Presently we came unto the door of a chamber, and the servant drew back, signifying 'twas the room wherein was confined the princess.

"Go thou," said De Rossel gruffly. "Thou hast done thine errand." And he put in the fellow's palm a silver piece.

"I will remain here," said he, the man being gone, "and if any come to know our business I will deal with him." So saying, he unsheathed his sword and took his stand before the door, upon which I knocked softly.

A voice from within demanded who sought admittance [illegible] so early an hour, when 'twas small courtesy to disturb a lady's quiet.

I replied that I bore a message from the duke which brooked of no delay, whereupon a bolt was withdrawn, the door partly opened, and the face of a woman appeared.

In the dim light she noted not my person, but demanded irritably that I deliver the message quickly and be gone, but I, placing my knee against the half closed door, thrust it back with such force that the woman was thrown to the floor, where she lay stunned.

"'Tis the antechamber to the inner room," said De Rossel, peering over my shoulder. "Go in. I will look to the wench that she make no outcry."

Pushing the heavy draperies guarding the entrance to the inner chamber aside, I entered without ceremony, then paused, for the princess was before me.

Aroused by the sound of voices in the antechamber, she had risen from a couch and confronted me. The half light touched her with a glow soft as moonlight, revealing the whiteness of her skin, the gentle curve of her throat and neck and the veiled splendor of the soft, dark eyes.

"My lord," said she, "what means this intrusion? 'Tis but poor courtesy which sends thee hither when I would be alone."

She took me for the Duke de Biart. The shadow of the draperies concealed my features, and, I being somewhat the size of the nobleman, the mistake was easy. I took a step toward her, the gleam of my hilt flashing in the light. She started, her hand going to a little toy dagger which lay upon the table at her side. Suddenly the color which had risen to her cheeks died away, her lips parted and her hand went to her heart.

"M. de Marc," she cried, "M. de Marc, 'tis thou! Thou wilt save me from this madman!"

"Princess," I replied, "none shall harm thee. The king hath sent me to take thee back to Paris."

She smiled softly, laying her hand upon my arm. "Brave M. de Marc!" cried she. "Would I might"—

The voice of De Rossel checked her words, his face appearing between the curtains.

"Look to thyself, De Marc!" he cried.

A cry from the princess made me turn sharply. Beyond the circle of light where the dark canopy of the bed met the wall I saw an evil figure, cloaked and booted, plumed hat upon head and naked blade in hand. 'Twas the Duke de Biart, who had entered noiselessly through a secret passage in the wall.

His eyes were fixed upon me in more astonishment, nor methinks he recognized in the intruder of the princess' chamber the king's musketeer.

As I wavered, my hand upon the hilt, he advanced slowly, his eyes still fixed upon my face.

"Sir," said he very softly, "what would you with this lady?"

The princess crept to my side. "Brave M. de Marc," she whispered, "trust him not. A sudden thrust"—

"Sir," cried the duke a second time, "what is thy business?"

"At the king's command," replied I shortly.

"Aye, the good king," he muttered. "We were to dine together. What of the king?"

De Rossel stepped across the threshold. "The man is mad," he whispered, "mad as a hare. Beware, De Marc."

The sight of him changed the duke's mood.

"Begone!" he cried; then of a sudden he lunged at me with his sword.

As the blood drawn from the prick he gave me in the shoulder appeared upon the lace of my collar the princess cried out, and De Rossel pressed forward.

Angered by the wound, I made to thrust my opponent through the body, but de Rossel thrust my point aside.

"Wouldst slay a madman?" he cried. "There is another way."

Even as he spoke my point, being turned from its true aim, pierced the duke's shoulder. He started back, a wondrous change coming over him. The mad light in his eyes died out, the letting forth of blood o'ercoming the malady. With a bewildered gesture he [illegible] his hand across his eyes.

"O God," he muttered, "what thing be this?"

Suddenly, before I could intervene, he threw himself upon his knees before the princess.

"Madame," cried he, "'tis the curse upon my race. 'Twas for that I sought to be a churchman."

A look of great pity came to the lady's eyes. "My lord," said she, "thou art forgiven. The king"

"The king!" cried he. "I cannot meet the king!"

With a cry of terror he gained his feet and sought blindly for his sword. I thought he would have set upon us and stood on guard, but 'twas against himself he turned the blade.

Quicker than thought he set the hilt against the wall, pressing the point upon his heart so the steel pierced through ere any could raise a hand.

De Rossel bent over the quivering body. "Death!" he muttered. "'Tis a sorry thing. The madness o' the Duke de Biart hath slain him." Then, turning to the princess, who leaned half fainting against my shoulder, spoke he:

"Madam, the horses await below and the king in Paris. Let us ride thither quickly. I warrant M. de Marc will soon become a nobleman."

But what care I for what the king might offer me? In the eyes of the princess I had read that which is not in the gift of kings.

PRESIDENT'S VALEDICTORY

Answer to "What Shall We Do for Our Ex-Presidents?"

President Roosevelt in his office at the White House recently gave what may be considered his [illegible] with permission to a correspondent to use it. The president said:

"When the people of the country are asking the question, 'What shall we do for our ex-presidents?' tell them that they need do nothing for this ex-president. He is going out to work and to do for himself.

"I have had a first class time as president of the United States, and I have enjoyed every minute of the time I have been in the White House. When I have finished the last stroke I am going out contented and to work."

This statement came from the president after the close of a talk with one of his friends, with whom he had been discussing his approaching African trip.

The United States senate has passed a measure to increase the salary of the president to $100,000 a year. It appears strange that the senate is breaking its neck to be so liberal with the people's money, when it claims the treasury is so depleted it cannot pass a rivers and harbors bill, a thing that every section of the country wants. Senator Fulton was one of the few members of the senate, who was manly enough to fight the proposed measure and to urge that the appropriation for river and harbor improvements be made.

CONTRACT OF STATES

Representative Burke of Wahkiakum county, Wash., will introduce a bill at the present session of the Washington legislature, designed to bring about a contract between Oregon and Washington for the control of the Columbia river, the contract to be submitted to congress for ratification, says the Ledger. Mr. Burke thinks this the best method of settling the salmon fisheries quarrel.

The plan of settlement was suggested shortly after Elihu Root, secretary of state, addressed the national conservation congress in Washington City last May and asserted that the states could enter into agreements, with the consent of congress. Secretary Root thought the power of the states to enter into contracts with each other could be used with immense advantage in the conservation of natural resources.

The advantage of a contract between the states for a period of years would be that the legislature of each state would be bound to respect the agreement until it was terminated by its own provisions or the common consent of the parties. A more continuous policy would be insured by this plan, it is said, than by uniform legislation in the two states that might be destroyed by either state.

It may be well in this connection to cite the language used by Secretary Root last May inasmuch as his remarks appear to have been the basis for the contract or treaty plan of settling the Columbia river imbroglio. Mr. Root, addressing the national conservation congress at which the governors of many states were present, said: "The constitution of the United States prohibits states from making any agreement with each other without the consent of congress, but you can make any number of agreements with the consent of congress. Why should not the powers that are reserved to the state sovereignty be exercised by those sovereignties with a wise regard for the common interests? It is high time that the sovereign states of the [illegible] should begin to perform their duties with reference not only to their own individual local interests, but with reference to the common good. I regard this meeting as marking a new departure, the beginning of an era in which the states of the union will exercise their reserved powers upon a higher plane of patriotism and love of country than has ever existed before."

Mr. Root had reference to section 10, article I, of the United States constitution when he said the states could make contracts with each other, with the consent of congress. It reads in part: "No state shall, without the consent of congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another state or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay." The supreme court has held more than once that states may enter into an agreement, with the consent of congress.

At last the Brooklyn pastors have bestirred themselves in the "red light" crusade. But Brooklyn's one time pulpit luminary, Henry Ward Beecher, used to say that more souls get to heaven from red light houses than from some Christian churches he could name neighboring old Plymouth.

Not at all strange that the citizens of certain states which never pass a year without big floods should flood congress with petitions not to skimp the appropriation for irrigating arid sections this winter.

Late in the day for the port of Boston to expect to thrill the country by putting a hired examiner of tea on the job that was done gratis, and done to the king's finish, over a century ago!

Nothing strange in the discovery that only one in three graduates in domestic science class can run a sewing machine. One can make gowns and shirt waists for the bunch.

Roosevelt has been likened to every great man of history except Mark Antony. Now, that African trip was no petty episode in Mark's life as we read about it.

England's Autumn Leaves.

Autumn leaves in England do not have the brilliant coloring that they do in America.

Polishing the Stove.

Before polishing the stove wash it off with vinegar. It removes all grease, leaving the surface smooth, and keeps the blacking from burning off so quickly, saving much time and labor.

Simple Cough Medicine.

A simple cough medicine that children will take is made of one cupful of granulated sugar, the juice of one lemon and a pinch of cayenne pepper. Cook it until it snaps in cold water, pour into a buttered shallow pan and when it begins to harden cut it with a knife into small squares. When cold the candy can be broken into small pieces. This is pure and reliable.

Hot Air Furnaces.

Sharp angles should be avoided in the pipes of hot air furnaces. Square turns obstruct the flow of air much more than rounded ones.

Vases and Carafes.

Those who have been at a loss how to clean a carafe or deep vase will be glad to know that it may be done very satisfactorily with coal oil and sand. Coal oil is also efficacious in giving a high polish to windows.

The Freeman's Oath.

The first book printed in the United States was entitled "The Freeman's Oath."

Japanese Chopsticks.

Japanese chopsticks are delivered to the guests in a decorated envelope. The two sticks are already shaped from one tongue-like piece of wood and are broken apart by the guest.

An Old House.

The Reynolds homestead at Norwich, Conn., is one of the oldest houses of New England. The framework of the house today is the same that was erected by John Reynolds, the original proprietor, in 1650.

Old Christmas Dances.

"All In a Garden Green," "Gathering of Peascods," "Lumps of Pudding," "Under and Over," "The Bath," "The Slaughter House" and "Have at Thy Coat, Old Woman," are the names of old English Christmas dances now out of fashion.

"Why is it, Mrs Jones, my coffee is always better?" "Buy better coffee, get Folger's Golden Gate whole roast, don't grind too fine or boil too long."

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.

I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

COMMITTEE INSPECTS WORK

Street Department Preparing for Council

The members of the street committee with the city surveyor and street superintendent made an examination of the Adair drain yesterday afternoon with a view of acting upon the petition which has been filed asking that the resent drain be replaced by a system of drains, which shall run down the several streets between Thirty-third and Thirty-seventh, so that each thorofare shall carry away the water contiguous to it, instead of diverting the water out of its natural channels. The city officers made an extended examination of the entire district and the committee will meet on next Monday evening to prepare a written report on the matter with its recommendation to be submitted to the council. The committee yesterday made an examination of the grade at Irving avenue and Seventh street. Petitions have been persented for grades at different heights and the surveyor had set stakes in accordance with each petitions so that the committee could see exactly what the proposed changes would mean. While the committee has not made its written report on the matter, it is understood the majority of the members favor a compromise by "splitting the differences," between the two grades as asked for.

TELEPHONE SUBSCRIBERS

Changing from the old to the new and improved system it has been found necessary to re-number all telephones. Owing to the numbers covering the different classes of service it is desired that all subscribers, who have not been called upon by the solicitors of the company, to call at the central office and decide what class of service that they may desire. A new telephone directory will be issued immediately and the numbers must be assigned within a week.

DYKES DAMAGED BY HIGH TIDES

Great Amount of Damage Done at Yaquina

Toledo, Or., Jan. 21—The highest tide known in Yaquina Bay since 1882 happened yesterday. Considerable damage was done to dykes along the bays and slough at Toledo. The dyke of A. T. Peterson and of Wade & Schenck were broken by the high water and much damage done to the county road north of town. The planking was washed off the grade, and much of the grade washed out. The Olalla Dyking Dam, recently completed at a great expense to the landowners on that slough, was damaged, and is rapidly being washed away.

High wind was the cause of the high water. The steamer Newport on the lower bay was unable to make her regular trip with passengers and the mails in the morning. Farmers suffered greatly from the destruction of fences and buildings.

"SHORE ACRES."

It is said of Archie Boyd in his impersonation of Nathaniel Berry in James A. Herne's great play "Shore Acres," that he so makes the character predominate as the plain every day farmer, that audiences lose sight of the man himself, so complete is his disguise and so thorough his absorption of the character. This is dramatic art in its highest form, that is naturalness in acting. The author of the play dressed his characters in costumes in exact keeping with their surroundings. One of the strong features of Mr. Herne's play is not alone his simple story, but the wholesomeness of it. Not an incident, a line or a word of the play can be objected to. It has been said of it that it is as good as some sermons and better than others. "Shore Acres" will be presented here at the Astoria theatre Saturday night, with Archie Boyd playing the quaint and lovable character of Nathaniel Berry. This is a character which some say deserves rank with Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle." Mr. Boyd is surrounded by a company of associate players reputed to be equal to every emergency. Miss Dorothy Herne, the youngest daughter of the late James A. Herne, author of "Shore Acres," plays the leading female part and common report has it that no one has ever played it better. The Herne children, it would seem, have inherited their parents' stage talent, as both their father and mother for many years were among the conspicuous players of the country.

FINE WORK OF SECRETARY ROOT

Handled with England Matters of Great Delicacy

Washington, Jan. 21—With the ratification of three treaties between the United States and Great Britian regarding Canadian relations, which it is expected the United States senate will shortly make, the work of Elihu Root as secretary of state will be concluded. Secretary Bacon will then take up the tangled ends of diplomatic relations, and when Philander C. Knox takes the state portfolio he will find things in good shape. One treaty with Great Britian has already been signed, and the senate is expected to act upon it soon, and that the others will be signed a little later.

Two questions are settled outright in one of the treaties, which has to with the water boundaries between the United States and Canada. These are the use of the waters of Niagara falls and the diversion of the waters of Lake Michigan for the Chicago drainage canal.

HON. ELIHU ROOT

In the case of Niagara, American companies are limited to the use of 20,000 cubic feet per second and Canadian companies to 36,000 feet per second. These are the amounts now used, and this means the preservation of the natural beauty of the falls.

This treaty provides for the appointment of a permanent high joint commission to settle disputes that may arise in future regarding the use of boundary waterways. The high joint commission will take up gradually the work now done partly by the inland waterways commission in this country, and a similar commission in Canada. It will deal with problems having to do with the relocation of boundaries, fishing in boundary waters and navigation problems in the Great Lakes.

The other two treaties yet to be signed have to do with the Newfoundland fisheries and the adjustment of claims arising out of them. The first treaty will refer to the interpretation of the first articles of the treaty in 1818 and its application to The Hague tribunal. The second treaty, yet to be signed, deals with the appointment of a high joint commission to adjust calls as soon as The Hague tribunal has dealt with them.

Secretary Root's achievements are regarded here as remarkable. The Canadian treaties involved relations with a foreign power that had its own relations with its colony to consider, and was an intricate matter to handle.

Besides the Canadian treaties, Root has secured the signing of the now famous "Japan agreement," and has adjusted relations with South American, through the visit of the battleship fleets and the bureau of American republic.

Root was elected senator from New York by the legislature at Albany yesterday.

MILLIONS SPENT AT NAVY YARD

Expenditures Nearly Double Any Previous Year

Navy Yard, Puget Sound, Jan. 21—A total of $1,895,655.30 was expended at this yard during the year 1908 [illegible] the pay of civilian employes, salaries of officers and miscellanous expenses not covered by regular congressional appropriations. These figures are furnished by Yard Paymaster Hall. This is nearly twice as large as any other annual expenditure of the yard. These figures do not include the salaries and pay of the officers and men on the warships at this yard, nor does it include the thousands of dollars spent here annually in purchasing supplies for ships at this station.

The annual expense of the receiving ship Philadelphia are about $300,000, but this amount is not figured in the expenses of the navy yard, although this money is practically all expended in this vicinity. The cost of maintaining a modern warship averages nearly $600,000 annually. This money is spent in the ports nearest to where the ship is stationed. During the past year there have been as many as twelve modern fighting machines in this harbor at one time. The amount of money spent here by officers and men of these ships and the money spent in purchasing provisions for these ships was considerable.

It is estimated that the money expended here in the past year in running expenses of ships amounted close to $1,000,000.

The expenses of the yard do not include contract work. The money spent here by contractors in the past year was considerable. The foundation was laid for the new central power plant and boilers and smokestacks were put in place by contract. A considerable amount of dredging was done in the vicinity of pier 7. Work was done on the concrete sea wall and the naval magazines at Ostrich bay were begun. All its rock was done or [illegible] being done by contract, and at the lowest estimate the money expended here in contract work during the past year was $50,000.

The total expense of the navy yard during the year of 1907 was $974,726.94. The year of 1907 broke all previous records at this yard, but the year of 1908 made a record of expenses nearly double that of the previous year. The year of 1908 showed an increase of $920,928.36 over the expenditures of 1907.

The largest pay roll for any month in the year of 1907 was [illegible] November, when a total of $113,710.44 was expended. February of 1907 was the poorest month of that year, with the an expenditure of $49,599.16.

The greatest expenditure for any month [illegible] 1908 was $158,676.35 in the month of April. The smallest expenditure was in December of last year, when the total expenses were $102,580.84. The latter figures show that the yard has gained a greater stability as there [illegible] but little difference in the expenditures of the best and the poorest months of the year.

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business men looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men [illegible] just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Secret societies in public schools, including social or county high schools are forbidden by a measure which has been introduced in the state senate by Senator Cole. The provisions of the bill do not apply to the state university of the agricultural college.

After its meeting on next Monday evening to prepare a report on the Adair drainage district and relative to the grade on Irving avenue and Seventh street, the street committee will set a date on which the members will meet and make an examination of several other streets which the street superintendent reported as in a dangerous condition and badly in need of repairs or improvement.

While bound from Seattle for Yokohama, the British steamship Adato, Captain Stewart, went ashore at Oshimo, Japan, yesterday, according to advices received. The report states that all on board were saved. The skipper, however, remained on the steamer, whose deck is entirely under water. No details are given in the meager dispatch but it is presumed that the craft will be a total loss.

Superintendent Clark of the city schools has decided to have one day in each month that shall be known as Parents Day and on it the parents of the pupils are invited to visit the schools and watch the work of their children. The first of these has been fixed for tomorrow afternoon when the regular lessons will be conducted and impromptu programs given in each room, being followed by an exhibition of the writing and mechanical work of the pupils.

At the regular meeting last evening of Astor Temple, Pythian Sisters, officers to serve during the ensuing year were installed as follows: P. C. of T., K. McCrosky; M. E. C., Nellie S. Vernon; E. S. of T., Sarah J. Clinton; E. J. of T., Ida Bergman; M. of T., Anna Scheinagle; M. of R. & C., Birdie McCrosky; M. of F., Agnes Josephson; P. of T., Amelia Larsen; G. of O. F.;, Johanna Danielson. Following the ritualistic services, refreshments were served and the evening was most pleasantly passed.

While no definite date can yet be fixed, the indications are that the work of extending the taxes on the 1908 tax roll will be completed so that the roll can be turned over to the sheriff for collection soon after the first of the coming month. This will be much earlier than usual and will give property owners over a month in which to take advantage of the three percent rebate allowed on all taxes paid on or before March 15. Last year only about 15 days were allowed and still quite a number of the property owners took advantage of the rebate.

Fairly good progress is being made now in securing rights-of-ways for the proposed electric line to Seaside. Nearly all the owners of large tracts have filed their deeds and special attention is now being paid to the owners of smaller tracts many of whom are non-residents and hard to reach but little trouble is being experienced with them as soon as they can be communicated with. It now looks as tho practically the entire question of rights of way will be adjusted during the present month, and if so, assurance is given that work on the construction will be commenced in the early sping.

A few days ago the announcement was made that the A. & C. C. will operate several construction trains in the early spring to haul gravel for ballasting the track the entire length of the road. In addition to this, the statement is now made that the road will as soon as the North Bank road is competed to Spokane, which will be within a few weeks, the company will inaugurate a thru train service between Spokane and Astoria direct. The officials of the road are making preparations for handling the heaviest traffic this year that the line has ever had since it was built.

The expected high winds for Wednesday evenng did not materialze but this morning the weather bureau barometer dropped to 28.90 and is steady at a very low point. Some other barometers registered lower and a storm of some magnitude is evidently in progress at sea and may reach here this evening. The lowest barometer reading known in this city was on March 8, 1906 when it registered 28.48 and there was not a breath of air and breathing was somewhat difficult and it was noticeable that a whispered word could be heard across the street. The three follwing days there was a gale that never ceased until it had worn itself out and considerable damage was done to shipping.

FOUND—A small purse containing a small sum of money. Owner can have same by applying at this office. x

The steamer South Bay cleared at the custom house today for San Francisco with a cargo of 280,000 feet of lumber, loaded at the Hammond Lumber Company's plant

The tide of this moring was exceptionally high, higher in fact than on January 18 last year when it was suppose to have broken all records. It reached a stage in this city of over 12 feet but did little damage except flooding many cellars. In the vicinity of Warrenton however it overflowed dykes and flooded hundred of acres of property, breaking the dykes down and causing considerable damage. East of Warrenton the tracks of the A. & C. R. was three feet under water at one time.

The funeral of the late Captain Richard E. Howes was held this afternoon from the First Presbyterian church, which was crowded with the friends of the deceased and of his family. It was under the auspices of Astoria lodge, B. P. O. Elks and members of the ordre acted as active pall bearers while members of the bar pilots served in an honorary capacity. The floral offerings were profouse and elaborate and more than covered the handsome casket in which the remains reposed. The service at the church were conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. S. Gilbert, assisted by Rev. C. C. Rarick, pastor of the First Methodist church and a male choir sang several appropriate selections. The services at the grave in Greenwood cemetery were conducted by the Elks according to their ritual, which are particularily impressive. Out of respect to the memory of Captain Howes, who was one of the best liked and popular men in the city, a number of the business houses were closed during the funeral services.

Consul C. Henri Labbe, Captains Touze, of the French bark Assineres and Lemelleur, of the bark Eugene Schneider, acting as a board of survey, have condemned the wreck of the French ship Alice, which went ashore on the North Beach near Ocean Park on the morning of January 15. The board found that the hull was full of water, that the main mast was careened to port at an angle of about 30 degrees and was liable to go by the board at any time, and that it would be practically impossible to save any portion of the ship or cargo. During the investigation by the board of survey, the fact developed that an error of the ship Alice was responsible for the wreck. Captian Aubert had figured his position as being 60 miles off shore at approximately the time when he ran in so close to the beach that he was unable to extract himself from his perilous position.

An ice gorge nearly two miles long broke in the Wallowa river just above the dam at the Wallowa hatchery Sunday night, and was carried away by the swollen river without damage. The removal of the ice is a great relief to the hatchery employes, who kept a close watch for several days in order to prevent the ice from choking the intake of the flume which supplies water for the 2,000,000 eggs in the hatchery. When the last gorge went out the ice was plied ten feet deep over the intake and the road which runs along the river shore. The water supply was cut off for several days until the ice could be removed and a large number of eggs were lost. In preparation for a repetition of the disaster extra precautions were taken and a strong bar grating was installed in front of the intake in addition to the devices used at the time of the first gorge. It is believed that the new arrangement will prevent futher destruction of the eggs.

Two measures introduced by Senator Scholfield were passed by the state senate yesterday and will now be submitted to the house. They are measures fixing the salary of the justice of the peace in Seaside at $400 a year and fixing the salary of the constable of that place at $200. Among the bills introduced in the house yesterday weresix by the Clatsop county representatives. They were one by McCue, extending the powers of the board of pilot commissioners and authorizing it to maintain a sufficient number of capable pilots on the bar and river pilot grounds; one by McCue, providing that all portions of estates which are not claimed within one year shall revert to the state; on by McCue, appropriating $153,660 to purchase the property for the state normal schools at Weston, Monmouth and Ashland; one by McCue appropriating [illegible] for maintenance of normal schools; one by Leinenweber, to prevent discrimination in passenger rates by tranportation companies, and one by Leinenweber, authorizing the appointment of a deputy assessor in Clatsop county at a salary of $1200 a year.

OREGON SOLONS ENACTING LAWS

One is for Nine Foot Bed Sheets

Salem, Jan. 22 In the senate today a bill compelling hotels to furnish nine foot sheets was passed.

A bill to tax timber was passed by the house today, though many members absented themselves to avoid committing themselves. All owners of timber are affected and if the bill passes the senate Harriman's interests alone will be obliged to pay taxes, it is said, of nine hundred thousand dollars annually. The Oregon legislature appointed the committee of eight to meet a like committee from the Washington legislature to consider the fish laws of the Columbia River. The meeting will take place in Tacoma, Seattle or Olympia on January 29. The house will today seeks to prevent the shipment of liquors from a wet district into a dry district, except for medical or scientific purposes. The object is to tighten the prohibition laws.

Forest Grove, Jan. 22—The body of Monroe Huber, who last night shot and killed William Heltzel his employer at the latter's farm was found in a field today. He had killed himself with a rifle to avoid arrest. The exact cause of the shooting will never be known. It is believed however that Huber was infatuated with some woman and he claimed that Heltzel had talked about her.

UNIONS MAY USE WORD "UNFAIR"

San Francisco, Jan. 22—An important decision in favor of the contentions of a bakers' union was rendered today by Superior Judge Seawell, who lays down the rule that in order to obtain an injunction against a boycott the defendant unionists must be named specially in the complaint. The court further says that the term "unfair" as applied by labor unions to non-union firms is not an injury in itself.

INTERFERING WITH JURORS

Attempt Made to Obtain Views of Talesmen

San Francisco, Jan. 22—The third attempt to ascertain the opinion of a prospective juror in the trial of Patrick Calhoun was reported to Judge Lawlor today. Edward Aiken, an employer of W. A. King, a talesman, reported that a stranger entered King's place and tried to ascertain from Aiken King's views on the graft prosecution. Both the prosecution and defense disclaim any knowledge of the matter, but the man will be arrested if he can be traced.

King was discharged, because he had opinions regarding the case sufficient to disqualify him.

CANADIAN TO EXTEND LINES

Vancouver, B. C. Jan. 22 Vice President William Whyte, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, announced today that the company will spend $6,000,000 in Western Canada this year. Three hundred miles of additional track will be built.

The most important work will be the construction of a new line through Alberta, paralleling the Crows Nest pass east to Calgary. One hundred and thirty miles of the Saskatoon-Edmonton branch will be finished. Much work will be done between Moosejaw and Lacombe.

The double-tracking between Fort William and Winnipeg will be finished. The foundation for a huge scheme of terminals at Fort William will be laid this year.

SAILING MATES TO BE LICENSED

Washington, Jan. 22—Capain John H. Pruett, president, and other members of the American Masters, Mates and Pilots' Association, today before the senate committee on commerce, argued support of Senator Knox's bill requiring licensed masters and mates on all sailing vessels of over 300 tons. The present law requires licensed masters on vessels of over 700 tons but no licenses for mates.

APPROPRIATION FOR THE NAVY

Agreed to as Recommended by Committees

Washington, Jan. 22—The Finley amendment to the naval appropriation bill, striking out the battleship provision, was rejected by a vote of 80 to 160. The house defeated an amendment by Burton to limit the naval increase to one battleship. By a vote of 108 to 158 the house sustained the committee provision of the naval bill calling for two battleships. The house overwhelmingly refused to strike out the provision for five torpedo boat destroyers.

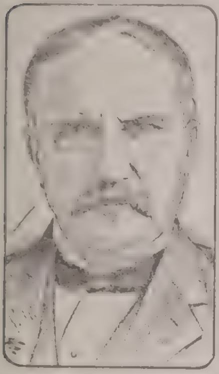
SAN PEDRO MUST BE FORTIFIED

General Staff Reports on Vital Strategic Points.

Washington, Jan. 22—That immediate fortification of San Pedro harbor is necessary for the welfare of the country [illegible] in a special report of the general staff of the army, issued today.

The staff lays much stress on the ease with which, under existing conditions, Japan could occupy the harbor and utilize it as a base of operations against the rest of the Pacific coast and the Panama canal.

Instead of naming Japan in pointing out these conditions the report makes reference to the mikado's country as "a certain oriental power that has recently acquired great potential strength."



ISIDOR RAYNER.

Maryland Senator who attacked Roosevelt in the Senate yesterday

Further, the report declares that a close study discloses the fact that "a certain oriental power" could, with a month's time, with hostile intentions, begin to land on the Pacific coast 100,000 men and that this number could be augmented by possibly 300,000.

Attention is also called to the easy manner in which the oriental power could gain acress to Unalaska and Pearl Harbor and seize both of them.

Moreover, the report says that in the event of the capture of the points mentioned and their occupation by the enemy the United States could not regain possession of the country in the vicinity of them.

The staff submit maps to prove its assertion. The board estimates that it would require $3,655,269 to fortify San Perdo harbor.

WALLA WALLA IS MAROONED

Washouts on All the Railroad Lines

Walla Walla, Wash., Jan. 22—With but one train to the city in the last 44 hours, Walla Walla is practically cut off from the outside world except by telegraph. Every creek and river in the county, except Mill creek, running through this city, is higher than has been known and the waters are receding about little. A train is expected over the Northern Pacific this afternoon, but the O. R. & N will run no trains today.

The latter road has two washouts between this city and Prescott, two between here and Pendleton, one between here and Wallula, completely tying up its lines. The Northern Pacific has a bad washout at Osborne and is transfering passengers. Another is just reported at Lamar. This may block trains from getting in at all

Many passengers are tied up in this city. The barometer this morning is at 28., the lowest with one exception in the history of the city. A 40 mile wind blew last night.

Wheat is not threatened at all. Conditions are excellent as far as grain is concerned.

MURDERERS GIVEN CHOICE

Regarding Mode of Their Execution

Bellingham, Wash., Jan. 22—A special to the Herald from Olympia says serious consideration is being given by state officials and legislative leaders and jurists to a bill just introduced in the house in connection with the death sentence. The bill provides that a man shall be given his choice of death when ordered to be put to death by the court. The criminal under this proposed law will have his choice of being hanged, sent to the electric chair or dispatched with drugs.

In addition it is proposed that no date be fixed for carrying out the senene. Two dates are to be named by the court and the sentence carried out on a day between these dates, to be selected by the man under sentence. When the prisoner decide which form of death he prefers and selects the date, the selection is to be final.

SCHOONER A TOTAL WRECK

All Efforts to Float the Vessell Abandoned

Santa Barbara, Cal., Jan. 22—Al efforts to float the Ensign were abondoned. Tremendous waves are breaking over the craft. Five members of the crew are aboard the vessel and efforts to get a line to them proved futile. Two sailors came ashore and were seen no more. The schooner will probably be a total wreck.

The wrecking schooner Fulton made the unsuccessful attempts to fire a line to the wreck. The crew of the schooner however succedded in running the line ashore and landed several men as well as the crew's baggage. The captain and six men are still on board.

MONEY FOR ALASKAN ROADS

Most is for Fairbanks-Valdez Highway

Washington, Jan. 22—The house committee on military affairs has decided to include in the bill now before them an appropriation of $350,000 for the construction of roads in Alaska, the entire amount estimated by Maj. Richardson, president of the road commission.

Maj. Richardson says that most of this will be expended on the road between Valdez and Fairbanks, and that at its completion the government will be able to establish a summer mail service between those points, greatly reducing the time of delivery.

The summer mail to Fairbanks now goes by way of Dawson.

ASK UNIFORM LEGISLATION

Joint Resolution Introduced by Representative Burk

Olympia, Jan 22—Owing to the lack of uniform laws governing the fishing on the Columbia river, which he considers to be the cause of the disputes between the states of Oregon and Washington, [illegible] Burke, representative from Wahkiakum county, has introduced a concurrent resolution in the house providing that a committee of seven Washington men meet with a like committee from the Oregon legislature to draft uniform laws. A similar resolution was introduced in the senate today and referred to the fisheries committee. The statutes drafted by the two committes will be sent to congress for ratification, with the request that they be ordered to hold for a term of not less than eight years.

S. G. COSGROVE.

S. G. Cosgrove, Republican governor elect of Washington, has been seriously ill in California. He will start for Olympia today to be inaugurated

In his resolution Mr. Burke points out that it is to the best interests of the people of each state to work in harmony, because the controversies could be obviated by uniform laws made by the two states and ratified by congress. Mr. Burke will ask that a commission composed of two men to be selected by the president of the senate, two by the speaker of the house and three by the governor, to negotiate with a similar commission representing the state of Oregon.

The laws to be drawn by the commission shall be submitted to the next session of the legislature for approval, and if ratified by both legislatures, shall be binding upon both states for a specified term of years.

"Under conditions as they now exist," said Mr. Burke, "Washington has its laws governing fishing on the Columbia, while Oregon has satutes diametrically opposed. This is the cause of all sorts of difficulties and trouble.

"The Oregon game warden has arrested Washington men who have been obeying their own laws taken them over to Oregon and fined them. The tension between the fishermen of the two states has been so great that sometimes it has seemed that pitched battles were imminent.

"Laws made by the two legislatures can be repealed, but if ratified by congress for a term of not less than eight years, will promote peace between the fishermen of the two states and eventually lead to complete harmony regarding the rights of fishermen on the Columbia river."

COLONEL LYLE HAS RETIRED

Noted Army Officer Has Reached Age Limit

Washington, Jan. 22—After 40 years of distinguished service in the army, Colonel David A. Lyle was placed on the retired list today by operation of the age limit. Colonel Lyle leaves an enviable record. In addition to his military career he has established a reputation as an inventor and an author. For five years past he has been stationed at Augusta, Ga., as commandant of the Augusta arsenal and chief or finance officer of the department of the gulf. Besides his service in the ordinance department of the army Colonel Lyle has long been prominently connected with the United States life saving service and it was in connection with this work that he evolved the famous Lyle life saving gun, which is today in use on ships and at life saving stations throughout the world.

COMMITTEE TO IGNORE CLIQUES

Recommend Donnelly for Appointment as Printer

Washington, Jan. 22—In an investigation of objections filed with the senate against the confirmation of Samuel B. Donnelly, as public printer, the members of the senate committee on printing have discovered what appears to be a revival of the old "Wahneta" and "Kickapoo" cliques within the ranks of the labor unions at the great printing establishment. These forces threatened to take part in the dispute which has been waged between employes of the printing office for a number of years to the great annoyance of the public printer. Members of the senate committe have determined not to take cognizance of the operations of these cliques and ignoring their activities have decided to again report the Donnelly nomination to the senate, with a recommendation that it be confirmed.

DEFENSE OF "NICKELETS"

Improve, Don't Abolish Five Cent Theatres

In reference to the present agitation concerning the conduct of five cent theaters, or "nickelets," as they are widely known, the Rev. A. E. Bartlett of Chicago presents the view that the entertainments should be improved rather than abolished

"Amusements have no character in and of themselves," he says. "They are good or bad as the people make them so. It is both unjust and unwise to condemn outright dancing, card playing and theater going. All wholesome amusements are needed, but instead of trying to abolish them the church should seek to purify and uplift them. The five cent theater has become one of the great problems in recreation which our city must solve. Its low price has enabled it to reach the multitudes, including many children. Our city needs these cheap amusements, but it does not need nor should it suffer coarse and unclean entertainments."

Funeral of Puritan Days.

A Puritan day funeral took place recently at North Kingston, R. I., when the body of John S. Smith, former town councilman, was carried to a grave on his farm in an old fashioned wagon drawn by a yoke of oxen and followed by a procession of several hundred mourners. The ancient customs were followed at the dying request of Mr. Smith. He was eighty years of age. For many years he had worn clothing patterned after Puritan styles.

Trio of World Powers Predicted.

"It will not be many years until China controls Asia, Germany domineers over Europe, and the United States, my beloved country, dominates the two Americas." Returning to this country after an absence of nine years, during which he has become one of the most prominent figures in the musical circles of Europe, Louis Lombard made the above prediction at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, New York.

Growing Tobacco In Maine.

It has apparently remained for Pope Gibbs to demonstrate in his own garden, situated about a mile from the Soldiers' home in Togus, that tobacco can be successfully grown in Maine. Last year Mr. Gibbs raised about eighty pounds of tobacco from seventy-nine plants. This year he raised very nearly the same amount from only thirty-five plants, the season being much more favorable for the growth of the plant. Mr. Gibbs had no difficulty in disposing of the tobacco which he raised last year and which was generally conceded to be of excellent quality. He cured it in his barn, which has a ventilator and where by opening the doors he was able to get the current of air necessary for the best results, the conditions being quite as favorable as in the best tobacco curing plants of the south. The opinion was very generally expressed last season that while Mr. Gibbs was successful in raising tobacco in this state it would not be possible to mature the seed here. This year he has disproved this idea by maturing a tobacco stalk more than seven feet high, with an exceptionally well developed cluster of seeds.—Kennebec Journal.

Persian Justice.

The revolutionary party in Persia is circulating on postcards and in larger form a picture descriptive of "Persian justice," which shows three bandits hanging by their feet from the city gate of Tauris. The men, almost naked, are shown suspended from an opening in the wall, the ropes binding their feet being fastened to a pillar, next to which a military guard stands at "attention." "For hours," runs the legend under the picture, "these wretches, the robber Ago and his companions, hung in their badly wounded condition before death relieved their agony. Thousands of people of all ages and classes looked mournfully upon these victims of 'Persian justice.'"

"Useless Jim."

By W. J. LAMPTON

Jim Doty was the son of industrious and thrifty parents, but he was no exemplar of the doctrine of heredity. As a boy he had gone to school because if he had not gone there the truant officer would have made existence elsewhere uncomfortable for him, and Jim dearly loved to be comfortable. At school it was easier to remain at the foot of his class than higher up, so he philosophically chose the easy thing and stuck to it. Jim was not a mischievous boy or a bad one in any sense, because those attributes require effort to maintain them. As somebody had to be at the foot of the class and there were those who were discontented there, the teacher accepted Jim as a special providence and made the most of him.

"It's beyond me about Jimmie," his mother was wont to say. "He ain't a bad boy nor up to no mischief, and you'd think when he went to school he'd learn his lessons just because he didn't want to learn nothin' else, but he won't learn a single thing, good or bad. He just seems to be everlastin' do less—settin' around and settin' around and settin' around. And I'm sure he don't get it from the Anderson side of the house neither."

Mrs. Doty was an Anderson, and this conclusion of hers was an unsupported animadversion upon Mr. Doty because that worthy man not only made a very comfortable living, but owned a small farm and had money laid away for a rainy day.

When Jim was old enough to go to work his father secured a place for him to learn the carpenter trade, which was rather a surprising selection, as success in that depended upon a skill which did not appear to be one of the characteristics of the young apprentice.

"I put him at that," Mr. Doty explained to an inquiring friend, "because I've seen that boy set on a soap box in the shade and whittle for six hours hand runnin'. Of course he never whittles nothin' out of the wood he uses up, but I kind of thought maybe he would learn to if I put him at carpenterin'."

Time, and not a very long time either, proved the speciousness of Mr. Doty's logic, and Jim was no longer seen about the shop where he had essayed to handle the drawknife and the saw.

After this attempt to make a skilled laborer of his son Mr. Doty thought possibly there might be an undeveloped instinct for agriculture in the youth, and Jim was sent to a farm not far from the village. His usefulness in that field was manifested within three days by his return to the parental roof.

"What's the matter now?" inquired his father when Jim walked into the house at supper time and calmly took his accustomed place at the table as if he had not missed a meal.

"Dunno," replied Jim unconcernedly. "Old man Sparks said he reckoned the mortgage on the place was about all the load it could carry at present, and he told me I could go."

Mr. Doty smiled. He couldn't be very harsh with his only son, because while he did nothing to add to the glory and honor and wealth of the name of Doty he did as little to bring shame or sorrow upon it. Mr. Doty recognized in Jim a negative blessing, and many fathers would be only too glad if they had such sons.

By the time Jim had reached his twenty-fifth year he had tried his hand at every kind of work the village and vicinity had to offer, and he had acquired nothing except the title of "Useless Jim." But Jim did not worry. He was a philosopher and his good nature was imperturbable.

"Why the dickens don't you go to work, Jim?" said Hanks, the groceryman, one day as Jim sat on a salt barrel in the shade chipping away at the chine with his knife.

"Got a job you'd like to give me?" responded Jim in a willing tone, and the groceryman disappeared. He might be anxious enough to see Jim have a job, but he did not care to assume the relationship of employer.

As nothing else of a permanent character offered itself, Jim concluded, entirely on his own volition, to fall in love. They say an idle brain is the devil's workshop, and surely he found a fine place for his business in Jim. Why Jim ever fell in love nobody could say, and he did not know himself, nor did he think it worth the effort to discover. It was enough for him that he was in love, and he was serious about it, too—so serious, indeed, that he wanted to marry the object of his choice forthwith, thereby displaying a wholly unsuspected energy.

This object was Mary Canby, the blacksmith's daughter and also the village schoolteacher. She was pretty and bright, and she liked Jim because, although disinclined to bodily exertion, he was not slow of wit and he could talk well.

"For goodness sakes, Jimmie," said his mother—she called him Jimmie, as if he were still a boy—"whatever do you want to marry for? You can't support yourself, much less a wife and family, and married women can't school teach to support their husbands."

"I dunno, mother," replied Jim, whittling a stick down to a fine point.

"Well, you ought to know," she said letting her temper show itself. "You just can't marry, that's all. You're the uselessest thing on earth now, and married you'd be worse."

"I guess there's some use for me in the world, mother," Jim contended "If there hadn't 'a' been what do you s'pose the Lord put me here for?"

She looked him over as he stood in the doorway the very picture of careless indifference and shiftless good nature

"Well," she replied, "he's the only one that knows, and he ain't told yet."

When Mary Canby discovered that Jim was beginning to "act foolish" she promptly but kindly told him of the utter uselessness of his suit.

"Why don't you want to marry me, Mary?" he asked in a dull, dazed way, as if not comprehending the full purport of her decision. "We've always been friends, and you know you like me."

"I know, Jim," she said gently, "but like is not love, and one cannot marry without love."

"Do you love anybody else?" he asked, quickening a little. "I've heard that you thought a good deal of Jack Murfin and him of you."

Mary Canby was not coquetting with Jim Doty.

"Yes, Jim, I do," she answered frankly, "and Jack and I are to be married as soon as school closes for the summer."

Jim choked, and the tears came to his eyes.

"Mother said I wasn't any use in the world, and I guess I ain't," he said bitterly, hopelessly.

"Oh, yes, you are, Jim," she encouraged him. "Your chance hasn't come yet, but it will."

"I dunno," he sighed despairingly, and, turning away, he walked slowly homeward alone.

The village knew what was the matter with Jim for the next month or more, but it was considerate of his suffering, and he heard no jeering word nor the laugh that hurts.

Two weeks before the school closed Jim was down at the railroad shops, where Jack Murfin was foreman. He was there chiefly because he did not happen to be elsewhere at the moment, and he was sitting in the shade whittling. Possibly he was somewhat more active than usual and was thinking, for he had just seen Jack Murfin walking across the yards toward a gap in the fence, and he knew the date of Jack's wedding day. They were not friends in the sense of associates, but Jack did not care how much Jim enjoyed himself about the place so long as he did not interfere with business, and Jim had never been given to interfering with business if it did not interfere with him.

Intent upon his thoughts, Jim continued whittling until presently he was recalled to his surroundings by a shout of alarm. It was Jack's voice, and, looking through the gap in the fence, he saw Jack lying across the rails with his leg twisted under him and his foot fast in a frog. He had passed out to the main tracks, and Jim heard a train coming. Quicker than he had ever moved before in all his stagnant life he cleared the space between them and stood in the track over his rival's body. The heavy engine coming down had been reversed, but too late, and no power on earth could stop it. But Jim never faltered. Lifting the prostrate man to a sitting position, he wrenched his foot from the fatal clutch, and with a giant's strength he flung him outside the rails.

When Jim's body was picked up a few minutes later a little life remained—just a fluttering spark, but enough to give the light that never fades.

"Jim! Jim!" cried Murfin, taking him in his arms.

"It's all right now, Jack," whispered Jim, opening his eyes and smiling "Mary said I was some use in the world and my chance would come some time. Tell her"—

His words had come painfully and in gasps, and they stopped with the sentence unfinished But Jack knew what to tell Mary

Character In Speech.

Of course the broad view of the question that language is life only applies to those who have the elements of the language well under control But in a lesser degree, even among the unread and unskillful, the life of the man or woman will always protrude through his speech His language will always to some extent be an indicator of his life If you will go from Spenser and Shakespeare to Massinger and Fletcher and Webster in English literature, you will find that the fall in language was accompanied also by a fall in life. If you will read Milton and then Pope, you will find the grandeur and repose of Milton in his life as well as in his language You will find the hypocritical glibness and self satisfaction in the life of Pope as well as in his language Milton's was the righteousness of conscience, and you read it in his lines Pope's was the righteousness of geometry, and you will find it mirrored in his stiff little verses.—North American Review.

A CROSS ON HIS BACK

It Was Made with Chalk But Was Too Heavy to Carry

There is a story of an envious tailor current with the French peasantry. He fancied that his neighbor, who received a pension for the loss of an arm incurred while fighting for his country, was better off than himself. Both men went to pay their rent on the same day.

"That' a lucky man," said the tailor to the landlord. "He gets well paid for his arm."

"But who would be willing to part with an arm, even if he were paid for it?" said the landlord.

"I would," declared the tailor.

"You!" cried the landlord "Why, man, you wouldn't be willing to bear anything of the sort, no matter how much you were paid for it."

"I wish some one would try me."

"Now, see here," said the landlord, who had studied human nature, "I'll tell you what—if you'll wear even so much as a chalk mark on your back I'll remit your rent as long as you wear it on your coat so it can be seen, the condition being that you tell no one why it is there."

"Agreed," said the tailor eagerly. "That's an easy way to pay rent."

So the chalk mark in the form of a cross was made on the back of his coat, and the delighted tailor sallied forth upon the street.

Strangers and acquaintances hailed him to tell him of the mark on his back. Jokes were made at his expense, children laughed and pointed at him, and his wife annoyed him with questions and with conjugal familiarity told him he was a fool. The usually amiable man grew surly and morose; he shunned men, women and children and frequented back streets. Before the week was up the tailor found himself embroiled in a quarrel with his best friend, his wife had threatened to leave his house, and he considered himself miserable and ill used.

Finally one night he took off his coat and rubbed out the chalk mark and said: "There! I would not wear that cross on my back another week, no, not if I could have all the money there is in Paris!"

Concerning Bandits.

The highwayman who robs a stage

His Job.

A young boy got a job with a Scottish farmer once. "Ye'll sleep in the barn," the farmer said, "and I'll expect ye oot in the field ilka morn at four o'clock."

"Very well, sir," said the boy.

But the first morning he overslept a little, and it was half past 4 when he reached the field. The farmer, leaning on his hoe, gave him a black look. "Where have ye been all the forenoon?" he growled.

Thanks to the actions of short sighted individuals, the Columbia river as a wheat shipping port is being ruined just as rapidly as it can be and the tonnage is being diverted to the Sound. The reason for this is obvious. The extra expense and delays in hauling vessels up and down a tortuous stream to a point over a hundred miles inland in place of doing the shipping from some point near the ocean are things which shipowners will not overlook when fixing charter rates. It is all well enough to contend that those thing don't count, but the results show that they do. At the present time the tonnage of deep sea vessels en route to the Columbia river is but 26,600 tons against 67,568 tons a year ago. The en route list to the Sound consists of vessels aggregating 80,104 tons, only 6000 tons less than at the corresponding time last season. With this great falling off in one year, how long will take the present narrow minded policy, if continued, to ruin the Columbia as a grain shipping port?

The International Prison Congress will meet at the national capital in 1910. It will be the first time for the United States to entertain the international prison congress, though the congress was organized at the suggestion of the United States. It was in 1871 that the United States congress passed a resolution directing President Grant to appoint a commission to visit the countries of Europe and induce them to join in a great international congress to consider the treatment of criminals and the prevention of crime. Dr E. C. Wines was appointed commissioner. The first congress was held in London. To the seven international congresses are due many of the advances made throughout the civilized world in dealing with crime. Old punitive methods have given way to reformatory methods. The criminal is still in deep disrepute, as he ought to be, but the convicted man who wishes to change his life and make amends for his past has an opportunity now that in the time of President Grant he did not have. Elihu Root, secretary of state, has asked congress to appropriate $50,000 to pay expenses of the international prison congress. The sum should be appropriated. A state could afford to expend such an amount for the good that would come of a congress of the ablest penologists of the civilized world.

A bill has been introduced in the legislature to provide for the creation of a board of pilot commissioners, the main object of which is to make a majority of the board residents of Portland. Another bill that has been introduced is to move the state capital from Salem to Portland. Measures of this kind are to be expected as Portland has been trying for years to do all she can to place the control of everything in the state under her hands. The balance of the state may wake up some day and unite their interests and when this happens there will be a reckoning.

Secretary Wilson's twelve years at the head of the department of agriculture have covered a period of wonderful progress in farming in the United States. It was long the fashion to treat with levity the work of Uncle Sam's farm bureau. A wasteful distribution of seeds was popularly believed to be its chief business. But the present secretary has assumed for his province the teaching of the great body of producers how to get results from their labors.

Granted that prosperity would have come to the farmers anyway and that the increase in crop production and crop values was inevitable, the department officials and their staff have not imitated the lucky lord of the soil who sits on the fence and whittles while things grow. There has been no letup in the work of trying to improve upon what almost seemed good enough to be let alone. Secretary Wilson has demonstrated the practical utility of scientific investigation and instruction on a mammoth scale—in other words, paternalism—in this important branch of national industry. And his work will show to greater advantage when the struggle of man with nature becomes keener.

The true story of the economic struggles of that man Harvey, who saved $13,000 out of an enlisted soldier's pay, should strike the crowd as another "Poor Richard's Almanac," yet it is doubtful if a volume containing his reminiscences would have a fraction of the popularity gained by books telling how a Carnegie or a Rockefeller "got it."

The way scientists keep telling us all about what microbes are up to one can infer that these gentlemen created the pesky things and trained them for experts at the job they are on.

Some of the verdicts to the effect that "the prisoner did not intend to commit a crime" would fit the case better if they stated that he did not intend to be caught at it.

"Yes, sir," said the sorrowing old fellow. "I've jest 'ad bad news from 'ome. The 'ouse that 'as sheltered me for years is to be torn down, and I 'aven't a penny to my name to stop it. Everybody will be turned out, and goodness knows what'll 'appen to 'em!"

"Poor soul!" said the sympathetic passerby, bestowing a penny on the sad old man. "That isn't much, but you are welcome to it. And where is this old home of yours, my friend?"

"Up at the joll, sir," replied the old man. "It seems very hard. I've lived there five and twenty years."—London Opinion.

How to Make a Cup of Cocoa.

Take a tablespoonful of cocoa and put it in a tin cup. Add one teaspoonful of granulated sugar and one tablespoonful of boiling water. Mix well, so that there will not be any lumps of cocoa. Pour a little less than one-half pint of milk into a saucepan and cook it, stirring all the time, until it is scalded—that is, until a film forms on it and it begins to bubble a little. Stir the cocoa mixture into this and cook until it boils up.—Delineator.

WANTS BAN ON LONG HAT PINS

Has Plan to Make Traveling Safe

Salem, Or., Jan. 22—Hat pins more than ten inches long are not liked by Representative Farrell, of Multnomah county, and he introduced a bill making it a misdemeanor for anyone to sell or have in his or her possession such a article, and provides a fine of from $10 to $100, or imprisonment of from ten days to three months. Representative Farell states that women are in the habit of wearing extra long hat pins, which are especially offensive to passengers in crowded streets cars and places of amusement, and he desires to eliminate this evil. Farrell also introduced a bill which, if passed, will make all stockholders of savings banks liable for double the amount of their stock in the event of failure of the bank.

TELEPHONE SUBSCRIBERS

Changing from the old to the new and improved system it has been found necessary to re-number all telephones. Owing to the numbers covering the different classes of service it is desired that all subscribers, who have not been called upon by the solicitors of the company, to call at the central office and decide what class of service that they may desire. A new telephone directory will be issued immediately and the numbers must be assigned within a week.

AMENDMENT TO PILOTAGE LAWS

Features of Measure Introduced by Representative Mahone

A measure has been introduced in the Oregon house of representatives by Representative Mahone of Portland to amend the state pilotage laws so as to have the majority of the commission residents of Portlaand in place of Astoria. The proposed amendment says of the commission:

"Each of said commissioners shall be commissioned by the governor, and before entering upon the duties of his office shall subscribe to an oath of office, and file the same with the secretary of state, to the effect that he will support the constitution of the United States and of this state, and faithfully discharge the duties of the office of pilot commissioner according to law and to the best of his ability. A person to be eligible to the office of pilot commissioner under this act shall be over twenty-one years of age and must be a citizen of the United States and of this state. Said commissioners shall be residents of Clatsop county, Oregon, or of Multnomah county, Oregon, and at least one of said commissioners shall be a resident of Clatsop county, Oregon, and at least one of said commissioners a resident of Multnomah county. Such commissioners shall hold office for the period for which they are appointed and until their successors are appointed and qualified, and a vacation in such office must be filled for the remainder of the term by the governor.

"The board has the power and it is its duty under this act to maintain a sufficient number of pilots upon the bar and river pilot ground to meet the demands of commerce, and to exercise a general supervisor over the subject of pilotage upon said grounds, and to that end may do and provide as follows:

"Examine and license pilots for said pilot grounds. Hear and determine all complaints against any of said pilots. Make and alter rules for the government of such pilots and the maintenance of an efficient pilot service on the pilot grounds aforesaid not inconsistent with the laws of this state or the United States, and to enforce the same by any lawful and convenient means, including the suspension or removal of any such pilots and the imposition on him of a penalty of not to exceed $250 for any violation thereof."

LUMBER TONNAGE IN MORE DEMAND

Improvement Is Regarded as Only Temporary, However

During the past week there has been considerable activity in chartering of offshore lumber tonnage. However, the demand is regarded as abnormal, and it is expeted that business will quiet down shortly. There have been no unusual features except that rates are still unusually low, and there seems to be no immedinte prospect of a rise.

Less business has been done in coastwise lumber tonnage, but the fact that rates have remained steady is taken as a favorable indication that conditions will improve as the spring opens.

Practically nothing is doing in wheat exporting. San Francisco has dispatched its last grain vessel of the season, and it is believed that the same is true of Puget sound, although an occasional carrier may be picked up later. The Portland fleet will soon be gone and the present season will be a matter of history. There is ample tonnage on the coast, and it is reported that ships have been offered for 15 shillings to the United Kingdom, but have found no takers at this exceptionally low figure.

Until May 1 news of union vessel are at liberty to charter their tonnage for what they can get. After the date name, unless further action is taken the union minimum is 27 shillings 6 pence, from Puget sound and Portland, will again become effective.

Present indications are that tonnage will be none too plentiful at the opening of the next grain season. Few vessels are outward bound to this coast. The Orient is said to be well cleared of tramp tonnage, while Australia its taking a big fleet to carry is grain crop. While there is a large number of idle vessels in the United Kingdom, this tonnage is not likely to be sent to the North Pacific unless an unusual demand appears, which is not considered at all probable. Looking months in advance, it seem reasonable that there should be a fair demand for vessels at union rates or better when the new crop is ready for shipment. In their weekly review of the lumber freight market, Hind, Rolph & Co give the following current rates for lumber: To United Kingdom fom Eureka 51s 3d; from Columbia river and Puget sound, 15 s 3d; to South Africa, 52s 6d from Eureka 50s from Columbia and Puget sound; to direct nitrate port from Europe, 45s; from Columbia and Puget sound, 38s 9d; to Callao, 45s and 40s, respectively, to Sydney, 30s and 28s 9d, repectively for steamers, 30s.

INCREASES THE TIMBER TAX

Beals' Bill Would Add Materially to Revenues

Salem, Or., Jan. 22—Computing the timber acerage of the state and its valuation on a minimum basis, an increase of nearly $300,000, per annum would be produced in taxes for state purposes if the pending bill of Representative Beals, of Tillamook, providing for the assessment of all timber lands of the state on a cruised basis of valuation, should be enacted. Such a bill was introduced in the house last week. The same measure was before the legislature in the 1907 session. At that time the bill passed the house by a big vote only to be slaughtered in the senate.

It is estimated that there are not less than 1 000,000 acres of timberland in the state owned by big corporations. Under the present system of taxation, this property is not assessed on an average for more than $5 an acre. This assessment on a minimum basis is figured at 25.000 feet per acre, or 4,000,000 feet per quarter section. In other words, the existing valuation on this class of property is said to involve a tax of about 20 cents per 1000 feet.

Assuming that under the Baels' bill timber lands should be assessed for 50 cents a 1000 feet and this is considered a very minimum valuation when based on a reliable cruise, the increased assessable value of 1,000,000 acres of timber land on an average of 25,000 feet an acre, would aggregate $7,500,000. On his increased valuation, a levy of 10 mills, exceedingly low in view of the tact that several counties of the state already have levied a tax of 20 mills, would yield taxes to the amount of $750,000 more than are collected from the same property under the existing assessed valuation of this class of property.

The levy for state purposes for 1909 is 1.9 mills for general state purposes and 1.5 mills for school purposes. On an increased valuation of $7,500,000 on timber lands there would be produced for state purpose alone a total of $255,000 more than will be collected under the present system of fixing these valuations. This computation does not include any estimate of the amount of increased taxes that woud be raised for county and municipal purposes.

Representative Beals has compiled some convincing statistics and says he will conduct an aggressive fight that his measure this year may receive the favorable consideration of both houses.

"SHORE ACRES."

It is said of Archie Boyd in his impersonation of Nathaniel Berry in James A. Herne's great play "Shore Acres," that he so makes the character predominate as the plain every day farmer, that audiences lose sight of the man himself, so complete is his disguise and so thorough his absorption of the character. This is dramatic art in its highest form, that is naturalness in acting. The author of the play dressed his characters in costumes in exact keeping with their surroundings. One of the strong features of Mr. Herne's play is not alone his simple story, but the wholesomeness of it. Not an incident, a line or a word of the play can be objected to. It has been said of it that it is as good as some sermons and better than others. "Shore Acres" will be presented here at the Astoria theatre Saturday night, with Archie Boyd playing the quaint and lovable character of Nathaniel Berry. This is a character which some say deserves rank with Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle." Mr. Boyd is surrounded by a company of associate players reputed to be equal to every emergency Miss Dorothy Herne, the youngest daughter of the late James A. Herne, author of "Shore Acres," plays the leading female part and common report has it that no one has ever played it better. The Herne children, it would seem, have inherited their parents' stage talent, as both their father and mother for many years were among the conspicuous players of the country.

Star Course—Russell H. Conwell of Philadelphia, Monday night at Presbyterian chruch at 8 o'clock. Any who may have misplaced their tickets may state the fact at the door and will be admitted. General admission 75 cts. High school 25 cts. Tickets for the remaining three numbers of the course may be secured at the door for $1.50. DO YOU KNOW

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

ABOUT ASTORIA

J. Adrian Epping and wife of Portland, visited during the past week with Mrs. John H. Devlin. They will return home Sunday evening.

The French bark Eugene Schneider which has been at Portland for some days, will take on 1,500,000 feet of lumber at the Hammond mill.

A. W. Duncan was up from Seaside today on a business trip. He says the tide was unusually high at that place yesterday but no damage was done.

Miss Jessie Jewett, who has been visiting her mother during the last two weeks left for New York last evening to join her theatrical company.

The Norwegian steamship Elsa [illegible] due from Comax, B. C. to load 200,000 feet of lumber at the Hammond mill and then proceed to Portland to finish cargo.

The Donald Stock company will conclude their engagement at the Bakeronian Sunday night, and next week high class vaudeville will be the attraction.

Miss Christine Wade, of Astoria was one of the successful writers of the "Ben Hur" essays in the Oregonian "Ben Hur" contest. Miss Wade is a pupil of St. Mary's Academy.

A son of John Hendrickson who has been ill for several days, was taken to the hospital this afternoon for treatment. The exact character of his malady is not known but his condition is not considered to be serious.

D. C. Rogers, chief engineer of the Astoria, Seaside & Tillamook electric line, left this morning for Springfield, Oregon, to investigate the use of turbine wheels, which the local company will probably install to generate power for its road.

Sam E. Harris, who has been confined to his home for some time with a severe illness, was able to be out this morning for the first time and strange as it may seem his first work was to make arrangements for the funeral of a friend and employe.

Charles Peck, who has been in the employ of Sam. E. Harris for a number of years in the capacity of porter, died this morning of a complication of diseases afer a long illness. He was a native of Finland, 67 years of age and unmarried. His funeral will be held on Sunday morning from Pohl's funeral parlors and the interment will be in Ocean View cemetery.

The sliding of the ground in the section adjacent to the old Adair drain still continues and it is much worse than for a number of years, probably on account of the heavy rains and because the improvement of Irving avenue in that part of the city has loosened the ground on the hillside. A plan is now being devised to put in a new system of drains, which may carry away the surplus water and prevent the damage that occurs each year.

David F. Atkins, inspector of mechanical and electrical engineering connected with the supervising architects office of the treasury department is in the city today looking over the heating plant at the custom house. During his stay in the city Mr. Atkins is the guest of Collector McGregor.

Word is [illegible]ived from North Beach that the stranded [illegible]ch bark Alice is on her beams [illegible] and at high tide nothing can be seen of her excepting a portion of her bowsprit. Captain Veysey, Lloyds' surveyor, who made an examination of the craft a few days ago has pronounced both the vessel and her cargo a total loss.

The water in the big reservoir has now reached its normal stage as the repairs to the broken service pipes in the various parts of the city are about completed and much of the great waste has been checked. The department [illegible] replacing the broken main on Taylor avenue as rapidly as possible and within a few days water can be furnished to the residents of that section of the city.

Thursday's high tide did considerable damage to the tracks of the A. & C. R. east of Warrenton by washing out its tracks in several places. Temporary repairs were made by treatling, but the up train was delayed until half past nine and the train for Portland did not leave Astoria until ten o'clock, and was proportionally late in arriving up the river. Today the trains are running to the west on regular schedule but it will be several days before the tracks are in their usual shape.

The extremely fancy postcards ornamented with pulverized glass, tinsel embossing, metals and other things that glisten and look nice, have been barred from Uncle Sam's mails—that is, unless the said cards are enclosed in envelopes. It used to be great to send one of these fancy things any old place in Uncle Sam's domain for one little old cent piece. The reason the postoffice department will not handle these cards as 1 cent mailable matter like the ordinary postcard is because the substance on them which shines and attracts and looks good is poisonous in most instances. So if you want to ship one of these real fancy cards to a friend now don't forget to put it in an envelope. Then put 2 cent stamp on the covering. Otherwise, the pretty little, innocent looking card is likely to be held up by the government officials.

The high tide of Thursday did damage to the tide lands in this vicinity that can hardly be estimated in money. At Warrenton and that vicinity nearly all the dykes were broken or overflowed and large bunches of cattle stood in water up to their flanks all night as there was no chance to reach and drive them to higher land and they must have deteriorated in value if not many of them die. In the Lewis and Clark district pratically similar conditions exist but to not the same extent and in the Youngs river district many dykes were broken and the land overflowed. The tide today was equally as high but the damage from it can not be learned until later. The height of the tide for the past two days has never been equaled as far as can be learned from "old timers" although in the early eighties there is said to have been what appeared to be a tidal wave enter the river and bank the water up higher for a short time but this was not believed to have been a natural phenomina, being the result of an earthquake at sea.

Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Brownell and Deputy Sheriff McLean went to New Astoria yesterday afternoon in response to a call by telephone and arrested Arthur N. Hall, an enlisted man at Fort Stevens, on a charge of pointing a revolver at Charles Mekula, marshal at New Astoria. Later in the day Hall was arraigned before Justice Jewett on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon and after a preliminary hearing, was released on $100 cash bail to appear before the circuit court at its coming session. According to the testimony submitted at the hearing, Hall was in a saloon at New Astoria on Wednesday evening and as he stepped out the back door, drew a revolver and fired, supposedly in the air. The marshal who was in front of the saloon at the time, rushed in and as he was going to the back door, Hall pointed the revolver at his head, saying: "Step back or I'll blow your block off.' Hall then went to another saloon where he was followed by the marshal, who threw him down and took his gun away. Hall was then turned loose, but the following day an information was filed against him.

Representative McCue has sent to the chamber of commerce a copy of the house bill No. [illegible] introduced by Representative L. D. Mahone of Portland relating to pilotage on the Columbia River bar and on the Columbia and Willamette rivers and to repeal all former laws on that subject. Pilot commissioners under the new bill must [illegible] residents of Clatsop or Multnomah counties. The bill is of special importance to all of the lower river interests. It would appear, that according to this bill all pilot licenses now held would become null and void and that new ones would have to be issued in their places, therefore necessitating an examination as to fitness concerning practical knowledge of currents, tides, soundings, bearing, distances and signals.

As was announced in last evening's Budget, the Portland delegation in the legislature [illegible] greatly alarmed over the bill introduced by Representative Bean of Lake county to provide for the incorporaiton of ports in counties bordering on bays or rivers navigable from the sea. They claim to have found a "joker" in the bill but the only joke about the matter is that the measure was drawn up by Mr. Flanders, who [illegible] attorney for the Port of Portland. In commenting on this bill today, the Oregonian calls it an Astoria measure and says it is a menace to Portland. The bill is not an Astoria measure by any means and was prepared by the members of a commission appointed by Governor Chamberlain. At the meeting of the state development league at Marshfield last August a resolution was adopted requesting the governor to appoint a commission to draw a measure authorizing the creation of ports in various counties bordering on navigable streams. In response to that request, Governor Chamberlain appointed a commission consisting of Attorney Flanders of Portland, Attorney Clark of Marshfield, Herman Wise of this city and two other men, whose names could not be ascertained today. Mr. Flanders and Mr. Clark, the only attorneys on the board, each drew up measures, which were practically alike and which were later submitted to the other members of the commission. Mr. Wise on receiving copies of the proposed bills conferred with the committee on navigation of the Chamber of Commerce and finding nothing objectionable in the bills approved them as a member of the commission that is all Astoria or any one residing in Astoria had to do with the measure as the one prepared by Mr. Flanders, is the one now before the legislature. It was a measure which the entire commission considered fair to all sections interested.

The big ice jam at Celilo broke last night, but the danger is not over by any means. One of the big fishwheels at Seufert's cannery was completely destroyed and two scow wheels, belonging to Jake Andrews, are floating on the ice opposite the cannery, with no hope of saving them. Andrews', an Indian, loss will amount to $2000. The big blockade in the river is now at Big Eddy, the jam reaching an enormous height and extending a distance of more than a mile. The river at The Dalles has remained about stationary today, although it raised 2.1 feet last night. The ice next the shore on the Oregon side broke this afternoon and a stream of water 15 feet wide is rushing down the river. A gang of men were at work to day endeavoring to get river craft, now in danger of being destroyed, to a place of safety.

ATLANTIC LINER IN COLLISION

Passengers and Crew Saved By Steamer Florida

Boston, Mass., Jan. 23—The White Star steamer Republic, which sailed from New York yesterday for Mediterranean ports, carrying 250 first-class and 211 steerage passengers, was rammed by an unknown vessel and disabled 26 miles south of Nantucket in a thick fog early today. The passengers and crew were taken off in safety by the Italian steamer Florida, from Naples to New York. Immediately after the accident, the wireless apparatus on the Republic flashed news of the steamers plight in all directions and within a short time several vessels were on the way to offer assistance. The first messages were alarming, and said the steamer was sinking. A later message said the engine-room was flooded but the steamer could keep afloat. United States government revenue cutters picked up the call for assistance and within a few minutes the cutters Acushnet and Gresham were on the way to the scene.

STILL AFLOAT

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Jan. 23—It was reported at one thirty this afternoon that the Republic is still afloat. The incoming steamer Lucania reported at 12:30 that the Republic would sink.

VALUABLE CARGO

New York, Jan. 23—The Republic was valued at $1,500,000. Her cargo worth about sixty thousand dollars.

MANY VICTIMS OF HOLD UP

Five Persons Dead and Several in Hospitals

London, Jan. 23—Five persons are dead and a score of others are in the hospitals at Walthamstow, a suburb of this city, as the result of a sensational attempt by two Italians at highway robbery. The Italians were surrounded by a posse and committed suicide. Three other victims, including a policeman and a young boy are dead. Two policemen and three boys were wounded.

The Italians had been discharged from the rubber plant and lay in wait to seize the bags, containing the pay of the employes. They secured it and when pursued by the police in motor cars drew automotic revolvers and fired at their pursures with deadly effect and then suicided.

TRAINS COLLIDE DURING FOG

Three Persons Killed and Several Injured

Altoona, Jan. 23—During an impenetrable fog, the second section of the St. Louis express, westbound, which left Philadelphia yesterday afternoon, crashed into the first section at Summer Hill, 25 miles west of this city early this morning, killing three persons and injured six, one probably fatally.

BIG SNOWSLIDE IN CALIFORNIA

Fatal Accident Occurs On Southern Pacific

Santa Barbara, Calif., Jan. 23—Three railroad workmen on the Southern Pacific were killed at Denheman, sixteen miles south of here early today by a landslide. Several others were slightly injured.

CONFLAGRATION AT PRINCETON

Several Buildings in Business Center Destroyed

Princeton, N. Y., Jan. 23 A fire early this morning at the Terminal restaurant in the center of the town destroyed ten buildings with a loss of over $75,000. The destroyed property was mostly small eating houses, second hand shops, with the exception of the Alhambra building, in which the Terminal restaurant was located. Students from Princeton university turned out and helped fight the flames.

CRIMINAL SINCE FOUR YEARS OLD

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 23—Water H. Lawrence, aged 19, sentenced to a year's confinement for robbing an Oregon postoffice, was arrested when released today and was this afternoon started for Covington, Ky., to be tried on a charge of shooting, beating and robbing Druggist Wagner, in a holdup two years ago.

While being taaken from a boat tihs morning he slipded his handcuffs and ran, but was recaptured after several shots had been fired at him. Kentucky officers who came after him say he began his criminal career at the age of 4, when he stole a revolver from his father, who was a Covington policeman.

The officers expect to send him to prison for life, under the habitual criminal act.

VESSEL WRECKED ON VANCOUVER

Two Masted Schooner Reported Ashore on Island

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 23—A two-masted schooner is ashore at Seabird Rocks, Pachena Bay, close to where the Valencia was lost on the Vancouver Island coast. The steamer Leebro has gone to her assistance.

Particulars of the wreck can not be learned until the Leebro returns. The stranded vessel looks like a sailing schooner. The only vessel of that description out from this port, is the Jessie, which left here on Sunday for the California coast. She carries 21 white men. There is no sign of life on the stranded schooner.

FOUR KILLED BY AVALANCHE

Camp Bird Destroyed by Snnw Slide

Grand Junction, Jan. 23—Four men were killed, more than a score had narrow escapes from death in an avalanche of snow which swept over Camp Bird at Ouray early last evening. Four men were killed in the cookhouse, thousands of tons of snow, rocks and dirt sweeping the buildings into the canyon. It will be mid-summer before the bodies can be recovered.

It is feared eight six-horse teams and the Camp Bird bullion stage carrying six thousand dollars in gold and many passengers were in the path of the slide. A number of people had miraculous escapes. Forty horses on a freight camp were killed.

FIVE KILLED

Durango, Jan. 23—A disastrous snowslide occurred last evening at Camp Bird mine near Ouray. It is reported five men, seven horses and sixteen mules were killed.

A grand surprise was given the members of the Wike Wike club and a few of their friends who were entertained this afternoon by Miss Winifred Higgins in honor of Miss Frances Estes at a handkerchief shower. At the conclusion of the handkerchief game Miss Higgins announced her engagement to Lieutenant Richard Parks of Vancouver Barracks, Wash.

• • •

On Friday evening Feb. 5th at the First Presbyterian church a musical program will be given under the auspices of the young women of the Westminster Guild. The instrumental numbers will be a novelty, in that they will consist entirely of music written for two pianos. The ensemble pianist, Evelyn and Erma Ewart from Portland have been studying with Mr. Gifford Nash for five seasons and he speaks in the highest possible terms of their great musical talent and ability. These two young artists have already a host of admirers in Portland where their musical careers are being watched with intense interest. Astoria is to be congratulated upon the opportunity of hearing them. Miss Irene Simington whose delightful voice has so often been heard with pleasure will contribute two groups of songs.

• • •

Miss Freda Foard entertained Thursday evening at a Five Hundred party at which her many guests enjoyed the delightful game. Mrs. Harry M. Flavel was presented with the prize for high cards.

• • •

Mrs. M. Foard and Miss Freda Foard will leave on the first of the week on a visit to Portland, Seattle and Tacoma, they will be absent from the city for several weeks.

WEEKS DOINGS AT SEASIDE, OREGON

Monday night's storm did considerable damage in Seaside A number of trees were blown down, some of which fell across telephone and electric light wires causing some inconvenience The rain and the melting of the snow in the mountains has caused the water in the Necanicum to rise and press over the banks on either side.

Mrs. Mary Young of Seaside who has recently undergone an operation in St Mary's Hospital in Astoria returned home last week much improved in health.

F. H. Moore leaves here on the twenty-eighth for Riverside California He expects to be gone about six weeks.

Miss Josie Bangsund of Astoria spent Sunday in Seaside visiting with friends and relatives.

The 400 Social Club has issued invitations for a dance Saturday evening Jan. 23.

The Seaside band announces a dance for Feb. 22., the proceeds of which will be used to pay the expenses of the band.

The Pythian Sisters are making arrangements to give an invitational dance the evening of Feb. 13.

Mrs. McKay son and daughter have returned to Seaside, after having been visiting friends for several months.

Household Hints.

A great many blemishes on wall paper may be removed with a rubber on a lead pencil

To remove fly specks from varnished surfaces use equal parts of water and skimmilk warmed.

When cleaning house use plenty of turpentine in the scrub water. It means certain death to moths.

The housewife should never allow her floors to be painted. They should be stained, shellacked or waxed.

A flat brass button sewed on the corner of a dishcloth will be a great help in washing dishes. It can be used as a "scratcher" and will not injure the finest china

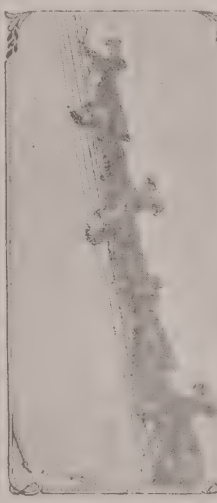
SHORT STORIES OF MANY PEOPLE

IT would not take [illegible] of the size of th[illegible] pres[illegible] in the picture at the head of the column to make a fairl[illegible] populous city. Patrick Cavanaugh [illegible] American citizen who is carrying out the Roosevelt principles as to anti-race suicide by bringing up the family shown. He lives at Alameda, Cal. [illegible] recently petitioned the legi[illegible] to pass a law exempting heads of such large households as his from taxation. In the photograph reproduced above Cavanaugh stands at the left end of the column, his wife next him, and their children, numbering twelve, form a series of steps, ending with the little tot at the extreme right. As Cavanaugh and his wife have scarcely yet reached middle age, they have hopes that their family may one day be even larger yet.

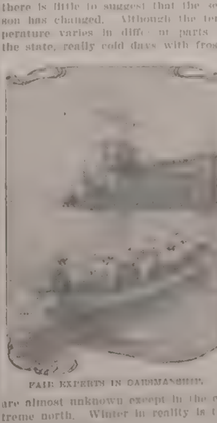
The New Year's festivities of southern California take on quite a different character from those of more northerly communities where snow and ice generally prevail at this season. In the balmy climate of Los Angeles and Pasadena and other cities of the southern California coast floral parades, carnivals of roses, processions of decorated automobiles, etc., are more in vogue than snowshoe races, skating contests, tobogganing and sleigh riding. In fact the latter amusements would be out of the question. Among the New Year customs yacht racing and rowing contests take a lead. Many of the young women of the cities on the coast are expert in oarsmanship and in climbing aloft in the rigging of a ship.



CLIMBING ALOFT.

Southern California has sometimes been called the Italy of America. There "winter" means green hills, a carpet of wild flowers, children playing out doors, butterflies floating, fruit ripening and high on the horizon such snow peaks as the untransferred easterner never saw.

It is said by scientists that each year brings a difference in temperature from the [illegible] year, and while New York is gradually becoming warmer California grows the faintest degree colder. As the matter stands now, however, winter in California is more like a prolonged summer than anything else. Except that the dates on the calendar tally with those that mark a blustery day in New York, there is little to suggest that the season has changed. Although the temperature varies in different parts of the state, really cold days with frosts are almost unknown except in the extreme north. Winter in reality is the time of blossoms.



FAIR EXPERTS IN OARSMANSHIP.

The first thing that attracts the eye of the visitor is that the trees are always full of foliage. There being no autumnal changes of climate, the trees remain the same the year round. When Central park, New York, begins to look bare and the weather bureau issues warnings for a cold snap and snow the bulletins in the west are predicting rain, with warm southerly winds.

The exodus from the east begins in early November. Many of the large hotels and popular resorts have their accommodations engaged months in advance by the winter pleasure seekers who at this time find California all in holiday attire. Nature covers the mountains and highways with a wealth of scarlet manzanita berries, a non edible but very decorative fruit which resembles the English holly. The manzanita grows on a spreading bush about four feet in height. It is largely used for Christmas decorations.

In the southern part of the state the popular winter resorts for bathing boating and fishing are Coronado, Catalina, Redonda, Santa Monica and the farfamed Long Beach of Los Angeles.

When Senator Philander Chase Knox goes into the next cabinet as secretary of state a vacancy in the upper branch of congress will be left, and the question of how it should be filled is engrossing the attention of legislators and politicians in Pennsylvania. A leading candidate for the post is George T. Oliver of Pittsburg. Mr. Oliver is publisher of the Pittsburg Gazette, which he bought in 1900. He was born in Ireland in 1848, came to this country in early life, graduated from Bethany college in West Virginia, in 1868, studied law and was admitted to the bar of Allegheny county in 1871 and practiced for ten years thereafter, when he engaged in iron and steel manufacturing.

GEORGE T. OLIVER.

Mayor George W. Guthrie of Pittsburg has had the task put up to him of upholding the credit of his city in the face of charges that grafting has been going on upon an extensive scale among the councilmen of the municipality. The mayor has appointed a committee of safety to carry out measures for unearthing crooked doings and punishing the guilty. It is said that Andrew Carnegie has put up $150,000 for use in the work of moral regeneration. The story told in the Duquesne club and the Pittsburg club is that the man who told of Pittsburg conditions to President Roosevelt also went to Andrew Carnegie and laid an array of facts before him. The result, according to rumor, was the authorized expenditure of $150,000 in detective work. It is said that altogether about $1,000,000 is available for use in running down grafters and punishing them.

GEORGE W. GUTHRIE

The councilmanic upheaval will result in the naming of an entire new ticket for [illegible] and councils before the coming election. The Voters' league decided to indorse neither of the candidates which the Republicans are putting forward nor, since Mayor Guthrie cannot be re-elected owing to a city law, do they favor any of the timber the Democrats offer. A new candidate to be run on the Voters' league ticket is now what they are looking for. There is to be a candidate for councilman in every ward where there seems to have been grafting.

The Voters' league announced that it had received assurance of federal help in the forthcoming prosecutions.

Mayor Guthrie was chosen executive of Pittsburg in 1906. He is a native of the city and was born in 1848. He was graduated in 1866 from the Western University of Pennsylvania and two years later from the law department of Columbian university, Washington. He married in 1886 Florence J. Howe. In 1876 he was a[illegible] counsel of the Tilden electors before the Florida returning board. He has been associated with various reform movements and in 1902 was Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor of Pennsylvania.

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the [illegible] cylinder, four cycle [illegible] H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.
I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

Among the measures which have been introduced at this session of the legislature is one providing that road supervisors shall be elected instead of being appointed by the county court. This was the law that was in force some years ago but because it did not work satisfactorily, was changed. To pass this proposed measure would, we believe, be unwise, at least so long as the various road districts are permitted to raise funds by special taxation to be expended under the direction of the county courts. The reason of this is that it might lead to friction which would result in the money for road work being improperly expended or perhaps in no work being done. If the county courts are to be responsible for the use made of the money raised for road improvement work by the several districts, they assuredly should have control of the men who will be in direct charge of the improvement work. This they cannot have if the supervisors are elected by the voters, as the supervisors will then be entirely independent of the courts.

It is not so long ago that the members of the legislature from Marion county voted against the interests of Astoria in connection with the Port of Columbia bill. They have also taken advantage of every opportunity to oppose this section in fishing legislation or any other matter in which Astoria and Clatsop county were particularly interested. How would they like now to have the Clatsop county delegation support the measure to remove the state capital to Portland? The Lane county delegation has also fought against Clatsop county's interests whenever a measure came up that Multnomah county was participating in. Perhaps they may want some aid, when the measure is presented to move the state university to Portland, as it surely will be, if not at this session, then in the near future. There will be another opportunity at this session for these delegations to take sides, when the vote is called on the measure to authorize the creation of ports in counties bordering on bays or rivers which are navigable from the sea. What will be their attitude this time? This bill is not an Astoria measure by any means. It was prepared by a Portland attorney and was endorsed by the members of the special commission appointed for the purpose by Governor Chamberlain. Astoria is interested in having it passed, as are all the towns along the Oregon coast, which are located on navigable streams.

In spite of the fact that silver has been despised, demonetized, kicked out and otherwise slandered the amount coined from [illegible] to 1907 amounted to $172,[illegible] of which $94,700,760 were exported and the balance used at home and one of these years Uncle Sam was obliged to import bullion silver for subsidiary coins. The highest amount coined in any one period of four years between 1878 and 1907 occurred between 1888 and 1892 and amounted to $260,418 100. This was when silver was popular in the United States and was being boosted by congress,—and yet the amount coined exceeded the four years prior to 1908 by only $87,000,000.

STRENUOUS SUFFRAGETTES

Said a speaker at a college woman's suffrage meeting, "When a woman can fire a bullet and hit a mark she will be better entitled to vote." But many women have already qualified as crack shots, and if the authorities would give schoolgirls equal privileges with schoolboys on the rifle ranges this sort of comparison would soon lose point. When Cynthia Westover laid down the rifle for the pen she could shoot as straight as any man in Buffalo Bill's crowd, not excepting the great scout himself. Cynthia exhibits no scalps as evidence of her true aim, but she has numerous trophies, telling not of the hunt, but of balls placed on the bullseye in defense of human life out on the plains.

Men will need to look to their laurels when women start to do the tricks their rival sex prides itself upon. Unwittingly men are training women to equal them everywhere, and as one result we behold the strenuous suffragettes. Intending merely to enhance the pleasure of sport, they take women for comrades in outdoor pastimes. Women ride to hounds, run races, play ball, swim and row and are as hardy and as handy in the woods as their brothers. The athletic woman is here to stay. In England she uses nature's weapons in a manner to shock the proprieties perhaps, but any crowd of male amateurs would go to the same extremes under the same provocation. The hair pulling, clawing, kicking, horsewhipping, screaming and general hazing and nagging that upset London would all happen were the aggrieved grown schoolboys. The suffragettes lack science; but, having temper and sand, they hit right and left. Theirs are the tactics of the savage who will not remain savage longer than it takes to climb higher. Gallantry mixed with selfishness started woman on the road to muscular strenuousness. Time and evolution will do the rest.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

Our educational systems get no end of hard knocks at home, but the teachers who recently returned from an inspection of the English system declare that the American public school is ahead so far.

They are handing out the short and ugly word recklessly in London and Berlin too. If this is going to be epidemic the code duello is certain to be revived.

A few weeks hence Mr. Roosevelt's opinion of congress and congress' opinion of Mr. Roosevelt won't get even one line in the newspapers.

To Stop Hiccoughs.

Dr. Louis Kolipinski reports the arrest of persistent hiccough by depressing the tongue. A patient was attacked by hiccough which had persisted for four days before being seen by the doctor. He complained of the fullness in his throat, a condition which he thought the result of the hiccough. He was directed to sit up, and with a large spoon handle the tongue was pressed down and back with steady force to allow inspection of the fauces. Firm pressure on the tongue with the hope of further noting the action of the palatal muscles was continued, when, to the doctor's surprise and the patient's astonishment and joy, the hiccough ceased. When the hiccough returned the patient himself stopped it by using the spoon handle.—London Express.

The Flat Wheel.

The enormous energy developed by a flat spot in a wheel has been estimated by Professor Hancock of Purdue university. He finds that a flat spot two and one-half inches long on a thirty-three inch wheel, carrying a load of 6,000 pounds at thirty miles per hour, will deliver a blow to the rail of more than 1,000 foot pounds. The same flat wheel supporting a fifty-five ton interurban car running sixty miles per hour would deliver a blow with an energy of 9,500 foot pounds. Such a flat spot would be produced by wearing off less than five one-hundredths of an inch of metal.—Scientific American.

Charley Potts enjoyed his breakfast better than ever because his wife served him Folger's Golden Gate Coffee, ground just before using.

MANZANITA IS ALMOST DUE

Should Reach Astoria About the First of February

Soon after February 1 the new lighthouse tender Manzanita and light vessels Nos. 92 and 93 are expected to reach the Columbia river from the Atlantic seaboard. The fleet is scheduled to arrive at San Francisco next Thursday, having made a short stop at San Diego.

The Manzanita was built to take the place of the craft by that name which was wrecked near Westport, by colliding with the dredger Columbia a couple of years ago. She is much larger than her predecessor, being but 10 feet shorter than the Armeria, the largest tender in the service. Her headquarters will be Astoria. On her arrival the tenders under the jurisdiction of Commander Charles F. Pond in his district will be comprised of the Armeria, Manzanita and Heather. The tender Columbine, also at the same stations, is operated by the United States engineers.

Light vessel No. 88 will be stationed off the mouth of the Columbia River. No. 92 is a relief vessel, and will be dispatched to any part of the district as needed. No. 93 will be stationed off Swiftsure Bank, at the entrance to the Straits of Fuca.

Applications for positions as officers and sailors on the new craft are being received by Commander Pond, but as yet it is not known definitely by the inspector as to whether the services of any additional men will be required. Already each of the vessels has a full complement who shipped before the fleet sailed for the Pacific. It is not known here when their terms of service on the vessels expire.

In the past two summer seasons this district was rather handicapped for lighthouse tenders, the Armeria and Heather being obliged to do all the work. As the district extends from the Califorin line to the arctic regions, they are kept on the go constantly, and then it was found necessarily at times to shorten the cruise which had been planned for them. With the third steamer added to the fleet the inspector will be in position to look after the district to much better advantage.

VAUDEVILLE AT THE BAKERONIAN

Commencing next Monday the mangement of the Bakeronian will give a complete change of program, a straight vaudeville show. NEW BUILDING AT THE PEN

Chapel and School Building in the Budget

Salem, Or., Jan. 23—It will require $135,000 to maintain the Oregon state prison for the next two years and make the repairs and additions that are necesasry to meet the growth of the institution, according to the information gleaned by the committee on ways and means of the house, the members of which paid a visit to the penitentiary yesterday afternoon and took dinner with Superintendent James.

Of the total amount $19,500 will be required to construct a chapel and school building, which it is desired shall be constructed in the form of a new wing attached to the present structure. In this sum also will be included the cost of new cells.

Superintendent James would also like to be provided with money for the purchase of additional land to be used by the prisoners in raising produce for the use of the prison. It is not probable that the ways and means committee will include provision for this purchase in their budget, however, owing to the many claims to be made upon the state and the high price which would be asked for the land needed for the purpose.

It is considered practically certain that the sum of $135,000 will be appropriated for the support of the institution.

WATER SYSTEM FOR LA GRANDE

Contract Made for Installing Large Plant

La Grande, Or., Jan. 23—The mayor and recorder are today enterting into a contract with the American Light & Power Company, of Kansas City, for a $160,000 water system, the water to be brought from Beaver Creek, 18 miles away, to the city reservoir, with a 300 foot head. The citizens here have been trying to procure this system for several years.

BIG LOG JAM ON FRAZER RIVER

Is Expected to Go Out Any Moment

New Westminster, Jan. 23—The big log jam on the Fraser, a short distance above the Westminster bridge, which is held together by huge cakes of ice, is expected to break at an early date. Every effort is being made to safeguard the big bridge from injury in the event it is found impossible to harness the ten million feet of logs in time to prevent an accident. The logs endangered are valued at about $250,000.

"SHORE ACRES TONIGHT"

Tonight the great talked of play "Shore Acres" will be the attraction at the Astoria theatre with the eminent actor Archie Boyd in the character of Uncle Nat, supported by a company that musters a roll of best artists on the American stage, including the much talked of "Shore Acres" children. The play is as bright and new as on the day of its birth. Its a play for the masses--rich and poor, old and young, it is the kind of play that makes you feel proud to be an American.

It touchs your heart and your mind as no other play will. Truth of expression, character and emotion run from scene to scene and act to act to the final curtain, such a play cannot fail to triumph, in fact it is the best play of American life ever given to the stage. The curtain will not rise until 9 o'clock to give business men a chance to see the whole performance.

Plain Facts About the Hair

IT IS THE DUTY of every one who is interested in hair preservation to learn enough about the subject to tell whether an advertisement for a hair remedy is reasonable or unreasonable.

In this connection, the United States Post Office department has begun a much needed campaign against false and misleading statements in advertisements in general. While this work is highly commendable and should be greatly extended, still at the same time it tends to paternalism rather than to presonal self-reliance if YOU know that the claims for a hair remedy are unreasonable and untrue, that knowledge will save you money and prevent disappointment.

THE TROUBLE lies in the fact that certain over ambitious Proprietors employ advertising writers who do not know the composition of the remedies they write about, and even if they did, they are not expected to know the therapeutic action of the various ingredients. Two very familiar and oft repeated statements are, that the hair must be watered and fed just like a plant, and that the color of the hair, once destroyed, can be restored, by natural process. While both of these statements are false in every particular it requries some little knowledge of the hair follicle to understand why the statements are false.

THE HAIR FOLLICLE is a pear shaped sack in the scalp that holds the hair root. At the bottom of the hair follicle and extending up into it for a short distance, is a nipple shape projection that remains in the scalp when a hair root is forcibly pulled out. This projection is the hair papilla from which the hair "root" grows. The continuous addition to the bottom of the hair root, forces the hair proper out through the scalp.

THE HAIR PAPPILLA is surrounded by the hair root which takes a bulbous form. Above the hair root or bulb which occupies about three-fourths of the entire follicle, is the neck of the hair follicle, below which the most penetrating fluids known to Medical Science cannot penetrate. Therefore, the story of feeding the starved and impoverished hair roots with an external application is all a myth.

THE SHORT PORTION of the hair follicle above its neck opens somewhat like a funnel and is filled with the outer scalp skin. Opening into this outer portion are the highly important oil or sebaceous glands which, from their location, are most exposed to disease. When these oil glands become infected with a certain microbic growth (the cause of dandruff) there is hair disease and finally hair death. Fortunately this outer portion of the hair follicle can be treated by carefully rubbing into the scalp a suitable remedy. What remedy should be used? Manifestly one that will destroy the growth that causes dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

NEWBROS' HERPICIDE is the first remedy that was porpared for the particular purpose of destroying this invisible vegetable growth. In fact, it is called the "ORIGINAL remedy that kills the dandruff germ." Newbro's Herpicide was not made until after Prof Unna, of Hamburg, Germany (ask your doctor about him) discovered that dandruff is a highly contagious disease caused by a microb. The almost marvelous success of Newbro's Herpicide has caused advertising writers to claim germicidal properties for other hair remedies, many of which were on the market years before Prof. Unna's discovery.

DO YOU THINK that this new claim for old remedies is a reasonable one? Remember, that the hair gets its life, color and strength direct from the blood, and that good blood, deep breathing and sunlight favor hair development. Out-door exercise, to insure free circulation in the scalp, also massaging for the same purpose, are very helpful. Worry, indigestion and sedentary habits oppose hair growth, while the dandruff germ will actually destroy the hair, unless it is eradicated and kept out of the scalp with Newbro's Herpicide.

HERPICIDE is delightfully cooling and refreshing to the scalp and almost marvelous results sometimes follow its continued use. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

YOUR MONEY will be refunded if Herpicide is not as represented.

Send 10 cents in stamps to The Herpicide Company, Dept. L, Detroit, Mich, for sample and booklet. Two sizes: 50c and $1.00. At Drug Stores. When you call for Herpicide do not accept a substitute

ABOUT ASTORIA

Judge J. J. Brumbach of Ilwaco was in the city this afternoon returning from a visit with friends at Forest Grove.

C. Tristol died at his residence in Cathalmet on Friday afternoon after a short illness. His funeral will be held there on Sunday afternoon.

Miss Merril Mathews who has been visiting with Miss Clara Larsen in this city for the past week returned to her home at Long Beach today.

The funeral of the late Charles Peck was held this morning from Pohl's funeral parlors and the interment was in Ocean View cemetery.

Deeds were filed for record today whereby the Hall Land Company of Detroit purchases 1563 acres of timber land in the Nehalem valley. The consideration named is only $1.

W. A. Goodin sent a grading outfit and supplies to Gearhart today to begin work on grading for a spur from the main line of the railway to the tract of timber owned by N. D. Bain. The timber is to ce logged this spring.

The "Shore Acres" company arrived last evening, with a carload of scenery and accessories for their performance at the Astoria theatre this evening; There should be a crowded house and it is certainly looked for.

Captain Charles Stuart of the Cape Disappointment life saving crew was in the city this morning and reports that the water was higher in the vicinity of his station, during the past few days, than ever before recorded.

Roger Flint, business manager of the Lieutenant and Cowboy Company, is in Astoria in the interest of his production that will appear at the Astoria theatre on next Sunday evening. The play is one of the largest latest and best of the Metropolitan productions.

Anerd Hendrickson, who was ill for a few days with pneumonia, died last evening. He was 18 years of age, native of Astoria and the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hendrickson, being well known to the younger generation of the city. The arrangements for his funeral have not been completed.

Lewis river rose about five feet yesterday and brought down such a great quantity of logs that Peterson's tie boom, with 10,000 ties, went out. His log boom also went out. The Lewis River Boom Company at the mouth of the river lost a large quantity of logs and ties. The financial loss will be heavy.

A petition was filed in the city auditor's office this morning by Rudolph Basel and others, asking for the improvment of Grand avenue from the west line of Fourth street to the west line of Fifth by grading to its full width. The petition will be submitted to the council at its meeting on the first Monday evening in next month.

The fisheries committee of the Oregon house and senate will meet on next Wednesday evening for the purpose of deciding on measures which will be submitted at the session of the joint committees from the Oregon and Washington legislatures appointed to agree upon laws governing the fisheries of the Columbia river district.

A portion of the county road in the vicinity of the upper Lewis and Clark river bridge was flooded by the high tides of the past few days and two small bridges in that section were carried away. People coming to the city from that district today came in boats.

At the production of Shore Acres at the Astoria theatre this evening there will appear live children, who are a feature of the play but not allowed to appear in some cities on account of their age yet they are travelling with their parents and they enjoy the show as much as the audience.

With a sudden change of the weather on Friday evening, switching from the south to the east, considerable snow fell in this vicinity during the night and while it melted rapidly here reports from the districts back of the river several inches are still on the ground and the outlook for more is good.

Lester Nelson, an employe of the logging camp of the Seaside Lumber Company, was brought to this city this morning to receive surgical attention. His right leg was brokenwhile assisting in coupling a couple of logging trucks, the accident happening on account of the slippery condition of the ground.

Captain Johnson of San Francisco was in the city yesterday visiting with friends. Captain Johnson operates a salmon saltery at Nelson lagoon, Alaska, where the ship John Currier was wrecked two years ago and he was able to render considerable assistance to the crew and passengers of the wrecked craft.

The high tides in this vicinity had little effect on the height of the water on Clatsop beach but at Seaside the Necanicum river was accurately measured as six inches higher than the high water of a year ago, when it was said to be the highest ever known. Little or no damage resulted but it was a benefit in assisting in getting some logs down the river.

Articles of incoroporation of the West Coast Construction Company were filed in the county clerk's office today. The incorporators are Christian M. Larsen, John A. Gamble and Olen Bore and the capital stock is $15,000 divided into 150 shares of $100 each The main office of the company is to be in Astoria and its object is to engage in a general contracting and construction business.

Captain H. Thompson of the schooner C. S. Holmes reports to the hydrographic office that at 11 a. m. January 14, 1909, in latitude 35.04 north, longitude 121 degrees 45 mintues, he sighted a'red whistilng buoy adrift, same being marked "F. R. No. 0" in black. Captain J. C. Hall of the British steamship Gymeric reports sighting same as above in latitude 37 degrees north, longitude 123 degrees and 43 second west, on December 20, 1908.

The ways and means committee of the city council held a meeting yesterday afternoon and practically decided to recommend the purchase of a book and typewriter for use in the auditor's office. The street committee is to meet on next Monday evening and prepare its report on the petition for a system of drains in Adair's and on the petitions for re-establishment of grades on Irving avenue near Seventh street. The committee will also set the date on which it will examine the streets which the street superintendent reported are badly in need of re-improvement or repair.

Senator Scholfield and Representative Leinenweber arrived in the city last evening to spend Sunday. Senator Scholfield says that while a large number of bills have been introduced it is yet too early to tell just what ones will be passed, but he believes that much needed legislation will be enacted. The only measure that has come up so far which a fight is promised, is the Bean bill authorizing the creation of ports in counties bordering on streams navigable from the sea. The Portland members are up in arms against the measure, simply because the Clatsop county delegation favor it and are hunting high and low to find a "nigger" in the bill, but have been unable to do so. They even communicated with the Portland attorneys who prepared the measure and were assured by them it was alright, but even then some were not satisfied. Senator Scholfield, however, believes the bill will be passed. On next Friday Senator Scholfield and Representative McCue will go to Salem as members of the special committee to confer with a like committe from the Washington legislature on the Columbia river fisheries.

The Tillamook High school debating team arrived in the city on Friday for the contest with the Astoria High school team on next Wednesday evening. The visiting team consists of Miss Eliza Dawson, Miss Helen Biby and Miss Nellie Hammenkratt, they appearing as bright intelligent and energetic young girls. The Astoria High school team consists of Miss Mary Kelly, Axel Sigurdson and Lawrence Dinneen and it will give a good account of itself. The subject for debate will be Municipal Ownership and the local team will have the affirmative of the argument. As the judges of the debate will all be from Astoria they naturally give the visitors the benefit of a doubt as this courtesy is proverball in Astoria. Three of the following will be chosen by the Tillamook term as judges, the list having been furnished previously to the Tillamook superintendent: J. H. Whyte, J. A. Eakin, Rev. C. C. Rarick, Herman Wise, Rev. W. S. Gilbert, C. H. Abercrombie and Rev. C. L. Owen. Where the debate will be held has not been decided but will be this evening.

The regular meeting of the chamber of commerce will take place at 7:30 o'clock next Monday night and there will be a general discussion showing how the imports of the Northwest have gradually been lost from the Columbia river to Puget Sound as the result of the determination on the part of Portland not to deepen the waters across the bar at the mouth of the river more rapidly than it is deepened all the way up the channel to Portland. The figures easily show this and the sad case of fright exhibited on the part of all the Portland newspapers over the port bill recently introduced in the house of the legislature at Salem is convincing to the superlative degree. If the entire state of Oregon could understand this it is likely there would be a concentrated movement towards deepening the bar which could easily be done and allowing the biggest vessels afloat to come as far up as Astoria. While on the other hand it may be 50 years before it will be possible to have the channel all the way to Portland deep enough to allow the vessels to reach that city. Meanwhile the commerce of Puget Sound will continue its phenominal increase over that of the Columbia river and trade like mountain torrents washes the deep channels from which it is difficult, after such channels have been formed, to turn it from its esatblished course.

The lumber cut by the mills in the state of Oregon during the year 1907 aggregated 1,635,563,000 feet. The cut for the year just closed, despite the increased capacity of the new mills will not reach that amount by probably 40 per cent. The cut of the Columbia river district, embracing the counties of Wasco, Multnomah, Columbia and Clatsop in Oregon and the counties of Klickitat, Skamania, Clark, Cowlitz, Wahkiakum and Pacific in Washington having their outlet on the Columbia river, was approximately 750,000,000 feet. The output of lumber for the City of Portland aggregated about 500,000,000 feet, as against 538,000,000 in 1907. This is a decrease of about 16 per cent. The capacity of the Columbia river district with the builidng of the Monarch Lumber Company's plant at Portland with a capacity of 175,5000 feet in ten hours; the St. Helens Lumber Company's new mill at St. Helens; the Hill Lumber Company and the Williard Case Lumber Company's mills at Kalama, Wash.; practical doubling of the capacity of the Hammond Lumber Company' plant at Astoria, and the increased equipment being added to other mills, will increase the daily capacity 500,000 feet in 1909 over 1908. With anything like a fair business year the output of the Columbia river district for 1909 should aggregate considerably in excess of one billion feet. The same relative condition prevails to a more intensified degree throughout the timbered states of the Pacific coast.

CREW RESCUED FROM WRECK

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 25 The rescue of the six men left on board the wrecked American schooner Soquel fast on Seabird rocks, and Mate Swenson, who had remained on the rock, was effected Sunday by the crew of the Canadian Pacific steamer Tees and the lifeboat crew from Bamfield, which went to the wreck on the steamer Leebro, and all were transferred to the United States revenue cutter Manning to be taken to Neah Bay for medical treatment.

The bodies of the victims of the disaster, Captain Henningson's wife and child, who were killed by falling spars, when the two aftermasts came down, after the schooner drove on the rocks, were not recovered.

At low water shortly before daylight Captain Henningson and those with him joined Mate Swenson on the rock, having refused to leave with the five others rescued until the survivors who remained on the wreck were taken also. The men were all in a state of exhaustion, several suffering from injuries.

AGREEMENT ON FISHERIES

Terms of Treaty Regarding New Foundland Reached

Washington, Jan. 25—An agreement has been reached between Secretary Root and the British and Canadian and New Foundland governments through their representatives on the New Foundland fisheries boundary question to be submitted to the Hague court for arbitration.

The treaty will have to be sent to the senate for ratification. Like the waterways controversy between Canada and the United States, the New Foundland fisheries have been the subject of diplomatic negotiations and treaties for many years. In deciding the controversial points, the tribunal will have to pass on a very broad and important question as to whether state or colonial laws or regulations may interfere with the terms of a treaty. The latter question confronted the administration in a most perplexing way in the Japanese school question and threatens to become a important factor, in case the bills pending before the California legislature affecting the Japanese, become laws.

HOMESTEADER WINS IN COURT

Washington, Jan. 25—The supreme court of the United States has dismissed for want of jurisdiction the case of the Spokane Valley Land Water Company vs. R. Madison, which is favorable to Madison. The suit arose over the attempt of the company to drain liberty lake in Hamilton county Wash., on which Madison owns a homestead, which he acquired before the adoption of the state constitution. They state court held his right had become vested to such an extent that it could not be interferred with and enjoined the water company from continuing further operations and that the decision is final.

DISCIPLINE WAS EXCELLENT

Report of Passengers on Wrecked Steamship Republic

New York, Jan. 25—H. A. Hover and wife of Spokane are among the Republic's passengers. They had intended taking an automobile trip abroad and were outward bound on the Republic, when she was rammed by the Florida on Saturday morning. Mr. Hover described to the Associated Press the transfer of the scantily clad and frightened men and women to the Baltic. He said the thransfer commenced at eight o'clock Saturday night and continued until eight yesterday morning, the searchlights of the Baltic playing the waters as boatload after boatload were safely got aboard the Baltic. The Florida backed way into the mist after ramming the Republic, but returned after half an hour in response to signals from the Republic.

The passengers were first transferred to the Florida and from that vessel to the Baltic. Hover said there was very little panic aboard the Republic the discipline been perfect. The women were transferred first. The Florida with the addition of the Republic's passengers to her own, was dreadfully crowded and after a conference the captains decided another transfer was necessary and they were taken aboard the Baltic. The second peration occurred while the waters were rough, making it a hazardous undertaking and one of long duration. Two passengers fell overboard but were rescued. The Republic, having sunk, will either be a total loss or heavily damged. The steamer Florida which was in collision with the Republic, was sighted off Ambrose channel light ship this morning, bound for New York.

BIG INCREASE IN TIMBER CUT

During the Past Year From National Forests

Washi[illegible], Jan. 25—Uncle Sam's national forest yield an increase of 102 per cent in timber last year over the record for 1907, giving returns of $849,027.24 to the government. Twenty-five per cent of this amount went back to the states in which the forests are located in lieu of taxes, in accordance with the provisions of the law. This revenue will be added to the state's fund for the support and maintenance of roads and public schools.

The amount of timber cut from all the national forests was 392,792,000 feet, board measure, as against 194-872,000 feet in the previous year. This figure for 1908 does not include the 131,482,000 feet given away to settlers, schools and churches under "free use" permits. This increase of 102 per cent shows a far better use and increasing productiveness of the forest under conservative methods of cutting. There was a marked increase in small sales last year, resulting in an increase of 236 per cent in the number of sales, notwithstandingt the fact that the timber contracted for was far less in the aggregate than in 1907.

In making timber sales the forest service seeks small in preference to large sales, and aims to safeguard a supply for future needs rather than to swell the immediate receipts. Were it desired, the present receipts from timber sales could be quickly doubled. During the year it was found necessary in the interest of a continued supply to restrict sales on many forests. Nevertheless, use of the national forests as a source of timber supply was more general than ever before.

The total receipts from timber sales each year have been as follows: 1905, $60,136.62; 1906, $245,013.49; 1907, $668,813.12; 1908, $849,027.24.

Payment for timber is always required in advance. In large sales, however, and in small sales on occasion, payment is made in installments so arranged as to protect the government against loss without imposing unnecessarily severe burdens upon the purchaser. Thus the receipts of each year represent substantially, but not exactly, the value of the timber sold and removed during that year.

INJUNCTION SUIT IS FILED

Action Brought Against the Port of Tillamook

Tillamook, Or., Jan 25—Suit has been brought in the circuit court by Charles Kunze against the Port of Tillamook, quasi-municipal croporation Claude Thayer, its secretary; M F Leach, George Williams, Rollie Watson, D. Fitzpatrick and Mike Abplanalp, claiming to be and act as commissioners of said Port of Tillamook, J. C. Holden, county clerk; A. M. Hare, assessor, and Henry Cronshaw, sheriff. The suit is brought by those who opposed the enlargement of the Port of Tillamook in which Tillamook, Hoquiam, South Prairie and Fairview precincts were included. A perpetual injunction is now prayed for, enjoining the Port of Tillamook from doing business and restraining the sheriff from collecting taxes, the plaintiff in the case setting out numerous instances whereby the election was not legal and was unconstitutional. Coroner W. E Hawk served the papers as the sheriff is a party in the suit.

HAWAIIAN QUEEN AGAIN APPEALING

Liliuokalani Seeks Pay for Crown Lands

Washington, Jan [illegible]—Liliuokalani, former queen of the Hawaiian islands, who is spending the winter in Florida, makes this statement of her errand.

"I have come to Washington again, in my declining years to make a personal appeal to congress and the American people for some compensation for the crown lands of Hawaii, of which I was deprived in 1893. The crown lands of Hawaii were wholly separate from the general public lands of the kingdom. During my reign as queen of Hawaii, the area of the crown lands was about 1,000,000 acres; the present value of these lands is over $12,-000,000.

"The income from the crown lands at the time my government was overthrown was over $65,000 per year; this sum went direct to the occupant of the throne, in addition to the privy purse, amounting to $20,000 per year for maintaining the royal household. Three separate and valuable pieces of the crown lands of Hawaii have been taken for the direct use of the federal government. One tract, adjoining Honolulu naval station, including the coaling yards and two wharves; another is the site of Camp Shafter, now equipped as a permanent military post. The third is just being occupied as a military post at Waianae-uka, on the interior of Oahu.

"The portions of these lands directly held and used by the United States for military and naval purposes are alone worth $1,000,000. This government did not take these lands from me directly for itself, but it did furnish the armed force that enabled others to take them A president of the United States in a message to thecongress, based on carefully collected evidence, said:

"The lawful government of Hawaii was overthrown without the drawing of a sword or the firing of a shot, by a process every step of which is directly traceable to and dependent for its success upon the agency of the United States acting through its diplomatic and naval representatives."

"And now the United States is holding those very lands, having taken them as a gift from the temporary government which it had enabled to seize them by aid of federal forces.

"Hawaii has cost this nation nothing but, besides adding valuable lands to this nation by its acquisition, it has been a source of cash revenue. Although this government assumed $4,-000,000 of Hawaii's debt, the cash revenues to the federal treasury since annexation have amounted to over $10,-000,000.

"The time has long passed when restoration to my throne could have been made. But, though fifteen years have passed, I have not given up hope that this government will yet make some reparation for my financial loss, which can still be done with injury to no one and with honor to this nation to which I now belong. I shall employ no attorneys to prosecute my claim, but shall leave it entirely to Prince Kalanianaole, the delegate from Hawaii, and to those members of congress who believe that justice requires some action should be taken in my behalf.

THE OLD SAIL DRILL

Perils Modern Warship Men Do Not Have to Face

One of the dangers and one of the hardest tasks of the man-of-war's man vanished out of his life when, with the supplanting of the frigate by the steam cruiser, the old time sail drill became a thing of the past. Fleets in the old days were continually exercised in making and shortening sail, shifting spars and all similar maneuvers aloft, says Captain J. W. Gambier of the British navy in his "Links In My Life." As the greatest rivalry existed among the crews as to which ship should carry out the evolution first accidents were frequent. Hardly a drill day passed without men being seriously injured.

Once during a drill in Kiel harbor, where the rivalry in the fleet was increased by the eagerness of foreign ships to compete with the English, an unfortunate French midshipman went head first from the mizzen crosstrees of the French flagship to the deck.

That numbers of accidents should take place in sail drill was not astonishing when one remembers that spars measuring perhaps seventy or eighty feet long and weighing two or three tons were whisked about with bewildering speed with nothing but men's hands and brains to guide them; hundreds of men crammed into a space of a few hundred square feet, where nothing but the most marvelous organization and discipline could avert death on deck or aloft.

To the landsman, who understood nothing of the difficulty involved in rapidly shifting these great masts and yards or in reeling and furling thousands of square feet of stiff canvas—perhaps wet or half frozen—the rapidity with which it was done was perhaps the chief wonder.

Ropes, running like lightning through blocks that were instantly too hot from friction to be touched, had to be checked to within a few inches, requiring the utmost coolness and presence of mind, while the officer in command had to superintend what to the uninitiated looked like a tangled mass of cordage, but which was in reality no more in confusion than the threads in a loom.

In an instant this officer might see something going wrong. To delay a single second meant a terrible catastrophe. Every one, alow and aloft, was relying on his judgment.

"Belay! Ease away!"

The order came in an instant. The boatswain's mates repeated it in a particular call which this life and death necessity soon taught every one to understand, the shrill whistles rising above the din of tramping feet and running ropes or the thunderous crash of the great sails in the wind. Death had been averted—or not. If not you looked up and saw some unfortunate man turning head over heels in the air. Your heart stood still. Would he catch hold of something, even if only to break his fall, or would he come battering on the deck? It was a mere toss up. If he was killed outright it generally stopped the drill for the day; if he was only seriously injured the drill went on, for this was part of the lesson that must be learned—that in peace, as in war, one must take his chances.

A Double Test.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Ben Huston could dive deeper into questions and draw out more meat than any man I ever knew. He had a theory for everything and proved or disproved his theories by experiments.

When Huston became engaged he determined to test the good nature of the girl he was to marry. He would do things to ruffle her temper. If she showed self control he would complete the contract; if she gave way before his prodding it would indicate that she had not the equanimity necessary to bear the greater irritating trials of married life, and he would break the engagement.

Now, I am a bit of an experimenter myself—that is, when I can experiment on others. The failures of my acquaintances do not distress me nearly so much as my own. Ben and I were bosom friends. Lucy Benedict, his fiancee, was my own cousin. Ben confided to me that he was about to apply his test to Lucy. It occurred to me that here was a fine chance for an exhibition of two people applying the same test to each other. I went to Lucy and told her that the only fear I had for her happiness with Ben was his temper and advised her before marrying him to make sure I was mistaken. She said she would.

In nine cases out of ten this story would be a description of a thunder storm. It would have been so in this case had not Lucy been a girl of remarkable self control. It was natural for her to bend gracefully before the squalls of life, and she had the fortitude to stand up under the cyclone. The first test Ben applied was this: He invited her to drive with him at 5 in the afternoon and came at 6, giving no excuse for keeping her waiting. Lucy made no comment on his rudeness. She prattled about the exquisite afternoon, the beauty of his horses, getting in some very nice things for himself. Ben was much pleased with the way she bore his first test, but said to himself that one swallow doesn't make a summer. He would try her another day.

The next evening when he called Lucy told him that she had some letters to write, and he must excuse her from spending the evening with him. Ben was disappointed. He thought the letter writing might be put off. But Lucy did not offer to do so. Indeed, she made things worse. She told him that her bosom friend, a girl of her own age, was to arrive at 3:20 the next morning and would he mind meeting her at the station? What could he do? Just engaged and all his proffers of a lifelong devotion still warm, he consented. The hour was not a convenient one either to get sleep before or after the duty to be performed. He sat up till 3—alone after 11—escorted the visitor two miles across the city, and when he got home it was too late to go to bed.

He was prevented from making up his sleep the next night by a summons from his fiancee. Her mother was ill. Lucy must devote herself to her, and there was no one to entertain her friend. The girl was very religious and wished to go to prayer meeting. Would "the dear, good boy" take her and on returning entertain her till after midnight? Lucy's father was out of town and would not return till 2 a. m. She did not dare be left with her mother without a man in the house. Ben submitted ungracefully, took the friend to the prayer meeting and was insufferably bored with her till 11 o'clock, when she went to bed. He remained alone in the drawing room till 2:45 in the morning, when the father arrived, his train having been late. Lucy came down to kiss Ben good night. He managed to get out of the house without a burst of temper, but on the street barely escaped being taken in by a policeman for talking to himself incoherently, his words interspersed with expletives.

I never knew whether Lucy asked her friend to visit her especially to use her in her tests or not, but she found her a friend indeed. For a week the mother remained ill—so Lucy said—and Ben was made to wait on a woman who bored him, escorting her to places he detested and at hours most inconvenient for him. Then she took a midnight train, and he saw her to the station. He had promised Lucy that he would be in line at the box office of a theater to get tickets for an immensely popular play at an early hour in the morning, and between the two duties he got but four hours' sleep.

The next evening Ben, his injuries rankling in his bosom, called on his fiancee, threw the tickets on a table and—well, it was a muffled explosion, something like firecrackers shut up in a barrel. Lucy looked at him, surprised; then remarked that if he couldn't stand a few little things like that how would he bear the more important jars of life. She then and there broke the engagement.

Ben came to me and told me what an escape he had made. I didn't say anything just then, but in a few days, when I found he was about ready to commit suicide, I confessed that I had suggested to Lucy that she had better test him and advised him to ask her to give him another trial.

I got out of the room in time to escape a stone beer mug he threw at me. I thought I'd better take a vacation for awhile and go south. When I came back Ben had fixed it up with Lucy, though he had had a hard time doing it. It was months before he spoke to me and months more before we became friends again.

BEATRICE TUCKER.

The Man In the Well

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

Deacon Jones visited the Widow Harper's well when he wanted a drink and sometimes when he didn't. It was to show Mrs Harper that he wasn't afraid of her or of no other old widow for five miles around. She would stand in her door with her hands on her hips and look him square in the eye with a defiant look, but the crisis was waiting. It didn't come for a year or more after the deacon drank from the well one day and turned from it to remark that the water was enough to turn a tadpole's stomach.

There is no law or custom in a country village that forbids a widow from keeping a hog and that hog from roaming around and picking up a living the best way he can. The Widow Harper owned one. He was the average village hog—no better and no worse. While she had only one the deacon had seven, but with human inconsistency he was put out that her hog had the same privileges as his. He at length determined to do something about it, and the hog helped him out—that is, the porker fell asleep on the sidewalk one Thursday night, and in coming home from prayer meeting without a lantern the deacon's foot struck the porker, and both went rolling into the ditch. Next morning the boss called on the widow, and there were words. He ordered her to shut that hog up on pain of death, and she retorted that she'd see him (the deacon) in Texas first. The deacon went away and shot the hog and announced that he was ready to stand a lawsuit for damages.

None came, however. Widows most always depend on Providence instead of on law to get even. Mrs. Harper was no exception to this rule. She simply went out and "fixed" the platform of her well and left the rest to the angels. A week later the deacon led his cow to pasture and decided that he was thirsty. He also wanted to learn why he had not been sued. He climbed the fence at the usual spot and approached the well. He was just bending over the curb to lower the bucket when the platform slid out from under his feet and he went down a distance of sixteen feet and stood in the cold water up to his neck. As a matter of course he was surprised. As a matter of course he "hollered." Few men can tumble down a well and retain their imperturbability. The deacon didn't try to. He had been yelling for fifteen minutes when the widow came out and looked over the curb.

"What man is that down there?"

"It's me—Deacon Jones," was the reply.

"And what are you doing there, deacon?"

"I fell in."

"Oh, I see! I didn't know but you were after the tadpoles. Well, I'm very busy with my work this morning, and after you get through looking around you can come up and go away. Leave the well behind you, however."

"Widow, I want to get out. You are surely not going to"—

But she was, and she did. She entered the house, and after yelling himself hoarse the boss leaned up against the smooth brick wall and tried to figure out how long it would take for him to freeze to death. There was no use in looking for rescue except from the woman herself, and he realized that she would make terms. This fact heated him up somewhat, but the water was very cold. It was known as the coldest well in the village. In due time the widow reappeared to call down the well:

"Sakes alive, deacon, but you are a long time looking around down there!"

"Widow, I wanted to say to you"—

"Not now, deacon. I've got to shell peas for dinner. I'm a lone widow, without children about, but it's wonderful how much housework I have to do."

This time a full hour passed. It had to pass. The man in the well shook and shivered and chattered, but he couldn't stop time. He had gone into the well almost six feet tall and weighing 180 pounds. After two hours in the water he figured that his height was five feet and his weight only a hundred. He had just got the figures down pat when the widow arrived again to say:

"Now, deacon, I'm all ready for a talk. Is it any business of yours about my front fence?"

"No-o-o," he replied, with a shiver.

"Is it any business of yours how much rhubarb I raise in my own garden?"

"I—I guess not."

"And about that dead cherry tree? Is it on my land or yours?"

"Yours, of course."

"I see we are getting along very nicely. Now, about the cats. Have I too many? If I have, isn't it my own business?"

"C'certainly."

"And I had a hog, deacon—a spotted hog. You fell over him, or he fell over you, and you killed him. What are spotted hogs worth about now?"

"Two—two dollars," shivered the deacon.

"No more? Stop and think for an hour or two longer. Think if they ain't worth six, cash on the nail."

"Widder, I guess they be. If I was out of this well I'd pay $6 for that hog of yours, and I'd pay cash."

The bucket was lowered, and he was drawn up. The deacon was a boss, but he was also square. He wriggled the wet wallet out of his pocket and came down with the cash, and when he started for his cow pasture leaving a wet trail behind him he didn't even look back over his shoulder to ascertain what the widow was giggling over.

A FABLE OF NIGERIA

The Crafty Spider and the Way He Paid His Debts

The following fable of the spider is one of the folk tales of northern Nigeria:

A spider, it seems, had occasion to borrow a sum of money. A journey round to the generously disposed brought him 2,000 cowries each from the cat, the dog, the hyena, the leopard and the lion. When pay day came round, the spider remained at home to receive the visits of his creditors in a certain prearranged order. First came the cat to claim repayment of his loan. "Hush!" said the spider. "I hear a noise outside. It is a dog come to see me. You must hide under this calabash for safety." The cat was scarcely hidden when the dog, coming in, made a similar request for his money. Says Master Spider, "There is a cat under that calabash. Take him and consider the debt paid." No sooner said than done. Just then a snuffling and scraping were heard at the door. The third creditor, the hyena, had arrived. "Don't be alarmed, my dear dog, but hide here till he has left." And the spider bustled him under the calabash. "I smell a dog," said the hyena, routing about. "Under that calabash," the spider replied. "Eat him up, and your debt is paid." The dog paid the penalty of his simplicity, and all was quiet once more. The hyena was preparing to leave, when he heard an ominous sound that sent him crouching against the wall. It was the pattering of the leopard's feet at the door. "Quick! Under this calabash!" cries his host, and the hyena curls up in the fatal cache, only to meet a like fate from his more courageous enemy. "My debt is repaid," said the leopard, and ran against the lion coming in. A terrible fight ensued, for the leopard and the lion are equal in strength, so the natives say. When blood and dust make havoc in the house and both animals are exhausting their strength the spider is busy at the fire. Seizing a pot of boiling grease, he pours it over the clawing mass. Leopard and lion roll apart in their death agony, and the spider has only to straighten and clean up before resuming once more the humdrum life of fly catching. No wonder he is known as "Maiwayo," the crafty one.

While no official announcement has been made on the subject there is excellent reason to believe, judging from preliminary steps that are now being taken, that the Harriman lines will have a force of men at work early in the spring on the construction of its proposed road from this city to the Nehalem valley to a connection near Jewell with the Lytle road now building from Hillsboro. That this proposed road is to be built is openly admitted by the officials of the Harriman lines and was even announced by Mr. Harriman himself when he was on the coast a few months ago. The question has been just when construction would be commenced but it now looks as tho the work will be well under way this spring.

The effort to obtain 300,000 volunteers to fill the territorial force of the United Kingdom has apparently failed, only about 200,000 volunteering. There is much ado over the failure, and peace propagandists are roundly denounced as the cause of it by the press. It is not likely, however, that the denunciations will give the peace propagandists much concern. They will probably rejoice over the fact that their fellow citizens are pretty much of their way of thinking and adhere to their contention that the motto, "In time of peace prepare for war," is largely inspired by men interested in the retention of an expensive machine the cost of which is born by the taxpayer, who is difficult to convince that the will get returns.

The value of good roads was emphasized by a statement made at Olympia by T. M. Elliott, of Brewster, who has just returned from New York, a state which has appropriated the sum of $50,000,000 for road-building purposes. Speaking of the fine roads, built or building, between the different cities of the state of New York, Mr. Elliott said: "A short way out of Rochester I saw a farmer hauling a ton and a quarter of potatoes with a team that did not weigh over 1,200 pounds. The horses were Okanogan cayuses that were considered worthless in this state because of their light weight. But with the two ponies the farmer was hauling at a trot a load that four 1,200 pound horses would have some difficulty in hauling in Okanogan." Few public investments yield a quicker or a larger return than investments in good roads. It is a paying proposition from the beginning. The present legislature has not yet outlined a definite good roads policy, but most members are profoundly interested in the subject, and it is reasonably certain that a progressive measure will be passed. Certainly one should be passed. The people of Oregon can declare large dividends on a perfected system of good roads.

Turkey has found a means of replenishing a depleted treasury. She has agreed to accept twelve millions compensation from Austria for the territory recently annexed by that country. Perhaps the Turk could not help himself, but there is a suggestion in the transaction which may prove consoling to those who are anxious to see him out of Europe. It may be impossible to drive him out, but perhaps he might be tempted to get out of it was made worth his while.

It might seem freakish for the government of Prince Edward Island to exercise the power recently given it to shut out all automobiles, but it would be a perfectly sane act to put up bars against "joy rides," speed mad drivers and owners and all that. The first community to carry that fight to a finish of the "devil wagon" craze will do humanity a service.

The earlier Christmas shopping is done the more time left for filling the hole it puts in the purse against the day of real merriment.

The annexation which little nations south of us long for is the getting next to our fat pocketbook.

The country now has "congress on its hands," but hopes it will soon be reversed and that the other fellow's hands will make a good job of it.

Many a poor man would accept Carnegie's $1,000,000 a month income and give a substantial guarantee to die as poor as when he began on it.

It is easy to let the other fellow do the worrying after you once get the happy-go-lucky pace.

Anyway no trust will ever "control" Roosevelt either as editor or senator.

"Marked Copy" Did the Trick.

"MARKED COPY" on a newspaper wrapper is sure to make the receiver open and read.

Last year a southern man bought fifty copies of his local paper containing a suggestion for a factory location, marked them and mailed them to fifty individuals or concerns that might be interested.

Result: Twelve immediate inquiries, three propositions for the factory site, one thriving factory located which today pays wages to 175 persons living in that town.

Watch this paper for such opportunities to BOOM YOUR TOWN.

Culinary Conceits.

Thin brown bread and butter sandwiches are the most appetizing accompaniments for fish salad of any sort.

A variety from potato cakes is to warm over the mashed potatoes in a double boiler, adding more butter, milk and a little cheese.

The secret of the Virginia housewife's savory roast duck is due to the orange flavor combined with it, for she uses one large or several small oranges in the body of the duck while roasting.

Facts From France.

Cement is used for roofing in France especially near Lyons.

The emoluments of the officers of the French Academy of Sciences were fixed by Napoleon Bonaparte and have not been changed since that time.

The Parisians move slowly in some things. The Petit Parisien says that one of General Boulanger's election bills, placarded nearly twenty years ago, is still to be seen on the wall at the corner of the Boulevard Richard Lenoir and the Rue St. Sabin.

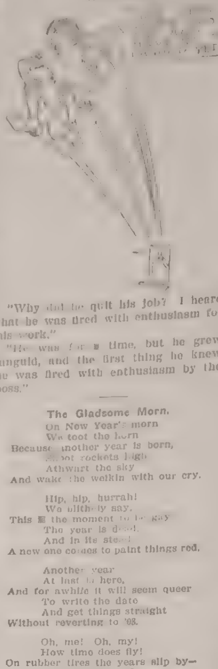
HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

Rekindled.



"Why did he quit his job? I heard that he was fired with enthusiasm for his work."

"He was for a time, but he grew languid, and the first thing he knew he was fired with enthusiasm by the boss."

The Gladsome Morn.

On New Year's morn
We toot the horn
Because another year is born,
Shoot rockets high
Athwart the sky
And wake the welkin with our cry.

Hip, hip, hurrah!
We blithely say.
This is the moment to be gay
The year is dead.
And in its stead
A new one comes to paint things red.

Another year
At last is here,
And for awhile it will seem queer
To write the date
And get things straight
Without reverting to '08.

Oh, me! Oh, my!
How time does fly!
On rubber tires the years slip by—
New year, then June.
The harvest moon
And time for horns again to tune.

The moral here
Is very clear.
It's handed to us once a year
In prose and rhyme,
And therefore I'm
Inclined to cut it out this time.

Too True.

"A fool and his money are soon parted."

"Pshaw! I know a better one."

"What is it?"

"A fool and his money seldom make connection."

Reason Enough.

"What makes a woman maddest?"

"Another woman."

"Why?"

"Because."

APTAIN LOST OVERBOARD

laster of Steamer Nicomedia Drowned at Sea

The German steamship Nicomedia the Columbia river-Asiatic Steamip Line, arrived Sunday eighteen ys from Yokohama, bringing further details of the death of Captain agemann, former master of the ves-, who was lost overboard at sea on morning of December 26, while steamship was en route from Hong ng to Moji, Japan. The Nicomedia iled from Hong Kong on December and struck a heavy northeast nsoon with a high sea running at caused the steamship to roll rible. About three o'clock on the rning of December 26 Captain agemann went to the bridge to ve orders concerning the course to steered. As he was returning to deck he stumbled but said he was t injured. However, he sat down a few moments and then started ward the side of the vessel. An r later, desiring to alter the course the steamship, the officer on watch nt to the cabin to see the captain, t could find no trace of him and a rch of the vessel brought the same sult. This was the first intimation at an accident had occurred. First ficer Wesper immediately turned the amship around and ran back over course continuing the search til eight o'clock in the hope that captain might still be afloat, but thout avail, and the steamship then oceeded to Moji and thence to Kobe. at Captain Wagemann's death was cidental is certain, but just how it curred will never be known. He s in the best of health and spirits ing especially elated because his fe, who had been visiting in Gerny was to meet him in Portland. It supposed that as he reached the rail the steamer, the vessel gave a sudn lurch and Captain Wagemann be- paritally crippled on account of a mer accident to his knee was pitch- overboard.

On the arrival of the Nicomedia at be, Captain Knitschky, chief officer the German-American mail steamer rcelona, which was at that port asmed command and brought her into rt yesterday. He will take the vesl back to the Orient and as he is the nior first officer in the line, probably ill be given permanent command. ptain Knitschky reports a very ugh trip from Yokohama, a strong rtheast wind with heavy seas being countered all the way across.

A GREAT PLAY

"The Lieutenant and The Cowboy" the new western play which comes the Astoria theatre next Sunday ght. The play is one which observes l the dramatic unities, has the vires of great possibilities, probability d play ability in the combination with amatic itensity and thrilling interest om rise of the curtain to the last imax. Instead of red fire there is al life, instead of threats and murr and the torture of the innocent, ere is a villian and a hero who are ither impossible or smirched beyond cansing and a heroine who shields e man she loves from the results of crime she knews him innocent, and en there is abundance of scenery, hich is properly correct, and one can lmost whiff the sage brush and alkali nd all this helps to make it really orth while and without doubt one of e greatest military plays of recent ears. The Lieutenant and The Cowoy must be seen to be appreciated.

TO RECOVER LARGE TRACT

Several Suits Filed by the Government

Thirty-five suits in equity to declare illegal and void the sale of the large purchases or the Oregon & California railroad land alleging violation of the terms of the original grant, and involving more than 300,000 acres in Oregon were worth approximately $1,-5,000,000, one of the largest suits in which individual interests are concerned ever brought by the government, were filed in the United States circuit court at Portland Saturday afternoon by B. D. Townsend, special assistant to the attorney general of the United States.

The parties sued are made joint detendants to the original case against the Oregon & California Railroad company, the Southern Pacific company, Stephen T. Gage, and the Union Trust company of New York, in which the government asks the forfeiture of a grant of congress of land worth between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000.

All of the purchasers are either timber dealers or individuals who bought the land from the railroad company for speculation purposes, it seems. In each of the 35 suits the land involved aggregates 1000 acres or more. The government asks for relief in all contracts between the railroad company ard the defendants named and that the deeds be declared invalid.

While the terms of the land grant are that the land is to be sold at $2.50 an acre to actual settlers, it seems that in most of the cases cited in the complaint the purchases, who are not settlers by any means, were made for from $7 an acre upward. The land involved, aggregating 353,288 acres all told, is estimated to have brought the railroad company in the neighborhood of $2,000,000.

The largest single sale is that to A. B. Hammond and Charles J. Winton of Wisconsin, of land most of which is in Tillamook county. This land alone has been assessed at $439,490. That land owned by these two which is not in Tillamook is nearby in Yamhill and Washington counties.

The largest purchaser is the Booth-Kelly Lumber company which has secured from the railroad company more than 70,000 acres of land, much of which is timber. In several instances land was bough from individuals who made the original buy from the railroad company, among them being Stewart B. Eakin and 1042 acres held by J. F. and George H. Kelly taken over by the company in which they are interested.

In the complaint the government also asks that the railroad company and all other joint defendats deposit with an officer to be designated by the court any and all sums of money which either of them has realized or in any manner obtained by virtue of the sale of the land involved. The complaint specifies further that the money together with interest, shall be disposed of as the court shall direct and consents that it shall be awarded and paid over to the defendant purchaser or any other person that the court may deem equitably entitled to the amount in question.

Among the joint defendants is William M. Ladd of Portland. In addition there are many others who are mentioned in the suit who reside in all parts of the state. However, many of the parties concerned live in the east and middle west, including persons in Minneapolis, Pittsburg, New York, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Grand Rapids, Singapore, Duluth, Milwaukee and Wausau, Wisconsin.

GOOD SEASON FOR CANNERIES

Annual Report Issued by Alaska Packers

The annual statement issued by the Alaska Packers Association is at hand and shows that during the season of 1908, the association operated 15 canneries in Alaska and one on Puget sound. Its total pack in cases is given as follows: Sockeye, 42,974; red, 878,411; king, 13,058; coho, 20,-226; pink, 183,874; chums, 21,961; total, 1,160,477. In addition to this, it put up 9,335 barrels of salt salmon, making an increase of 60,442 cases and 5,544 barrels over the pack of 1907. During the year $231,000 in the association's bonds were redeemed, reducing the bonded indebtedness to $1,609,000. The gross profits for the year were $880,682.34 and the total write-off was $217,574.26, leaving anet profit of $663,108.08. Regarding the artificial propagation of salmon in Alaska, the statement says:

"The two salmon hatcheries of the association have continued operations. During 1908, from the 47,808,200 red salmon eggs taken in 1907, at the Karluk Salmon Hatchery, 43,655,000 fry were liberated, and 40,320,000 red salmon eggs were taken. From the 41,-280,000 red salmon eggs taken at the Fortmann Salmon Hatchery in 1907, 33,920,000 fry were liberated, and 24,-465,000 red salmon eggs were taken in 1908. In Alaska the government continued operating a large hatchery on McDonald Lake, and has completed a second hatchery at Litnik, Afognak Island."

VAUDEVILLE

Tonight the Bakeronian will inaugurate a season of vaudeville and the change will certainly be appreciated by Astoria theatre goers. The acts are up-to-date and first class and this cosy little theatre will certainly be packed to the doors during the week. It will certainly be a treat to hear the orchestra under the leadership of Miss Esther Sundquist.

ELECTION OF SUPERVISORS

Text of Measure Pending Before the Legislature

A bill has been introduced in the house by Representative Jones to define what shall constitute a road district, provide for the election of road supervisors, define their term of office and prescribe their duties. The text of the measure is as follows:

"Section 1. Every election precinct in this state outside of incorporated cities, as now or as may be hereafter bounded and described, shall constitute a road district

"Section 2. At the general election in 1910 and at every biennial election thereafter, there shall be elected by the qualified electors in each election precinct in this state, outside of incorporated cities, a road supervisor for such election precinct, who shall be a resident and qualified elector of the precinct for which he is elected. He shall take his office on the first Monday in January next following his election and shall hold office for a term of two years, or until his successor shall have been elected and qualified. Before entering upon the discharge of his duties each road supervisor shall file a bond with the county clerk, in the sum of $500.00 to be approved by the county court, and shall take an oath to faithfully discharge the duties of his office. All vacancies in the office of road supervisor shall be filled by appointment by the county court.

"Section 3. All Acts and parts of acts in conflict herewith, so far as they conflict with this act, be and the same are here by repealed."

MOOSE HORN OF PLENTY

Dying Bull's Struggles Reveal Vein of Gold

Oscar T Nelson, formerly of Bellingham, Wash., recently wrote to relatives in Spokane Wash., from Fairbanks, Alaska, that by killing a bull moose near Fairb[illegible]s creek [illegible] and his partners, Washburn and Johnson, prospectors, have come into a fortune by the discovery of a vein of gold uncovered by the long horn of the moose in its death struggle.

The animal was shot from a blind at a distance of 150 yards, the first bullet striking a vital spot While quartering the moose Nelson discovered that the rock which had been exposed from under a layer of moss torn loose by the animal bore gold in large quantities.

The hunters made a closer investigation and immediately staked out several claims, on which they filed at Fairbanks. A rush of miners from Fairbanks followed the discovery.

Nelson adds that the animal is believed to be the famous Anaconda moose which was frequently seen by miners operating along the creek. The spread of antlers is a little more that seven feet, and the carcass weighed 1,200 pounds

ABOUT ASTORIA

Mrs. Joseph Brown left this morning for St. Martin springs for the benefit of her health.

J. H. Going, the well known traveling man, is down from Portland on a business trip.

Frank Clark and bride, arrived here last evening, on a visit to his brother Earl Clarke.

First citizenship papers were granted at the county clerk's office this morning to Jacob Arvid Lahti, a native of Finland.

J. N. Laws was operated upon at the hospital today and a portion of one of his ribs which was affected, was removed. He is reported to be getting along as well as can be expected.

Hon. T. T. Geer and Mrs. Geer, arrived in the city last evening on a weeks visit with relatives, they are domiciled at the residence of Grant Trullinger.

S. Coffey, came over from Clatsop last evening for medical attendance, having badly sprained his left knee, through being struck by a log while at Warren and Lester's camp Saturday afternoon.

The commencement exercises of the grammar grades of the city schools will be held in the Bakeronian theatre on the afternoon of February 5, when there will be an interesting program in connection with the presentation of diplomas.

The steamer Harold Dollar cleared at the custom house today for San Pedro. She carries a cargo of 650,000 feet of lumber, loaded at Linnton; 130,000 feet, loaded a Prescot, and 113,000 feet loaded at the Hammond Lumber Company's plant.

Owen Mulligan, of Ross, Higgins & Co. has received the sad intelligence of the death of his mother at her home at Vancouver, Wash., the cause of her death being old age. Mr. Mulligan will leave this evening for Vancouver to attend her funeral.

Dog licensems are now being taken out quite rapidly in anticipation of the dog catcher starting in on his annual slaughter and last year he killed about as many as licenses were taken out for. There is generally a rivalry as to who secures No 1 for his dog and this year the brindle bull terrier of Hon. Geo. Kaboth has the honor of wearing it.

Articles of incorporation of the Mooers Logging Company were filed in the county clerk's office today. The incorporators are Fred Mooers, Frank Patton and G. C. Fulton and the capital stock is $15,000. It is understood the company will conduct logging operations on a tract of land belonging to N. D. Bain near Gearhart Park.

The McCabe Company has taken a contract for loading the French bark Asnieres, which is taking on a cargo of 1,500,000 feet of lumber at the Hammond mill for Melbourne and work was commenced this morning. The vessel has been using her own crew to handle cargo and as a result only about 20,000 feet a day or about 10,000 feet in all has been placed on board. The mill company has 800,000 feet of lumber on the dock ready for the bark so the loading can now proceed at a rapid rate.

Herman Wise left this morning for Portland on a vacation which may extend to San Francisco or the east as he decides later.

L. Mansur, who has been seriously ill for several days as a result of a partial stroke of paralysis, is improving steadily and his ultimate recovery is expected.

As the result of a broken stringer in the street railway trestle on Bond street between Ninth and Tenth streets car No Three jumped the track last evening and ran onto the sidewalk before it could be stopped Several men were in the car but no one was injured and the car was not damaged.

The work of repairing the damage done by the recent high tides and gale to the Ilwaco Railway & Navigation Company's track is nearly completed and trains will probably be able to run to Megler station tomorrow. The worst break in the line was in the vicinty of McGowan where much of the heavy riprapping was carried away.

W. A. Goodin was successful in getting his grading outfit to Gearhart on Saturday, altho on account of the flooded condition of the roads he was compelled to take it by the way of Olney and Young's river falls. In addition to building a railroad spur into the Bain timber tract. Mr. Goodin has taken a contract for doing considerable grading on the grounds about the Kruse hotel.

The Astoria theatre was very poorly attended Saturday night, but those that were there were well repaid by witnessing the elegant performance of "Shore Acres". Every one of the company acted their parts to perfection and the little Shore Acres children were a revelation. The next attraction will be Sunday evening when the Lieutenant and Cowboy will hold the stage.

The Portland Lumber Company, has recently purchased several sections of fine timber land a short distance east of Cathlamet and will at once commence the construction of a logging road to convey the output to the Columbia river near there. Upon the completion of the road the company will begin logging operations on a large scale.

A beehive in the solid rock of the bluffs near Boise river bridge was the unusual discovery made by three Caldwell men. The discoverers of the bees' unusual "hive," proceded to blast away the rock with dynamite, and their reward was a large quantity of honey of fairly marketable quality. The bees, it was found upon investigation, had made entry to the interior of the bluff through natural crevices.

Albert Marsh, who has made his home in this city for a number of years died this morning of heart failure, following an attack of plueresy. He was a native of Finland, 65 years of age, unmarried and had been a sailor by occupation. The arrangements for his funeral have not been completed but will probably be held on Tuesday with the interment in Ocean View cemetery.

The high school debate between the Tillamook and Astoria teams on the subject of municipal ownership will be held in the Astoria theatre on Wednesday evening as previously announced in the Budget. There has been some remarks made that the Tillamook team came in advance of the original time fixed for the debate but as a matter of fact its members came a week later than intended at the request of the Astoria team.

James Winters, who is accepted as the best mill wright in this section of the country, will become the superintendent of the Stanley-Smith mill at Green Point, 14 miles from Hood River, on March 1. During the past year it cut 160 thousand feet per day on an average and is one of the best equipped mills west of the Cascade mountains. At present Mr. Winters is engaged in building a small mill near Goble.

The work of relaying the six-inch water main on Taylor avenue was completed Saturday evening and today the taps are being made so that the residents of that section will now be provided with water. While all the breaks in the service pipes in various sections of the city have not been repaired, the waste has been stopped so that the supply in the reservoir is normal.

The measure known as the Bean bill will be discussed at a meeting of the legislative committee to be held at Salem this evening and it is probable a number of lobbyists will be present. This is the bill authorizing counties bordering on bays or rivers navigable from the sea to form Ports, and is the one which caused such consternation among some of the Portland people.

It is now understood that the Multnomah delegation has recovered from its alarm and will not fight the passage of the bill, but will introduce an amendment providing that the act shall in no wise interfere with the rights enjoyed by the Port of Portland or the Port of Tillamook

The British steamer Bovrele which arrived today from Union Bay, B C to load lumber at Portland for Manila was fined $5000 by Collector of Customs McGregor for failure to bring a consular bill of health from the British Columbia port. Captain J Mathie, master of the steamship, had a receipt showing that he had paid the American consul at Union Bay for the health bill and says he thought until he searched his papers this morning that he had the required document with him He has telegraphed to the consul for the health bill and if he files it before leaving port, the fine will probably be cancelled without being submitted to the department in Washington.

The city jail has become a hotel for transients as 24 lodgers are on the books of the police department since January 1. The lodgers were all men of apparent laboring class in search of work who had drifted into the city from different parts of the coast. They are given a matress and blanket for the night and a substantial breakfast in the morning. Then they clean up the jail and do odd jobs around in a small way to pay for their accommodation. Before being permitted to leave they are instructed where work can be secured and if they return a second time they have to make a good explanation. These lodgers are searched the same as an arrested man and all of his personal effects are examined to learn something of their history and if any, even little, suspicious thing is found they are given orders to leave the city at once.

The regular meeting of the chamber of commerce tonight at 7:30 will have before it a number of matters of importance including a discussion of telephone rates. Certain members are to bring up for consideration the proposition of erecting a monumet in honor of the pioneers. It is expected that the proposition will be considered of holding a state wide convention for the purpose of organized efforts to secure a $10,000,000 appropriation to complete the jetties at once. As a matter of fact the total imports and exports of the Puget sound are now three times as large as those of the Columbia river which is due to the fact that big ships can go to the Sound and cannot go up the Columbia river, although they could come to Astoria if the people of Astoria and Oregon will immediately complete a 35-foot channel across the bar which can be done within three years if the people of Astoria will simply sit up and take notice.

At the adjourned session of the county court this morning the resignation of C. Johnson as supervisor of road district No 21 in the upper Necanicum river section was accepted as Mr. Johnson is to move out of the district and John Bogard was appointed to fill the vacancy. The report of George P. Clark, who has been experting the books of the several county officers was submitted to the court today. It says that some of the reductions made in taxes on the 1907 roll on account of errors and double assessments are collectable and should be collected; also that refunds on taxes for errors or double assessments should be made by issuing warrants after the errors have been passed upon by the court. The report calls attention to an instance in which the personal property of a corporation has escaped taxation for the past four years and adds that these taxes amount to approximately $2000 and should be collected. It is understood this portion of the report refers to the steamers owned by the Callender Navigation Company concerning the assessment of which in this county, a suit is now pending in the circuit court. The recommendations contained in the report were taken under consideration by the court.

CAPTAIN SEALBY REACHES SHORE

Tells Graphic Tale of Sinking of Republic

New York, Jan. 26—There was a vonderful demonstration on the pier f the White Star Line, when Captain ealby and the officers and crew of the vrecked steamer Republic, landed to-lay. A great throng of officers and eamen from the other White Star teamers were on the dock togther vith several hundred spectators. Cap-ian Sealby was lifted on the shoulders f officers and men carried the length f the dock. Winn, the brave wireless perator, was also carried on the houlders of admirers. When Captain ealby arrived at the offices of the ompany, he protested against further emonstration and was finally set down. aptain Sealby would not talk of the ollision with the Florida but told the tory of the foundering. He said:

"It was about eight o'clock Sunday ight when the Republic began sinking nd only myself and Williams were on he bridge. There was a rumbling nd crackling in the after end of the oat. The stern was settling very apidly and the sea was pretty bad. I aid to Williams: 'Well, well, what do ou think about it? Williams' and Wil iams answered, 'I don't think it will e a long race, let us sprint for it. Vhen you are ready let her go.' I ooked aft, saw how fast she was going nd told Williams to burn a blue light, hen I fired my revolver five times to et the boats around me know we were oing off. Turning to Williams I said: et us take to the forward rigging and e ran from the bridge to the saloon eck, burning our blue light as we ent and carrying an ordinary lantern. Vhen we got to the saloon decks, the ater was coming in, a little aft of here we stood. As we ran forward, e stern was sinking so rapidly the in-lines was so steep that when we got to e forerigging we started to slip back nd could hardly keep on deck. The st I saw of Williams he had crossed the port rail and was hanging over he side. I took to the rigging and ent as high as the mast head lights, distance of many feet. I rested here nd took out a blue light, but it was et and would not go off. Then I red the last shot in my revolver. The ater had now caught up to me, com-ng up under my great coat and I float-d. The revolver and my binocle held e coat down and acted as a sort of allast. At this time, the water was a aring seething mass all about me.

"I was caught in a whirl-pool and hurned around until I came to the urface. There was considerable de-ris about me. I managed to catch nto a hatch, pulled myself out on it, nd lay on it spread eagle fashion. earchlights were playing on the spot here the ship went down. It seemed n interminable time until they did see e, but I managed to load my revolver gain and fired to attract attention. I as getting weak, cold and numb. I ust lay on the hatch and saved myself ntil the last, shouting at intervals. hen the lights played on me and I aved a towel I had found floating ear me and shortly after, the boats f the revenue cutter Gresham picked e up and carried me aboard. I found Villiams in that little lifeboat. I hought I had seen the last of him.'

Captain Sealby is praised in un-easured terms for his courage and luck by the Republic's passengers as vell as are his officers and crew and he wireless operator. He will make report of the accident to the officers f the company today. Second officer Villiams said when he found himself n the sea, he seized two pairs of float ng gratings and held himself up be-ween them until picked up by revenue utter boat. Officer Williams said 'They found me before, they picked p Captain Sealby and when the cap-ain was taken aboard the lifeboat he ay still for some time, then he turned, hrew his arms around me, and said: You were game to the last.' RUFUS H. THAYER, NEW JUDGE AT SHANGHAI.

Judge Rufus H. Thayer, who succeeds Judge Lebbeus R. Wilfley in the United States court at Shanghai China, was appointed from Washington. He has been a practicing lawyer there for many years and is highly regarded by the president and members of the cabinet. His position in China will be a trying one, for complications are constantly arising between Americans and the Chinese and other foreigners there. Judge Wilfley's administration was fraught with much turmoil, and he declared the office one of the hardest to fill in the judiciary service of the United States.

OREGON TAX LAW TO BE AMENDED

To Conform to Supreme Court Decision

Salem, Jan. 26—To straighten out the confusion of the Oregon tax law, resulting on account of the decision of the supreme court holding a fixed ratio is unconstitutional, an emergency measure will be drafted today ro tomorrow by joint committees on assessment and taxation. The governor today sent a special message to the legislature on the subject. The Whipping Post law for wife beaters may be repealed if the bill introduced today passed. Senator Bingham presented a bill to give county courts authority to issue bonds to the amount of half million dollars for improving highways.

LEGISLATORS AVOID TROUBLE

By Voting Down a Resolution at Olympia

Olympia, Wn., Jan. 26—A resolution calling for a legislative committee with sweeping powers to investigate the insurance commissioner's office, the scandal involving former Supreme Judge Milo A. Root and rumors concerning of acceptance free transportation and telephone and telegraph franks by officials and legislatures was voted down in the senate by 28 to 12. The resolution was strongly worded and was taken by some members as a reflection on the intergity of the supreme court. The members condemned it as a wanton insult and one suggested that its author should be required to apologize to the senate or be expelled.

GAS EXPLOSION KILLS MANY

Terrible Accident in the Boswell Coal Mine

Pittsburg, Jan. 26—Two men are known to be dead and 20 others are supposed to have perished as the result of three gas explosions at the Boswel Mine of the United Coal Company in Somerset county last night and early today. The men were members of an investigating party that had entered the mine to make an inspection of suspicious gas traces before allowing the miners to go to work. The known dead are: Superintendent J. G. Logan and Andrew Stonecki. The supposed dead are: Assistant Sup't Geroge Morris, John Cole, William Hay and seventeen others. Until early today signals were heard from the imprisoned men, but at daylight the signals ceased and it is believed all who went into the mine were overcome by the gas.

COSGROVE NOW IN PORTLAND

Portland, Jan. 26—Governor Elect Cosgrove of Washington arrived at Portland today from Paso Robles, California en route to Olympia where he probably will be inaugurated tomorrow afternoon on board his private car "California." Only those few witnesses necessary to conduct the ceremony will be present at the inauguration and the governor expects to return to Paso Robles within 24 houurs after he is inaugurated. He will not assume active duties until his health is restored and not even until summer if necessary. The governor is still weak and emaciated but expresses himself as feeling much improved and on the road to recovery.

HAPPENINGS IN NEHALEM VALLEY

Items of Interest In That Prosperous Section

Jewell, Or., Jan 25

Editor Budget:—Spencer & Hutchinson have been awarded the contract for laying 80 rods of puncheon on the Banicke Creek road.

It is understood Ed. Alexander has bought up his son, David Alexander's interest on the old Johnson homestead, located at the head of Banicke Creek, and will resume his former occupation of shipping cream to the Hazlewood Cream Co, which he left off last fall to go to Idaho where he purchased a tract of land near the irrigation canal. On account of his wife's health, he had to close up his interest there, and return again to the Nehalem. He has made several moves in and out of the Nehalem valley, but this time, he says he is going to remain.

Orin Caine, the mail carrier reports having met two cougars while on one of his tri-weekly mail trips to town last week. Orin says that he encountered the cougars just west of Alec Norman's road camp, and they were coming along the road towards Jewell. On seeing him they sprung off the road into the brush and dissappeared.

Seven inches of fresh snow fell during Friday night and Saturday. Today Sunday it is thawing somewhat, but as the sky is still overcast, the prospects are for more snow within the next twenty four hours.

Two or three bridges on the county road between Jewell and Mist are reported to have been washed out during the late freshet.

Orin Medley has been at work on Mr. Walker's place at Jewell for the last week, on account of Mr. Walker being confined to the house with a severe attack of rheumatism.

Two boys from Olney, who are camping out and trapping on Banicke Creek brought in two wildcats yesterday.

Three stock drovers passed through Jewell yesterday with eight head of choice beef cattle, which they purchased from Mr. Larsen and Mr. Tweedle. The droves started that they had started out with nine head, but that one of the steers got away from them, and was lost in the woods.

OF INTEREST TO FISHERMEN

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.

I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

STEAMER WAS DESTROYED

Vessel Burned But All Passengers Saved

Vancouver, B. C., Jan 26 The steamer Venture, owned by the Boscowitz Steamship Co., and worth more than $100,000, was destroyed by fire Monday shortly after starting from Prince Rupert for Vancouver Fifty passengers and the boats crew were safely landed on the wharf and the boat was cut adrift to save the cannery from the blaze. She washed ashore a mile below and is still burning. Seven thousand cases of salmon, fully insured, are almost a total loss.

TIMBER COMPANY REORGANIZED

Grays Harbor Concern Will Operate New Mill

Aberdeen, Jan. 26 The Greenwood Logging Company has been formed as a reorganization of the Boeing McCrimmon Logging Company. Articles of incorporation wil be filed soon and plans are now forming for logging on a large scale of the timber owned by this firm on the Wishkah river.

The firm will build one of the largest mills in this section. While these plans have been formulated for some time, they have been held in abeyance waiting for the acquisition of three sections of timber lands from Congressman Fordney and his associates in Michigan.

These lands are located on the west branch of the Wishkah river, and when the company obtained them, they made a total holding of twelve sections of timber, with an estimated cruise of about 500,000,000 feet.

Daniel McCrimmon has withdrawn from the company and gone to California where he will continue his logging operations.

LABOR LEADER IS OBNOXIOUS

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 26—Assigning as a reason the objectionable acts of a walking delegate, four of the largest copper producing properites in Arizona together with several smaller mines, closed down yesterday and it is said that the tie-up in the district adjoining Globe and Morenci may become general within a few days.

The properties so far affected are the Old Dominion and the Globe Consolidated Copper companies working the Miami, Superior and Boston. Other mines followed the Old Dominion and a general closing down is said to be imminent.

Eighty Thousand Dollars Paid For Property

Bellingham, Jan 26 J. P. Nelson, of this city, closed an $80,000 deal whereby W. M. Frizell, [illegible] J. Craft, G. W. Felker and S. Graham, of this place, become the owners of 300,000,000 feet of standing cedar and fir timber.

The tract, which covers 7,680 acres of land lies eighty miles from Vancouver, B. C. on Jarvis inlet. Two-thirds of the timber is cedar. The tract was owned by the firm of Webber & McConnell, of Vancouver

GEO. R. MATISON
As Bob Ralston in the "Lieutenant and The Cowboy."
Astoria Theatre, Sunday, January 31.

A GREAT PLAY

"The Lieutenant and The Cowboy" is the new western play which comes to the Astoria theatre next Sunday night. The play is one which observes all the dramatic unities, has the virtues of great possibilities, probability and play ability in the combination with dramatic itensity and thrilling interest from rise of the curtain to the last climax. Instead of red fire there is real life, instead of threats and murder and the torture of the innocent, there is a villian and a hero who are neither impossible or smirched beyond cleansing and a heroine who shields the man she loves from the results of a crime she knows him innocent, and then there is abundance of scenery, which is properly correct, and one can almost whiff the sage brush and alkali and all this helps to make it really worth while and without doubt one of the greatest military plays of recent years. The Lieutenant and The Cowboy must be seen to be appreciated.

CAN FACTORY TO INCREASE

Plant Will be Operated Day and Night

Bellingham, Jan 26—Announcement was made today by the Pacific American Fisheries Company, that by March 1, the biggest salmon can factory in the country in point of output will operate its plant day and night, turning out 500,000 cans daily.

The plant which has just been repaired will receive a large amount of new machinery as soon as the new floors are laid. On February 1, 250 men and girls will be put to work and a day run will be made until March 1, when the force and output will be doubled.

WRECK OF MAINE IS A DISGRACE

Still Lies in the Mud in Havana Harbor

Washington, Jan. 26—Governor Magoon of the Provisional Government of Cuba, in his annual report to the secretary of war made public today, brings to his attention the wreck of the United States battleship Maine in Havana harbor and recommends that the government take immediate steps to accomplish its removal without further delay. He says:

"The wreck of the Maine continues to lie in the mud and waters of Havana harbor. The sunken battleship is a serious menace to the shipping of the harbor, as it ecupies a portion of the best anchorage. The obstruction has increased annually during the past 10 years by causing a shoal. The moderate tides prevailing in the harbor are hardly sufficient to prevent a gradual filling up and this shoal seriously interferes with the action of the tides, and, therefore, the entire harbor is rapidly filling.

INDIAN AT THE PHONE

Any of His Tribesmen Will Do to Answer

The Indians are great on using the telephone. They have but little or no use for the local boards, their calls being over the long distance. They do not put in a call for the individual. They do not ask for White Face at Canton or Flying Cloud at Darlington. The call is for "any Cheyenne." The same is true as to the Arapahoes. Any member of the tribe serves.

An Indian puts in a call for any member of his tribe at Canton, Darlington, Colony, Lawton or any point. It is "up to" the manager to go out on the street and pick up an Indian. Any one will do, so he is of the tribe asked for. He is put up to the phone and the talk proceeds. The talk being in Indian, no one knows what it is about.

If an Indian, say, in Clinton wants to reach one of his people, say, forty miles from Canton or any other given point, he calls for one of his tribesmen, tells him the message he desires delivered, and it is his business to deliver it, even though it requires a night trip and in a storm.

A little Indian baby died near Clinton last year, and his mother desired that her relatives attend the funeral services. They lived out on the prairie northwest of Canton. The telephone was used and a member of the tribe directed to deliver the message to the mother's relatives. It was delivered by a courier across the prairies and canyons, and the relatives came in over the Orient next day.

Last summer a call came to Clinton for a Kiowa that was a poser for the manager. However, he found upon inquiry among the Cheyennes that there was one who had lived among the Kiowas and spoke the dialect. He was put up to the phone and received the call.—Clinton Cor. Dallas News.

Seedless Grapes.

What's become of the "coreless" apple? Twenty years ago it was announced as a discovery or a development calculated to revolutionize the orchard industry. Of late we hear less about it. A little later the "thornless" blackberry appeared on the horizon. It certainly was thornless, but somehow it failed to drive the ferociously armed brambles of the berry gardens into the desert. It is still produced, but the older kinds are yet much more common. Now the "seedless" grape bids for favor. Such a fruit would surely "meet a long felt want." If the quality and flavor of the few thus far grown can be perpetuated and it proves remuneratively productive and capable of "standing up" for shipment there is a big future before it.—Country Life In America.

Camille Flammarion's Home.

M. Flammarion, with his wife, who, by the way, is also a keen thinker and her husband's constant assistant, lives in a chateau at Juvisy, built right on the spot chosen by Louis XIII. to erect a royal residence. Besides being an admirable housewife, Mme. Flammarion is one of the charter members of the Disarmament league. Before Louis XIII. cast his eyes on the place there was a chateau there. Napoleon stayed in it on his way to Fontainebleau. The mansion was acquired later by an amateur astronomer, who had an observatory constructed on the grounds. When he died he bequeathed the entire property to a man whom he had never seen. This man was Camille Flammarion.—"Memoirs of Loie Fuller" in New York Herald.

PERILS OF AN EXPLORER

Braving the Storm of a South Polar Winter

The arctic explorer has always had hardship and danger enough, but the antarctic discoverer has far more terrible conditions to meet. Luckily he meets them with all the equipment and method that arctic exploration has taught mankind. Yet they are most dangerous, as the story of those who have lived through the south polar winter night can testify. One of the experiences of Bernacchi on the cruise of the Southern Cross some years ago shows what an antarctic gale means.

He and a comrade, Ellifsen, started out on a short sledge journey to carry provisions from one camp to another. It was in September, and the broken ice pack over which they must travel was but a foot and a half thick and likely to break in pieces afresh or pile up in deadly masses at the mercy of the sea and wind. The two men had three sledges and eighteen dogs. They had hardly started before the wind rose and a gale threatened. Halfway to their destination there was an iceberg imbedded in the pack ice, and they hastened to reach this before the storm should break.

For five hours they toiled over the ice, the wind gradually rising. The gale broke in fury just as they reached the iceberg, under whose lee they pitched a tiny silk tent, into which they crawled after having fed their dogs as best they could. Hour after hour the wind raged, and the thermometer went to 9 degrees below zero. The snow drifted over and into the tent. Sleep was impossible.

The explorers, who had met typhoons in the China seas and cyclones in the tropics, found by the aneroid as well as by their own sensations that this gale surpassed them all. Worst of all, it seemed as if the ice was beginning to crack. They knew well that the iceberg which protected them from the full force of the storm was the most dangerous place possible in other ways, as the ice was sure to separate first immediately round the berg, throwing tent, men and dogs into the icy seas. The cracking of ice was now to be heard above the roar of the wind. They dared not stay in their shelter.

A little to the east, Bernacchi remembered, was a cave in the body of the iceberg. Once in that, they would not at least be precipitated into the sea, even if they were carried away, iceberg and all. It was so dark that the wall of the berg could not be seen even when the hands touched it. The two explorers groped as best they could along the slippery walls, both hands on the ice and their bodies pressed against it. Halfway around they left the lee side and met the gale. It came like a solid thing, bearing them back and down. Not one inch could they move against it, and further exposure meant death. They groped back, blinded, deafened and almost paralyzed with cold, to shelter. Then they commenced a toilsome hunt for a foothold on the lee side somewhere. Toward morning they found a low spur or projection, upon which they scrambled and lay down perfectly exhausted in the snowdrifts, which grew each moment. To this they owed their lives, for the snow soon covered them and kept in the warmth of their bodies.

They dared not sleep for fear of never waking, so they roused each other alternately. At last day broke, and the gale abated. Crawling over the snow, their garments frozen stiff as boards, their beards solid lumps of ice, they managed to reach their tent. The ice had not broken, though it was cracked here and there. They took food, slept, fed their dogs, who were deep in the drifts, but alive, and then courageously went ahead, "not caring to be beaten," as Bernacchi expressed it. It was 8 o'clock at night before they reached camp, but the next day they were exploring and taking photographs and observations just as usual. Man may seem puny against nature, but he conquers her from the arctic to the antarctic by his unconquerable soul. William Rittenhouse in Forward.

TRAGEDY IN ITALY

Strange Results of Earthquake in Messina and Reggio

Many stories are told of the fearful earthquake which recently destroyed the Sicilian city of Messina and Reggio, in Italy. There were several harrowing and strange episodes. A girl in a frantic effort to escape attempted to leap over the railing of the balcony of her home in Reggio. Her skirts caught on the ironwork, and she hung there, swaying in the wind, for four days.

A woman, buried under the debris of her house, although slightly injured, was unable to move, while her husband and children, crushed on the floor above, slowly bled to death, their blood dropping on her breast and arms. She was finally taken out alive, but is demented, not even knowing her name.

A cobbler of Messina named Francesco Missiano relates that immediately after the first shock he and his wife and children rushed into the street. Fires were starting all around them. Hearing groans from a pile of debris, the cobbler made a hurried examination. He found two girls dying. He picked up a baby, but the infant expired in his arms. Seized with mad terror, the man fled toward the sea. It took his party two hours and a half to traverse the heaps of ruins between his house and the water front. After placing his family in safety he returned to seek his mother and sisters, but he was obliged to give up the effort. It was impossible to make his way back to his home. This man owes his safety to the fact that he lived in a one story house. He says no help arrived for thirty hours after the catastrophe.

Flora Parini, an actress, recites that while she was lying half buried in the wreckage at Messina she heard the voice of a lieutenant of artillery from close at hand. The man had recognized her, but his plight was worse than her own.

"Signorina," he cried, "for pity's sake, save me. Call for some one to rescue us. Don't leave me. I was at the theater the other night, and I applauded your singing. I have a mother. Don't leave me to die."

The woman was eventually dug out by some sailors. She remembered the lieutenant and led her rescuers to where he was pinned down. He also was saved.

An infant clothed in a little nightshirt was rescued well and uninjured after having lain for four days on a square yard of flooring in a house that was otherwise entirely demolished.

The Marquis di Ruvolito, who visited the stricken district of Calabria, writes:

I have visited Reggio and the surrounding district. The railway to Reggio from Salina and as far as San Gregorio was invaded by the sea, and the rails are still strewn with corpses. The tidal waves roared over and swept clear two districts of Lazzaro and Pellaro. It is impossible even to tell where the houses stood.

The waves at Salina raised a man to the height of the second story of a house and swept him through it and for a distance of 500 yards inland. His head was like a broken eggshell. One house, that of a postal official, remained erect at Lazzaro. The waves flooded it so that fish were afterward found in the upper rooms.

I found a man in Reggio pinned alive beneath a fallen roof. He was hidden from view, but his relatives were feeding him through a narrow crack.

The grotesque intrudes everywhere upon the terrible. I saw a corpse with a vast block of stone upon its head and shoulders. The man had died while pulling on his trousers.

Near the mayoral offices a man was lying buried in such a manner that his parents could speak to him, but dared not seek to save him. A great wall tottered above him, and the least movement would bring it down. Another buried man who could receive help through a crack in the wreckage maintained complete tranquillity. When his relatives came to feed him he asked why they had not brought him any liquor. When they told him that no attempt could be made to rescue him till the next day he answered coolly, "Au revoir then. I will see you tomorrow."

Signor Vidala, the proprietor of a Messina newspaper, relates that he was superintending the printing of an edition when the shock came. He managed to get out to the street before the building collapsed. He groped his way to the Place [illegible] which had been transformed into a huge crevasse.

For the first ten minutes after the initial shock one long cry of anguish seemed to rise from the city. Then there was comparative silence for a short while. The worst shocks were over by [illegible] Vidala made his way to his home and found his family under the ruins.

As he was telling his tale a wild looking individual in strange clothing came up to the correspondent and the newspaper proprietor. "I also am bereft of all my family," he interrupted. "I now am alone in the world, like you, Vidala." It was evident that this man was half crazy. He had saved a daughter from the ruins, but his two sisters had been killed. Later he died of his injuries.

AUTOMATIC FOOTBALL

Actions of One Player After a Kick in the Head

"Speaking of queer things in foot ball," said an old player, "I recall a game that was played at Annapolis some years ago between Columbia and the Naval academy teams.

"One of the men on the Columbia team, the quarterback and a very prominent player of the year, started the game in good condition, but after part of the first half he was kicked in the head in one scrimmage. It took some time to get him around, but he suddenly arose and gave a signal. The two teams lined up and play went right on.

"This man went through the game, and no one noticed that anything was wrong with him. When the game was over and the Columbia team was on the way back to New York in the train this player, who had appeared to be in a brown study, suddenly turned to the man next to him and asked, 'Who won the game—what was the score?' and a number of other questions that made it seem as if he hadn't been anywhere near the field of play.

"The players were greatly surprised and thought perhaps the kick in the head had hurt the man so that his mind was affected. Later they learned that he was unable to tell what happened from the moment he got the kick in the head until the time he recovered consciousness, so to speak, on the train.

"His playing of quarterback and his giving of signals had been entirely automatic, or, rather, subconscious. That case was referred to frequently in the psychology courses at Columbia, you may well imagine."—New York Sun.

The joint committees appointed by the Oregon and Washington legislatures will meet in Seattle on next Saturday to discuss proposed legislation regarding the fisheries of the Columbia river. These biennial conference are not new and have been held many times in the past, but the result has been far from satisfactory. It is hoped, however, that something tangible may be accomplishd this time. The people of Oregon have declared by a large majority vote in favor of preserving the fisheries by stopping all fishing above tide water, the same as is done on every other salmon stream in the world. This conference will be taking a wise step if it recommends that the Washington legislature enact a similar law.

Dancing has caused a small war at Enid, Oklahoma. The school board, or at least a majority of that body, is opposed to dancing. The president of the school board is not, and with a number of teachers attended the dance given by the Elks, where about 200 of the elite of the town were in attendance. Some of the board objected to the giddy waltz and said teachers who indulged in the whirl should not be permitted to teach the young ideas how to shoot. The board requested the president to resign; he declined. The teachers are all with the president and will stand pat on the proposition, paying no attention the anti-dancing order. They propose to teach and to dance, the latter when the opportunity presents itself.

RACING THE BATTLESHIPS.

If it be true that the president has ordered the battleship fleet to "cut her oose" when the signal is given to sail from Europe for Hampton Roads and come home as fast as possible without any regard for fleet or squadron formation, the old ocean will see the greatest race in the history of a long line of maritime tests of speed.

The race of two great ocean liners from port to port—of clipper ships from New York around the Horn to Hongkong of fleet yachts off Sandy Hook for the American's cup or of the puny shells of Harvard and Yale at Poughkeepsie, were as nothing to this greatest of speed among sixteen of the largest and heaviest ships afloat, equipped with powerful engines and built for nothing so much as strength and speed.

There will be some who will question the president's wisdom in giving such an order, or rather such permission, but the majority of the people of the country and particularly the officers and crews of the big ships will welcome the opportunity with exceeding joy, and it is safe to say that the men aboard the last ship in to Norfolk will positively refuse to speak to any of the engine room crews for years to come. It has been a long and hard endurance test for these ships, a sort of Marathon, and this race across the Atlantic will show their capabilities for a spurt at the finish.

The Oregon has lived for ten years as the best loved ship in the American navy and she will doubtless continue as such for many more. That love for her was generated when, on top of her long and lonely dash to Santiago she steamed at full speed into the group of blockading vessels and reported herself ready to fight.

Short Stories.

The population of the United States per square mile is 27.71.

VILL OPPOSE BEALS MEASURE

ounter Bill Proposed by Oregon Forestry Association

Legislation looking toward the rerestation of logged off lands and the otection of the present standing timr against what are claimed to be unst restrictions was discussed at an portant meeting of the Oregon Fortry association, held in Portland.

Representatives of most of the imrtant timbermen of Oregon were esent at the meeting and the work of eparing bills to meet the requireents of the timberman proceeded to e point where a committee was apinted to look into the matter and rert back to the association.

This committee consisting of George . Cornwall, editor of the "Timberan," Lewis Montgomery of Mann & ongomery, H. D. Langille of Lacey Co., and several others, will consid the best manner of presenting the mbermen's side of the Beals bill hich is now before the state legislare for passage. This bill provides at owners of timber lands in Oregon e with the county auditor cruisers' timates of what timber they own and its value, together with a sworn atement attesting the accuracy of e estimate. This, according to the ll, must be done within 90 days. Aside om the fact that it would be impos ble to cruise all the timber in the ate within 90 days the timber owners aim it would be unjust to compel em to cruise this timber and to file a atement of its amount and value as a blic record. They claim that they e entitled to secure what they can r their timber and that to make pub: its value would be unfair to them.

"It is with no idea of trying to oid taxation that we oppose the eals bill," said Mr. Montgomery, but because we think we should be lowed to keep our estimate of the lue of our own timber to ourselves ithout giving it to business rivals. e ask no more than those engaged in y other kind of business receive. e have no wish to avoid paying our xes or to decrease their amount, alough we have something to say on at score at another time. None of wishes to be a tax dodger. It is mply that we consider the terms of is act as unjust."

The proposition to reforesting loged off lands in the northwest is one at George M. Cornwall has been urgg for a long while. Mr. Cornwall ill present to the legislatures of Oreon and Washington bills providing at upon the approval of the state restry board individuals may take gged—off lands for reforestration, hile the state's tax on such lands will e a cumulative one, to be collected hen the timber is cut. For instance, t the end of 40 years, as, if it should e found desirable to cut the timber, e state would get $2 a 1000 for all mber cut from such reforested lands. r. Cornwall claims that if Oregon nd Washington each had 1,000,000 eres reforested, at the end of 40 years here would be 15,000 feet per acre. he state's interest would be $30,000,-0 labor would receive $10 per 1000 eet for its manufacture a total of 150,000,000, while the seas would be ssured of a constant supply of timber.

Circumstances Alter Size.

"How big is a dollar, anyway?"

"That all depends."

"On what?"

"On how hard you have to work for and how long you have to wait for ."

LEGISLATURE MUST ACT SOON

In Order to Protect Legality of Taxroll

Salem, Jan. 26—That the tax collection machinery of the state will be brought to a standstill and that state finances will be tied up and demoralizd until the legislature is able to devise some method for tiding over the emergency and probably extending the time for payment of this year's state tax, is the startling situation with which Oregon is confronted.

This chaotic condition is the result of a sweeping decision of the supreme court in the suit brought by Yamhill county to restrain the payment of the amount apportioned to the county for state revenues. Although the question was not directly before the court, Justice Bean in his decision took occasion to declare that the existing system of apportioning the state tax is unequal and unconstitutional.

By the first of February the assesment rolls are turned over to the county tax collectors and taxes then become payable. But if any taxpayer refuses to pay his state tax or pays under protest and then uses for its return the supreme court has practically said to him that it will sustain his position, and that the state has no right to collect the tax.

The outcome of this situation is difficult to foresee. It seems impossible the legislature will be able to put a new system into effect in time for new rolls to be made up for the payment of this year's tax. This means embarrassment for the state, with practically no possibility of collecting the $1,275,000 due from the counties until the legislature can find a way, and whether a temporary way can be found for this year is doubtful, considering the steps that are necessary and the complications that may arise.

Another grave possibility is that other taxes may be held up by the tangle, for taxpayers are likely to refuse to pay the state tax at all, and the usual practice of tax collectors has been to render one bill for all branches of the tax and to refuse to accept part payment. If this policy should be pursued, all the machinery would be stopped and the enforcement of the unprotested tax by separate suits would be an unthinkable process. The probable policy, it is safe to predict, would be to allow the payment of other taxes until the state tax problem can be worked out.

Where will it all lead? This is a question that defies present answer. Apparently the work expended by the state tax commission is in vain, for the court decision covers the proposed method of basing the tax on the average expeditures of counties for a series of years, and holds that this, too, would be illegal. The legislature has postponed the putting into effect of this plan at different times, the last postponement being until 1912, and now the supreme court decides that it can never be used.

In short, Oregon is left without a valid system of apportionment of state taxes. The time is dangerously near when the collection it required by law. The only fortunate phase of the situation is that the legislature is in session, and the tax experts of the state, by putting their heads together, may devise some method of legal collection before the year is out, though it would seem impossible to avoid months of delay and a period of disastrous uncertainty and confusion.

VAUDEVILLE AT BAKERONIAN

Last evening the Bakeronian inaugurated a season of vaudeville to large audiences and Manager Simonton should receive substantial encouragement in the shape of heavy patronage during the week. The overtures by the orchestra under the leadership of Miss Sundquist is worth the price of admission alone followed by Elmer Beard an excellent contortionist. Miss Holland sung the illustrated song entitled "My Old Lady" and elicted tumultuous applause.

One of the best musical skits ever seen at this little theatre was the musical muddle by Angela May assisted J. Louis Macevoy, Miss May is the best contralto without exception that has been heard in this city and her singing in imitation of Anna Helds great song I cannot make my eyes Behave" was the best thing heard here in years Prof. Fauzard the handcuff king simply mystified the audience as to how he got out of all kinds of hand and leg irons. The kinetoscope pictures entitled Ingomar" is well worth seeing.

The Japanese Bible.

It is said that when the Bible was translated into Japanese an equivalent to the word "baptize" was not to be found, and the word "soak" had to be used instead, so that the Japanese are acquainted with a person of the name of "John the Soaker" and with a doctrine of "soaking for the remission of sins."

BENSON FAVORS INSURANCE LAW

Thinks Companies Should Deposit Funds

Salem Ore, Jan. 26—One of the features of the report of Secretary of State Benson is his view of the insurance business, in which he takes issues with Governor Chamberlain, who in his message to the legislature recommended the repeal of the act requiring fire insurance companies to deposit $50,000 with the state treasurer before being qualified to do business in the state. Governor Chamberlain argued that the repeal would permit more companies to come and that policy holders would benefit by the competition, but Secretary Benson believes the present deposit law is a complete offset to less reliable insurance.

In the event that the surety bond system suggested by the governor and others be adopted and substituted for the cash deposit law, Secretary Benson suggests that such requirements be extended to all classes of insurance. He says also that the business relating to insurance has grown to such proportions within the past few years that it requires more time and attention than the secretary can afford to give, and suggests that a separate-department be created for the supervision of the insurance business.

The tax of 2 per cent upon the net premiums collected by insurance companies and paid to the state treasurer amounted to over $63,000 during 1906 and a little over $60,000 in 1907.

ESTIMATE OF STATE EXPENSE

Figures Submitied by Secretary of State

Salem, Jan. 26—Secretary of State Benson's estimate of the appropriations necessary for the needs of the state government for 1909-1910 is $3,407.829 as compared to $2,523,516 for the 1907-1908 period. Among the principal items of increases is an estimate of $125,000 for the public printing fund, which is due to the enactment of the corrupt practice act by the people, which provides for publication and distribution of pamphlets at both the primary and general elections, and 175,000 of such pamphlets will be required at the primary and general elections in 1910.

The deficiencies in several of the funds for which appropriations were made by the 1907 Assembly amount to $31,000 to the date of the close of the report period, and these were considerably increased during the last quarter of the year not covered by the report.

ABOUT ASTORIA

J. S. F[illegible] representing the Pacific coast [illegible] works, of Portland, is in the city on business.

Mrs. Martin Stanovich presented her husband with a ten pound daughter at 7:30 o'clock this morning. Both the mother and little girl are doing well.

G. B. Johnson general agent of the A. & C. R. will go to Portland this evening to attend the wedding of Ralph H. Jenkins on Wednesday afternoon to Miss Ainsworth.

An application for admission to citizenship was filed in the county clerk's office today by John Engstrom, a native of Finland The application will be submitted to the circuit court on June 22.

H. M. Lorntson left last evening for Salem to attend the meeting of the fisheries committees tomorrow evening, when measures to be recommended to the joint conference of the committee of Oregon and Washington legislatures will be decided upon.

City Surveyor Tee and the engineers of the Astoria, Seaside & Tillamook Railroad Company are engaged today in running the lines for the route of the company's proposed electric road thru the Ocean View cemetery on Clatsop beach.

An order was made in the probate court today authorizing the administratrix of the estate of R. M. Leathers to pay certain claims and making an allowance from the estate for the support of the widow and minor child of the deceased.

The down train from Portland this morning was an hour and a half late on account of the breakage of a spring hanger on the engine which necessitated slow speed. The delay was the only unpleasant feature of the run.

Mrs. William E. Tallant received a telegram this morning from her aunt of New York, who was on the wrecked steamship Republic that she had been saved and was all right but that she could not take with her even her small personal effects from the vessel.

The funeral of the late Eianrd Hendrickson was held this afternoon from Pohl's funeral parlors, the services being conducted by Rev. S. H. Ronka, pastor of the Finnish Evangelical Lutheran church, and were attended by many of the friends of the young man and his family. The interment was in Greenwood cemetery.

While some quite young boys were out on the pipe line road on Monday afternoon, gathering moss, two large animals suddenly made their appearance. The boys were so frightened that they ran home as soon as possible and could give no definite account of what they saw. It was probably a couple of bars or cougars as the snow has driven all the wild animals out of the hill in search of food.

The tickets for the debate between the Tillamook and Astoria high schools are being sold today. This debating between the students of the various high schools is very commendable and should be encouraged by everybody, the training of one season is worth as much to a student as a term at school. As the expense of the contest is to be paid from the receipts of ticket sales, all who are interested should exchange 25 cents for a ticket and hear the young people.

F. L. Evans and L. C. Rogers of the Seaside and Tillamook railroad electric line returned yesterday from a business trip to Springfield Oregon.

The steamer George W. Fenwick cleared at the custom house today for San Pedro with a cargo of 1,950,000 feet of lumber, loaded at the Hammond mill. The steamer Cascade cleared today for San Francisco with a cargo of 520 000 feet of railway ties

The annual meeting of the stock holders of the Union Fishermen's Co operative Packing Company was held yesterday afternoon and a board of directors consisting of the following was elected: Charles Wilson, Franz Kankkonen, Oscar Laito, J. W. Enborg, John S. Erickson, John Juola, Andrew Olson, Gust Petrick and Chas. Markow. Charles Wilson was elected as president and Franz Kankkonen as secretary. The reports of the officers showed that the affairs of the company are in excellent condition.

Mrs. Johanna Stuart, who was well known in this city, having been here many times to visit her son, R. M. Stuart, formerly deputy United States marshal at this place died at her home in Portland yesterday. The deceased was 77 years of age and came to Oregon with her parents in 1847. She was married to A. S. Suart at Portland in 1851.

The running of trains on the extension of the Ilwaco road to Megler station is to be resumed this afternoon temporary repairs of the damage done by the recent high tides having been made. Foreman McCoy with a force of men will begin work at once on replacing the riprapping and putting the line in condition so that no further trouble from washouts need be feared.

Joseph L. Moore received the sad intelligence this forenoon announcing the death of his mother Mrs. Emely E. Moore of Keokuk, Iowa, after a short illness. Mrs. Moore was Seventy years of age and leaves a large family to mourn her loss. All her children are residing in the east excepting two of her sons.

Last evening J. R. Barnaby of Seattle, acting as agent for the owners, sold the wreck of the stranded French bark Alice, which is lying on the beach to Ocean Park, to Joseph Adler of Portland for $201. Only three other bids were received and they were in the sums of $10, $25 and $51, respectively. Captain Aubert, master of the craft, and all the members of the crew started last evening for New York en route to France, where they will be paid off and where the court of inquiry to investigate the cause of the wreck will be held.

The three masted schooner Oregon was towed into port in distress on Monday evening, on account of being out of water and provisions. She sailed from San Diego 40 days ago for Tillamook and made a quick run up the coast getting off the Tillamook bar in 16 days but then began experiencing severe weather and after being there for 20 days headed for the Columbia river. All on board are well and at no time were in distress but her master, Captain Anderson, deemed it good judgement to get to a port of refuge. It is the expectation that she will leave out for Tillamook in a few days.

At the session of county court yesterday afternoon the judge and clerk were authorized to procure 10,000 feet of lumber to be used in repairing the Lewis and Clark road near the Ingalls' place and Supervisor Mudd has a force of men making the repairs today. An order was also made approving the action of Commissioner Frye in making arrangements for repairs to the Smith's point road. A quantity of crushed rock is to be placed on the road in places where it has been worn away and several ditches are to be dug to drain the right-of-way. Under the contract the rock is to be furnished and placed on the road for 75 cents per yard.

At the meeting of the chamber of commerce on Monday evening the attendance was not as large as it should have been on account of other attractions in the city but several matters of interest were discussed and acted on. The question of deepening the bar was brought up by Judge Taylor, especially with reference to the building of the North jetty and the following committee was appointed to elicit all aid possible to have the work inaugurated: Judge Taylor, Mayor Smith, James Finlayson and T. L. Evans. Another matter considered was that the new telephone rates, soon to go into effect, were exorbitant, a representative of the telephone company was present and after explaining that they were the same as charged in other cities, giving the same service, no action was taken.

Miss Margaret Ross, whose home was at Knappa but with Astoria friends and relatives, has been in the employ of the Standard Oil Company for several years as a stenographer and has been working in the Hong Kong, China, office for some time On December [illegible] she was married there to Mr Arthur Canning Logan in the Union church of that city. The announcement of the wedding has been received by several of her friends from the mother and father of the groom, who reside there.

The funeral of the late N. P. A[illegible] [illegible] Skamokawa a few days ago, was held on Monday from the Lutheran church of that city, Rev. Gustaf. E. Rydquist, pastor of the Memorial Lutheran church of this city conducting the services. Mr. Anderson was well and favorably known in this city as well as up the river and quite a number from Astoria attended his funeral which was one of the largest ever held in that community. The deceased leaves a widow and five grown up children to mourn his demise.

One of the largest real estate deals that has been closed in Astoria in some time has been consummated by the purchase of the Hammond Lumber Company of the water frontage property of the American Lumber Company, that is located directly west of its plant and comprises about 25 acres. It is one of the choicest pieces of water front in Astoria and reaches out to the river channel and will permit the Hammond Lumber Company to develop its plant to double its present dimensions, as is understood is contemplated. The price has not been made public but the owners have made fully a hundred per cent on the original owners of the property.

That preparations are being made for making Astoria the great wheat shipping port of the northwest and that everything will be ready for handling grain here next fall is shown by an item which appeared in the current number of the Pacific Builder & Engineer of Seattle, one of the leading engineering journals on the coast. It says: "Patrick B. Gifford, formerly of the firm of Kerr & Gifford of Portland, is reported as having plans under way for the erection of grain elevators and warehouses at Warrenton, the town below Astoria where Jim Hill has large water front holdings. Mr. Gifford is now on a trip to England, presumable to interest English capital in the matter. The report has it that the project if carried through will mean an expenditure of about $1,000,000."

Russel H. Conwell of Pennsylvania one of the greatest lecturers in the country appeared at the Presbyterian church last evening under the auspices of the Young Mens league thru the star course of entertainment. A large and appreciative audience greeted Mr. Conwell and all were enthusiastic in the praise of this excellent gentleman. Mr. Conwell's lecture was very ably handled, his subject being "An Acre of Diamonds," which dwelt with character building, education, upbuilding of home and city, of accepting the advantages presented by your immediate surrounding country, Mr. Conwell dwelt at length on the riches of the lower Columbia and its timber wealth demonstrating the millions of wealth and the "Acres of Diamonds" to be found here. Mr. Conwell left a strong impression with his hearers and will long be remembered by the many who had the good fortune to here him lecture.

One of the latest steam schooners turned out on the Pacific coast and which will make frequent trips to Astoria in the lumber trade is the Carlos, owned by J. Homer Fitch, of San Francisco, who operates a member of craf tbetween bere and California ports She is 865 tons net register, 216 feet long, 39.2 feet beam and 14.8 feet depth of hold. Her carrying capacity is 1,500,000 feet of lumber. Accommodations are provided for 40 passengers, there being 20 staterooms. These are all outside rooms, most of them having doors opening on to the deck. There is also a commodious saloon, comfortably fitted. The engine of the Carlos of the triple expansion marine type, built by the Fulton Iron Works, of San Francisco. It has cylinders 13, 22 and 36 inches by a 24-inch stroke, with an independent circulating pump. An electric light plant is filed with a powerful searchlight on top of the pilothouse. Steam is supplied by one scotch marine boiler, 12 feet 6 inches in diameter by 11 feet 6 inches long, carrying steam at a pressure of 185 pounds to the square inch and fitted to burn oil. On the trial trip she showed a speed of 10 knots an hour.

Corporal Abney, who was serving a two years' sentence for desertion and reinlistment in the guard house at Fort Stevens, escaped during last night and at last accounts had not been apprehended. The exact manner of his escape is not known but it is believed that he made his exit through a rear window and that he had confederates to assist him. When the place was examined at ten o'clock on Monday night by the guard all the prisoners appeared to be asleep under their blankets but at six o'clock this morning a dummy was found under the blanket of Abney. The guard, that was on duty during the escape, will have to appear before court martial and will probably have a chance to try to escape from the same place.

At the recent annual meeting of the Memorial Lutheran church it was decided not to purchase the old Congregational church property but rebuild the present church building on Grand avenue between Thirteen and Fourteenth streets. To do this a fund of $4,000 will have to be raised and this is confidently expected by April 1 when it is intended to begin work. The interior fittings and furnishing of the edifice as well as the electric lighting will be separately paid for by the Aid and Alpha societies of the church. The windows will be of cathedral glass and will be donated by individuals in memory of some of their deceased relatives.

FRED W. CARPENTER, WHO WILL SUCCEED LOEB.

Aside from being a lawyer, an expert strenographer, a globe trotter and the hardest kind of worker, Fred W Carpenter, Mr. Taft's private secretary, knows nearly every man connected with public life in America. He was secretary to Mr. Taft in the Philippines, went around the world with him and was at his elbow every day that he served as secretary of war. It is freely predicted that he will make as efficient a secretary in the White House as did Dan Lamont, who made the position famous.

Washington, Jan. 27—The house with few faint nays adopted the report of the special committee on Willett speech.

FIGHT BETWEEN STOCKMEN

Expected to Occur Over Control of Ranges

Los Angeles, Calif., Jan. 27—The American National Livestock Association convend this morning for the second day's session with a prospect that a warm fight between cattlemen and sheep men over the subject of grazing and range control will break out before the final adjournment. The cattlemen are in control and their views will doubtless prevail, but not without a warm contest. Several addresses of importance to cattle raisers were made today.

BUTLER FINED ONE THOUSAND

Failed To Arrive With Electorial Vote

Washington, Jan. 27—R. R. Butler of Oregon, electoral messenger commissioned to bring the state's electoral vote to the senate, was subjected to fine of $1000 for failure to arrive yesterday. He gets about $1200 mileage, so he will have left $200, after paying the fine, which, however, will probably not be imposed.

UNION PACIFIC TRAIN WRECK

Woman Killed and Thirty Passengers Injured

Cheyenne, Wyo., Jan. 27—A broken rail or broken flange sent two day coaches of the Oregon express on the Union Pacific whirling over an embankment at Sana, 150 miles west of Cheyenne, last night. Miss E. Clingenpul, of Danbury Conn. was killed and thirty other passengers injured.

Later—Three more are dead as result of the Union Pacfic wreck. The wreck is said to be the result of failure of sections hands to put out a slow signal to give warning of the insecure rail. The sections hands have disappeared.

JAPANESE IN CALIFORNIA

Roosevelt Writes Another Letter About Them

Washington, Jan. 27—The president has sent a second letter to Governor Gillett of California, relating to the Japanese situation. It is understood his advise is against legislation of any kind at this time bearing on the Japanese, even if not directly discriminating against the citizenship of Japanese. At the same time the president recognizes the existence of a sentiment favoring a non-discriminatory law prohibiting aliens for holding land in the state and it is understood he would not oppose such a law. The president strongly thinks it best to take no action, pending developments of the next two years as to immigration.

ELECTIONS PART HOLIDAYS

Plan To Secure Complete Vote of Workingmen

Salem, Or., Jan. 27—If a bill which is now being drafted by a lawyer of Portland and is scheduled to be introduced in the legislature the last of the week, should be enacted into a law, it will in all probability prove a practical solution of one problem which has confronted political parties of all shades of opinion in the past—how to get the voters to the polls at both primary and regular elections.

By the terms of this bill every place of business must close at noon on the days when primaries are held and on election days with the exception of undertaking establishments, drugstores and restaurants. Restaurants will be obliged to cease business at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and not reopen their doors until 4 o'clock. All other forms of employments must end at noon, with the single exception of that controlling street car traffic.

It is asserted that in the past intimidation has been practiced by large corporations employing many men when they desired to defeat some measure or some political candidate deemed inimical to their own interests. Employes, it is declared, have even been required to work after regular hours in order to keep them away from the polls. In a majority of instances, where mills and factories shut down at 6 o'clock in the evening, an hour before the closing of the polls, workmen have been to tired to walk a good distance out of their way to get to voting booths and have been further influenced by the knowled that they would arrive home late for their evening meal.

It has been decided to exclude street car service from the operation of the proposed law. The law will be applicable to the entire state in state elections and otherwise in such counties or municipalities as elections may be held apart from state elections.

The Difference.

I eat my humble dinner,
My chop and beans and pie.
Perhaps with indigestion

And as he spreads a plaster
He calls it stomach ache.

CONFERENCE BILL LIKELY

Touching On Liquor Question in Washington

Olympia, Wash., Jan. 27—The Anti-Saloon league's local option bill will never pass the legislature at this session. This fact has been established beyond doubt. In the place of the bill, patterned after the Illinois law, will likely be introduced a conference bill, made up by committees from both houses, although three distinct bills are now in process of construction. The league bill occupies about 5000 words, and is full in every detail. It is proposed to draw a bill much shorter and less complicated.

It is supposed that the senate will ce unfriendly to a rigid local option bill, but it has been assumed that the house would pass a stringent law. The action yesterday in voting for there reference of the bill to the judiciary committee as made it apparent that hard sledding is ahead for the friends of the measure which has been discussed all over the state.

Interest is intense. This is seen in the fact that during the discussion in the house yesterday the senate adjourned, and during the entire afternoon and evening no other subject was discussed in the hotel lobbies, about the state house or in the streets. A number of able lobbyists representing the liquor interests are here, and are making every effort to block rigid legislation. It is conceded on all sides that a local option law will be passed, but from present indications the liquor dentist will be permitted to pull most of its teeth before it is finally submitted to the governor for approval.

LARGE SUMS FOR HIGHWAYS

Authorizer by Resolution Introduced by Bingham

Salem, Or., Jan. 27—Granting of authority to the counties of the state to bond themsevles for $500,000 for building good roads is proposed in a resolution introduced by Senator Bingham this morning. It is in the form of a constitutional amendment to be voted on by the people.

Senator Johnson, who is piloting the good roads bill, says he does not consider the Binghm amendment antagonistic to his bill, although he doubts the wisdom of putting the maximum so high.

Vanity.

Apropos of vanity, Secretary Root told at Yale about a politician who the day before he was to make a certain speech sent a forty-one page report of it to all the papers. On page 20 appeared this paragraph: "But the hour grows late, and I must close. ('No, no! Go on! Go on!')"—Argonaut.

CANADIAN TO CUT SCHEDULE

Northern Line Plans a Fast Freight

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 26—The Canadian Pacific, which recently took control of the Wisconsin Central as part of the fight with the American roads for transcontinental business, has begun arrangements to run its through train from the Atlantic coast over the South Shore line on the south side of Lake Superior by a new cut off, shortening the distance across the continent. It is probable that the new route will not only be used for through freight, but also for the emigrant trains with immigrants for the Pacific northwest This will put the Canadian road in an excellent position to compete with the Union Pacific and the Northern Pacific for western business as it will avoid the long detour to pass the southern end of Lake Michigan on the Chicago route, and also the detour arouno the northern part of Lake Superior on the present Canadian Pacific lines.

The South Shore road, controlled by the Canadian Pacific, as it now runs follows closely the southern shore of Lake Superior and would not serve as an effective shortener of the line to the northwest. At present through sleeping cars are run from several western points on the Canadian Pacific to Montreal over the South Shore, and when passengers wish they can change at Montreal and reach Boston by another cut through the American portion of the continent over another subsidiary of the Canadian Pacific. The cut-off which will make the South Shore feasible as a real shortener of the transcontinental route is from Duluth to Thief River Falls Another step to make the change effective is the laying of new ninety-pound rails over the whole of the South Shore road to be used in the new air line. This will alone allow a cut of four hours from the running time between Duluth and the Soo.

By the new route the Canadian Pacific trains would strike the United States north of Duluth, run across Northern Michigan to the Soo in Canada, to the western border of Maine and across Maine to the New Brunswick boundary.

TEACHING PATRIOTISM

Red Cross Arranges Special Sunday School

A movement which is likely to have farreaching results in the teaching of patriotism in the Sunday school has recently been launched through publications of the Congregational, Methodist, Presbyterian, Lutheran, Universalist and other denominations. Through the efforts of Charles A. Brand, editor of the Pilgrim Teacher of Boston, the American National Red Cross has made a special membership arrangement for the benefit of all scholars in the Sunday school. The membership fee has heretofore been $1 a year, which put it out of the reach of most of the members of the Sunday schools, and yet the children are the very ones who should be learning to take an interest in this great humanitarian and patriotic work. By the new arrangement the American National Red Cross will enroll Sunday school classes as classes on the payment of $1, and the Red Cross membership button and the publications of the Red Cross will be sent to the president or secretary of the class or the persons designated to take charge of them for the class.

A Short Verse.

An Englishman named Thomas Thorp died, leaving his fortune to a poor relative on condition that a headstone, with the name of the said Thomas Thorp and a verse of poetry, be erected over the grave. Costing so much a word to chisel letters on the stone, the poor relative ordered that the poetry should be brief. Upon his refusal to approve, on account of their length, the lines

The Gingerbread Tree.

There is a species of palm, growing to a height of from twenty-five to thirty feet, in Egypt, Arabia, Abyssinia and Nubia which produces its fruit in long clusters, each containing from 100 to 200. These fruits are of an irregular form, of a rich yellowish brown color and are beautifully polished. In upper Egypt they form part of the food of the poorer classes of inhabitants, the part eaten being the fibrous, mealy husk, which tastes almost exactly like gingerbread, whence the popular name of gingerbread tree in Egypt. Hyphoene thebaica is the botanical name of this palm.

How It Struck Him.

It was 5 o'clock in the afternoon, in a crowded Brooklyn trolley car, and above the noise arose the wails of a leather lunged baby protesting against everything. After two miles of this din the mother left with her child, when a young man in the front end of the car thus expressed his sentiments:

Gee whiz! I'm glad I'm free!
No wedding bells for me.

The result can be more easily imagined than described.—New York Post

Romance of A Cow Girl.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Frank Clough a young fellow of twenty, carrying a stick over his shoulder to one end of which was slung his baggage in a bandanna handkerchief, entered the town of Three Bridges. He had 50 cents in his pocket, but he had also that which was of far more value than a million such coins, the vigor and elasticity of youth. He was hunting for a job, but if he didn't get one in Three Bridges he could go on to the next settlement.

He needed all his strength and pluck to meet a greater misfortune than the want of money. He passed two men standing in the street, one of whom stared at him with a terrible frown and as Clough passed on exclaimed:

"Kid Cosgrove, by thunder!"

Twenty minutes later the sheriff put a hand on Clough's shoulder and with the muzzle of a revolver close under his nose said:

"I want you, Cosgrove."

A few days later a man named Bodley rode into Pine Cone, fifty miles from Three Bridges, and, entering the Muddy Creek hotel, heard some miners talking about the chase and capture of Kid Cosgrove, horse thief and murderer. The desperado was then in irons in Pine Cone and was to be hanged at once.

"Cosgrove yere, gents?" remarked Bodley incredulously. "What're y' givin' yerselfs? The Kid walked into Three Bridges last week and is to be hanged at 12 o'clock tomorrer."

This led to an investigation which revealed the fact that the real Kid Cosgrove was in Pine Grove and the man in Three Bridges was some one else. It was considered unfortunate for the man in Three Bridges, for there was no mail or wire between the two places, and no one seemed disposed to ride fifty miles that night to save him.

Jennie Pixley, eighteen years old, the daughter of a ranchman, a fearless rider, became aware of the fact that a man was to be hanged in Three Rivers the next day by mistake. When her father and mother and all in the ranch house were in bed Jennie stole out to the barn, mounted her Black Bet and started for Three Rivers. She had not been gone long when the storm that had been gathering broke. The floods came, the lightning glistened, the thunder roared, but through it all, drenched to the skin, rode Jennie, bent on saving a human life. Bridges were swept away, but she swam her horse across the torrents. Darkness put her off the roads, but the lightning put her on again. When morning came she had not made fifteen miles, and both her horse and herself were well nigh exhausted. Still she pushed on. But few houses lined the way. Among what there were she tried to get a fresh mount, but some had no horses, and those who had were using them or dared not trust them to a strange girl in a country where horses were so valuable. Shortly before noon Jennie rode into Three Rivers.

Frank Clough was standing in a cart under a tree, while a parson, summoned for the occasion, was making a long prayer, when he saw a girl on horseback dash in among the throng of gapers standing about him. There followed a hurried talk between her and the sheriff, in the midst of which the girl fainted and fell from her horse. Clough could not hear what was said, but the sheriff wrangled with the crowd, which seemed to be divided on the subject under discussion. Presently the sheriff, drawing his revolver, approached the prisoner, took him by the arm and led him away, some of the crowd approving, others denouncing him for being in league with a horse-thief. He locked up the prisoner till night fell, then told him to go.

Seven years passed. One day Frank Clough, part owner of the Comet mine—he had struck the paying dirt with his own pick and shovel—being in an eastern city with nothing to do, saw the posters of a Wild West show. Having a fancy to see the portrayal of a people among whom he had spent much time, he went to the show. It was all too recently familiar to interest him, and he was about to leave when, with a flourish of trumpets, a "cow girl" rode in on a black horse to perform equestrian feats. The moment Clough's eyes took in the figure in divided skirts, cowboy hat, revolver slung at her right side, a pink silk handkerchief about her neck, her hair flowing, he saw the girl who had ridden fifty miles through a storm to save his life.

The girl took off the handkerchief from about her neck, threw it on the tanbark, dashed past it on horseback and picked it up. This and other feats delighted the audience, but Frank Clough sat impatiently waiting the end of the performance. As soon as it came he was among the Wild Westerners with a view to making the acquaintance of the "cow girl." He had hunted for her, or, rather, for tidings of her, but they had been unsuccessful. Her father had died, and his family had drifted away from Pine Cone. But Clough for years had seen that girlish figure dashing toward his improvised scaffold, and it had never grown dim. After he struck gold he renewed his search and had long ago made up his mind just what he would do in case he ever found her.

He approached her as a stranger. She knew him for months without being told that he was the man for whom she had made her great ride. He followed her till he won her. Then he told her two important facts. She had raved his life, and he was rich.

EVELYN WADSWORTH.

MY HERO.

A Story of a Train Robbery.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

When I was a girl of sixteen I left my home in Little Rock, Ark., to spend several years in the east. I was rather proud of the rough and ready ways of our western men and regaled my girl friends with stories of their bravery. I really didn't know much about brave men except what I had read in novels. Nevertheless I often kept my associates spellbound with my tales of heroism.

I was so fascinated with my stories that on my return home I was on the lookout for some of the drastic scenes I had depicted. I was not disappointed in viewing a scene, but I was disappointed in the bravery of just such a man as I had selected for most of my heroes. I was at the time on a passenger train of the Iron Mountain railroad in the first car, and in front of me was my typical brave. He wore his hair long under the broad brim of his sombrero, and a pair of enormous revolvers were stuck in his belt. He couldn't have been more than twenty-five or twenty-six years old and was very handsome. Somebody told me that he was an express messenger.

It was about 10 o'clock at night that I felt a jog, and the train slowed down. Then the forward door flew open, and a masked man stepped in with a shotgun in his hands, the butt of which he immediately brought to his shoulder, pointing the muzzle at the passengers.

"Sit still!" he yelled in a stentorian voice. "I'll shoot up the car if any one moves!"

He hadn't more than spoken the words before another masked man passed in front of him and demanded the valuables of the first passenger he reached. He relieved several of them before he came to my hero. As soon as he caught sight of the messenger's revolvers resting useless in their holsters he sneered: "You're a purty one, ain't you? I'll take your guns. You needn't trouble yourself to touch 'em."

He snatched one of the pistols out of my adored one's belt, then the other, and rapped the owner over the head with its butt, bringing a stream of blood over his face. Then he took what money the man had and his watch and chain and passed on to the next passenger. When he got to the end of the car he went out, the man at the door still pointing his gun at us. In this position we remained till we heard a shout, and the man at the door went out. Pretty soon after this the conductor came into the car and told us the robbers had gone.

But what an awful fall my hero had made from the pedestal on which I had placed him! He was still wiping the blood off his face when the train moved on, and every one was guying him. We stopped at the next station, and he arose from his seat to get off. I was angered that he had nullified the ideas I had given my eastern friends of western bravery. Just as he was going out of the doorway I cried:

"Coward!"

He turned and looked at me in a way I shall never forget.

"Where do you live?" he asked quietly.

"In Little Rock."

"Maybe I'll call on you in a few days," he said, "maybe not."

He spoke in such a soft, sad voice that I regretted what I had done.

After I got home I kept thinking of my dethroned hero. Before the robbery I thought I should fall in love with him because he looked so handsome and brave. After he spoke to me in that sad, half reproachful way I thought I should fall in love with him because I felt so sorry for him. I couldn't understand why he was going to call on me, but I hoped he would, because I wished to apologize for calling him a coward. We girls are queer things anyway. Three days after my arrival I took up a morning paper and read the following under big black headlines:

> Last night John Wharton, the express messenger who was on the Iron Mountain train that was held up a few days ago, kicked in the door of a little cabin in the mountains, shot two of the men who had done the robbing, killing both of them and captured two others single handed.

What loomed up before me after reading the words was the messenger himself at the car door, looking at me sad and reproachful when I called him coward, and the blood welled up in both cheeks. I had hoped that he would keep his word and call on me, but now I hoped he wouldn't. How could I look him in the face? I thought all day about it and wondered if it was my taunt that had made a brave man of a coward or if he had been a brave man all the while. I failed to see how he could have been with two big revolvers in his belt.

That afternoon he called.

"You were somewhat hard on me," he said, "the other day. Since then I have tried—"

I didn't let him finish, but made straight for him and was so unmaidenly as to throw my arms about his neck. I had no sooner yielded to this impulse than I recollected myself and, releasing him, covered my hot cheeks with my hands. I felt my wrists clasped, my hands were removed, and I saw two kindly eyes looking into mine.

Since then he has been my hero, and I take especial pains that he shall be no other girl's hero.

One day I asked him why he submitted to [illegible] brutal treatment with two revolvers in his belt.

"You little goose," he said. "If I had moved a finger the man at the door would have shot me dead."

FISH TAIL PROPELLER

Latest Marine Device Promises Great Possibilities

Driven by a propelling device which its inventor adapted from the structure and propulsion operation of a fish's tail, the thirteen foot model of a battleship raced through the water of a big tank in a test on top of a Broadway (New York) building recently. The novel jointed propeller, working between twin keels, sent the little boat along with such power that it traversed the ninety-one feet between its bow and the end of the tank in eight seconds. This is at the rate of eight miles an hour.

Most interesting of the prowess displayed by the fish tail propeller was its ability to stop the vessel quickly and gather sternway. In this it far outstripped, the experts present said, anything now possible with screw propellers.

Joseph Turner and Henry Riviere, the inventors, assert that their fish tail propeller will produce a speed at present unequaled.

To Make Church Sound Proof.

The Bedford Presbyterian congregation of Brooklyn, to which the Rev. S. Edward Young of Pittsburg was recently brought after considerable trouble, is going to have a sound proof edifice to worship in, no matter what it costs. This fact was announced from the pulpit, and Dr. Young said an architect had been found who has guaranteed to make the church acoustics so perfect that not a flat wheeled trolley car or the heaviest wagon rumble can be heard by the worshipers.

New York Chauffeurs Wear Veils.

Latest among the fads of Broadway, New York, is the custom of wearing women's veils, which have been adopted by many chauffeurs. The veils, which are of many colors, are substituted for goggles by some chauffeurs, although other drivers of automobiles wear the veils in addition to the goggles.

The report published in a Seattle paper that arrangements are being made by an English exporting firm to erect a million-dollar elevator on the west side of Young's bay, will be good news to all Astorians as it shows that the exporters are getting ready to take advantage of the opportunities that will be offered for shipping grain from this point as soon as the North Bank road is completed as far east as Spokane and thus form a continuous line of road from the wheat fields of the inland empire to the sea. As was announced some days ago, the railway company will begin work in the very early spring placing its track in condition for handling the great volume of heavy traffic that it is cretain to follow the opening of the thru line and the extension of equitable rates on grain to this point. Astoria has for years had strong interests working against her, but it now looks as tho her day had come and before another year rolls around both Hill and Harriman will have their western terminals at this point.

The work accomplished in saving the lives of the thousand and more passengers who were on the steamer Republic when she was in collision a few days ago with the steamer Florida, shows what can be done in instances of that kind when the officers in charge keep their heads and are thus able to control the crews and passengers under their charge. It is true assistance was not long in reaching the disabled craft, but Captain Sealby and his corps of officers are none the less entitled to unstinted praise for the bravery and coolness which they displayed in so trying an emergency.

From the maledictions scattered broad cast in the mire of roadless America by despairing bicyclists fifteen years ago hopes of better things have taken root. So writes C. F. Carter in a recent number of Technical World. No gift of prophecy is now required to foresee at time when these hopes will have so far materialized that a team, if it is a good one, will be able to haul an empty wagon over the gumbo roads of the Mississippi valley in spring, and the public highways of the South will be so well buoyed that light draught automobiles may navigate them in comparative safety. From every part of the country comes the same encouraging news. Sixteen states now have highway commissions that are trying in various ways to supply the greatest need of the nation, which is good roads. At one extreme is New York, which in 1905, voted to expend $50,000,000 in building roads. Under the plan adopted the state will build and maintain 3,332 miles connecting the principal cities, and pay one-half the cost of 4,700 miles of local roads to be built by the counties. At the other extreme is Iowa, the third state in the union in extent of road mileage, where the use of the public highways is so vast that if teams enough could be assembled to do in one day all the traveling done in the state in a year the line would reach once and a half around the earth and which doles out an annual appropriation of $5,000 to defray the expenses of the state college faculty while acting in the capacity of highway commission.

The Landlord's Explanation.

"You charge $2 for that possum?" said the guest who had just partaken of one at the Crossroads hotel.

"That's the bill," said the landlord.

"Why," said the guest, "I could dine at the biggest hotel in the city for half that sum!"

"I know it," replied the landlord "but you ain't at the biggest hotel in the city at this here present time, an' yer case is different. Besides, it took me two nights to ketch that possum an' by bein' up so late I likewise ketched the devil when I come home, an' it's my consideration that ef my time an' feelin's ain't wuth $2 they ain't wuth 2 cents."—Atlanta Constitution.

Fair Play.

A Chicago youth not long ago received the following note from an exfiancee:

> Dear Tom—As you know, I shall marry Mr. Blank during the present month. I shall therefore be glad to have you burn all the little notes I sent you, assuring you of reciprocity with reference to those you sent me.

To this missive the young man had the pleasure of returning this reply:

> Dear Marie—I shall at once comply with your request. And incidentally, as your new fiance also holds a few little notes of mine, I should count it a great favor should you be able to induce him to burn them with the rest.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. TUG CAPTAINS EXONERATED

Did All They Could for Bark Bengal

Seattle, Jan. 27—Cable advices from Juneau state that United States Marine Inspectors Whitney and Newhall have exonerated Captain Erwin Farrar of the tug Hattie Gage and Captain Patrick Hamilton of the tug Kayak of the charge of cowardice made by the captain and crew of the bark Star of Bengal, when the latter craft was wrecked on Coronation island, Alaska, last fall and 111 lives were lost.

The charge was made at the time of the investigation that the captains could have saved all of the lives on the Star of Bengal, provided they had stayed by the wrecked ship instead of deserting the craft and leaving her to her doom.

The Alaskan inspectors believe the crews of the tugs did all that was possible to render aid, which was exceedingly difficult, owing to the gale.

The Star of Bengal was loaded with salmon, and the crews of the fishing station at Coronation island were en route to San Francisco.

"No," he curtly answered. "I spent it for food."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

INCREASE OF DAIRY HERDS

Advice Given by State Dairy Commissioner

"The ever increasing population of our state, due to the rapid influx of homeseekers, is tending to increase the present shortage of dairy cows. Especially clear is this when we consider that the city population is increasing more rapidly than the producing or agricultural population. I will say to every farmer in Oregon that if each one devotes his time to raising cows for the dairy, it will be years before the supply is equal to the demand. Never before has there been such a lucrative return offered for as small an investment."

This is the way to dairy wealth, as pointed out by J. W. Bailey, state dairy and food commissioner, in his report of the work of his office for 1908. He goes on to point out that farmers in the corn belt find much profit in raising beef cattle, in places where feed is expensive, but dairy cows can be brought to producing age with less expense and finally sold for better prices. He pleads with farmers and dairymen to quit the slaughter of calves for veal, as this is bringing the dairy industry to a standstill.

Commissioner Bailey finds a disappointing average of butter fat production from the Oregon cow. He says a record from herds in different sections of the state leads to the conclusion that the average is less than 150 pounds of butter fat in a year. This is just half what a cow should produce he declars, to place herself in the list of profitable dairy cows. According to this estimate of average production, raising to the desired standard would double the annual income of $71,000,000, without increasing the number of cows.

Under production of farm products in which Oregon excells is shown by Mr. Bailey in quoting the carloads of produce shipped into Portland alone from other states. He finds a total of $1,000,000 paid to outside producers. Two hundred cars of bacon were imported, worth $780,000, 15 cars of dressed poultry, valued at $54,160; 15 cars of butter, worth $180,000, and 35 cars of eggs, worth $87,500.

Other interesting portions of Mr. Bailey's report are as follows:

"As near as we can determine, there are about 250,000 dairy cows in our state today. A very large per cent of these are in the western portion of the state. More of them are in small herds than in large. Considerably the larger part of the total supply of milk and cream is furnished by dairymen, or, rather, farmers, who milk 10 cows or less. Dairying, with them, is a side issue. This fact, as much as any other, stands in the way of remedying certain unsatisfactory conditions which exist at present. Briefly stated, these conditions which we are striving to better are under production, the use of inferior dairy cows, poor feeding, carelessness and uncleanliness on the dairy farm.

"The period covered by this report has been characterized by a strict enforcement of the pure food law of the state, and we can now assure the people of Oregon that the wholesale fraud and deception practiced by the food manufacturer a few years ago has been very largely done away with, and we are now getting value received in the products which we buy, and are reasonably sure that those products are what they are represented to be.

"The law requiring the proper labeling of all foods has been our chief aid in bringing about the present satisfactory condition. Prior to the enactment of this law we paid our money for food which looked good to the eye and was well named, but in reality contained little or no nourishment for our bodily needs. These foods may not have been in any way harmful and their sale might not have been checked on the ground that they were unhealthful or injurious. The main point of objection was that they contained no food value. We paid for real food and received immitation food.

"The most common offenses dealt with have been the use of colorings in different foods, the use of preservatives in milk, and the adulteration of milk with water, the uses of preservatives in meat, mixing tallow with lard, the manufacture of acid vinegars, the manufacture and sale of compound jellies made of glucose and starch, and colored with coal tar dyes, the coloring of cake frostings with coal tar dyes, the sale of highly colored catsups containing fillers and preservatives. Occasional violations of this nature are still exposed, but they are by no means as common or as general as they were a few years ago.

"In no other state are the dairy interests better protected from the sale of imitation butter than in Oregon. Every pound of oleomargarine sold is sold as oleomaragerine, and every purchaser of it knows what he is getting. Our laws are so stringent that there is very little of it sold in the state today

"In practically all our prosecutions for the violations of the pure food law we have been sustained in our action by the courts and very few cases have been lost."

CALLS HALT ON ANTI-JAP LAWS

Governor Gillett Sends Legislature Special Message

Sacramento, Cal., Jan 27—In a special message forwarded to the legislature Governor Gillett openly hints that he will veto any anti-Japanese measure passed by the legislature, on the ground that such measures would embarrass the federal government and cause serious friction.

The governor offers the suggestion that the state labor commissioner be instructed to take a census of the Japanese now in California and gather figures showing whether or not their number has increased recently. The message points out that the question of immigration affects the whole nation and that congress should have the exclusive authority to deal with the problem.

Governor Gillett advises the legislatroes to exercise extreame caution in "passing legislation not absolutely necessary for our immediate protection and intended solely to affect the Japanese people, because in so doing we would make a hard task for the federal government."

"Such legislation," the message says, "can only tend to widen the breach between Japan and our country, and cause a feeling of misgiving and distrust to exist.'

LORRAIN KEENE

With "The Lieutenant and the Cowboy." Astoria Theatre, Jan. 31.

The governor then demands that if any legislation is enacted along the lines suggested by certain members it should affect all foreigners alike.

He says there cannot be one law for the subjects of Japan and another for the subjects of Great Britian.

In concluding, the governor says the bills prohibiting all aliens from owning land and from becoming directors in corporations would discourage the investment of foreign capital.

Governor Gillett in private expresses confidence that the anti-Japanese measures will not pass. He says the president is evidently more worried over the situation than he is. He points out that nine Democrats and a few Republican members from San Francisco favor the bills in the senate, but he says there is little chance of the necessary vote of 21 being secured to pass them.

Members of the legislature are receiving communications from all over the state urging rigid laws against Armenians, Mexicans and Portuguese, who, according to the petitions, are as bad as the Japanese.

Assemblyman Nathan Coghlan of San Francisco has introduced a resolution calling on the California delegation at Washington to use its efforts to secure the presence in the Pacific ocean of a fleet equal in size to that of any other power.

MAKE SURVEYS OF THE SOILS

Department Plans Considerable Work in Oregon

Soil surveying parties are to be sent into Coos county this summer by the department of agriculture, for the purpose of acquainting the farmers of that portion of the Oregon coast with the capabilities of the land. This information was embodied in a letter from Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson. Mr. Wilson says he will arrange for soil surveys in the following counties of Oregon as soon as funds are available for the expense; Linn county, on request of the citizens of Harrisburg; Washington county, Clatsop county, Hood river and Umatilla. Soil surveys include analysis of the various soils in a given district, for the purpose to discovering just what certain sections are best adapted for. The government has done a good deal of soil surveying in different parts of the country, mostly east of the Rocky mountains, and the bulletins issued by the bureau of soils are eagerly read by farmers in the surveyed sections. Demands for such surveys are said to be increasing in the northwest, and the government will take cognizance of such demands as soon as possible, according to Secretary Wilson.

"THE LIEUTENANT AND THE COWBOY."

If the people of Astoria appreciate a genuinely good performance, a really high-grade dramatic production, they will not fail to attend in large numbers next Sunday night, when Messrs. Pelton & Smutzer present a splendid company in a new and successful military drama of the west, entitled "Tho Lieutenant and the Cowboy" for which a complete scenic equipment is carried for each of the three acts. The play is unquestionably one of the most intensely interesting of recent years, giving as it does not only a true and realistic story of life in a western fort, but a beautiful romance and quite a bit of wholesome humor as well. It is a play long to be remembered with a great dael of pleasure.

The [illegible]

How di[illegible] h or fiction from [illegible] ward recitals [illegible] is well shown in a communication sent to one of our foreign exchanges by a man who lays claim to long experience in breeding game birds. He stated in all seriousness that only two of his pheasant hens had hatched out seventeen of the [illegible] eggs placed under each one [illegible]. "It is a curious fact," he continues, "that both hatched off on the same day and each hen immediately killed thirteen out of her seventeen live chicks by pecking their brains and laid them in a row in front of her, each exactly in the same way. I shall be glad to know whether such a singular case has ever been noted before."

So shall I; but, at any rate, in this case at least, thirteen was an unlucky number for both the chicks and their owners.—Forest and Stream.

Representatives of Farmers Union Will Visit Astoria

Representatives of the Pacific Farmers' Union, an organization composed of 140 local farmers' organizations of the Inland Empire, spent yesterday in Portland viewing sites available for warehouses and docks. The object of the organization, according to the representatives is to market their cereal direct and do away with the middlemen's profits.

The delegation, which consist of L. C. Crow, state president of the Pacific Farmers' Union; James Reid, chairman of the state executive committe of the union; E. K. Finley, president of the local organization of farmers at Pullman, Wash., and A. A. Elmore, state organizer for the states of Idaho and Washingon, left last night for Tacoma and Seattle. Later the delegation will visit Astoria and Vancouver.

The chamber of commerce has received a letter from Milton Whitney of the bureau of soils of the department of agriculture, at Washington, saying that the application which had been made by the chamber on November 1 last for a survey of the soils of Clatsop county is now having attention. "But owing to the number of requests of a similar nature from all over the United States it seems quite improbable, "Mr. Whitney continues, "that the bureau will be able to reach Oregon with this work during the present year. The application for Clatsop county will be filed and given consideration in making assignements for soil surveys."

Tillamook and Astoria high school debating teams will have a contest this evening at the Astoria theatre and it will surely be an interesting event and attended by a large crowd. The subject for discussion will be Municipal Ownership, of which the local team has the affirmative, and the two trios of contestants are primed with facts and figures in support of their side of the argument and the judges will be largely influenced by the personal addresses as well as the arguments presented. The subject has been so widely discussed during the past few years that it is almost impossible for everyone to have had and expressed an opinion on the subject, favorable in some instances and again otherwise. These debates are recognized by the school directors and the teachers as having a wide influence on the students generally in directing their thoughts in practical ways and for this reason alone should receive the encouragement of the general public.

The towboat No Wonder and the river steamer T. J. Potter came into collision yesterday afternoon near the mouth of the Willamette, resulting in the sinking of the No Wonder. The No Wonder had in tow a raft of boomsticks and upon approaching the Potter, Captain Fred Stimson says, gave two blasts from the steam whistle, to which no answer came from the approaching steamboat. The weather was thick, there being considerable fog, and it is believed by Captain Stimson that the pilot of the Potter failed to make out the other boat until too late to avoid a collision. The boats crashed together, the No Wonder having her hull crushed in forward, and immedjately began to fill. Her pilot headed for shore and succeeded in running the nose of the boat up on the sloping bank, where she stuck fast. The crew of 13 went ashore, while the after end of the boat, including the wheel, sank out of sight.
